Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 9 June 1995]: It is for individual health boards to decide on the level of infertility services to purchase. Information on the number of patients receiving or waiting on infertility treatment is not available centrally.

NHS (Private Sector Involvement)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 12 March, Official Report, column 702, if he will make a statement on the nature of the NHS projects which are being considered for the involvement of the private sector. [23405]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 9 May 1995]: All current proposals for capital projects in the NHS in Scotland have been considered, as opportunities under the private finance initiative. The NHS trusts managing the schemes in progress to build new hospital facilities in Edinburgh and Lanarkshire are seeking private sector partners to design, build and finance the new facilities and also to operate a range of non-clinical services within the new hospitals.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of grants of regional selective assistance made to Scottish companies and the number of companies involved for each financial year since 1979–80. [25346]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 May 1995]: The available information relates to payments to companies with projects to Scotland. For earlier years, this is published in the Scottish economic bulletin, copies of which are available in the Library. Expenditure in 1994–95 amounted to £77.1 million.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

MINIS

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to publish his Department's annual MINIS return. [28342]

Mr. Heseltine: The MINIS 95 returns for the Department, which this year include the Department's efficiency plan, were published on 12 June 1995. A set has been placed in the Library of the House.

Copyright Directive

Sir Tom Arnold: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to implement in United Kingdom law the directive on the term of protection of copyright and certain related rights, 93/98/EEC, by 1 July. [27862]

Mr. Ian Taylor: A draft of implementing legislation has been circulated to interested parties for comment. The consultation period ends on 26 June. This means that we will not be able to bring the legislation into force by 1 July as we had intended, but our aim is to submit the legislation to Parliament as soon as possible after the end of the consultation period.

We shall be liaising with interested parties.

Gas Licences

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 66, if he will identify the areas covered in the draft material sent on 27 January and the reasons for sending this material to Amerada Hess Gas Ltd. and no other company. [28087]

Mr. Eggar: The draft licence material covered technical matters relating to gas shippers. It did not relate to gas suppliers or consumer issues. The material was sent to Amerada Hess Gas Ltd. because the company was judged to have the appropriate expertise to assist DTI at that stage.

Official Receivers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if official receivers will be required to enter into contracts with private sector providers; if they will be personally liable as part of these contacts; and if they will be formally indemnified against the liability to the provider and for the acts or omissions of the provider. [27683]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Official receivers will be the contracting parties to any contract for the discharge of their functions. As such they would be liable under the terms of such contracts and, pursuant to the provisions of section 72 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, for the proper discharge of those functions. Officials receivers will therefore need to be satisfied that any such liabilities are adequately provided for.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the local office information system computer project will be available for the private sector contractors in the Insolvency Service to use. [27682]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Yes.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what procedures will be put in place to guarantee a high quality level of service from the contracted out operations of the Insolvency Service. [27681]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The final specification and contract will clearly state the standards of service expected from contractors. Contract monitoring by official receivers offices will ensure these standards are met and maintained.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to provide training to Insolvency Service employees unused to contract management. [27685]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Planning to provide training to the Insolvency Service employees in aspects of contract management is currently under way. All staff likely to be involved in contract management will receive relevant training prior to the contracting out.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will consult Parliament before contracting out further services of the Insolvency Service, other than those that are already planned to be contracted out. [27677]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There is no intention to contract out any additional functions of the official receiver other than those currently being considered.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what procedures will exist to ensure that the private sector will (a) operate impartially and (b) respect confidentiality, when Insolvency Service operations are contracted out to the private sector. [27679]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The final specification and contract will clearly state the standards of performance, including impartiality and confidentiality, expected from contractors. Contract monitoring by official receivers' offices will ensure these standards are met and maintained.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much it will cost annually to monitor the contracts of providers in the Insolvency Service. [27686]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: It is still too early in the process to determine any costs of contracting out. The cost of monitoring any contracts entered into with private sector providers will be dependent on the total number of contracts let.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to ensure that an Insolvency Service investigation will not be prejudiced by part of the investigation being dealt with in the private sector and the other part being handled in the public sector. [27678]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The separation of the preliminary investigation and any further investigation currently works effectively in many official receivers' offices by increasing the efficiency of dealing with targeted cases in need of further investigation. Contract management and monitoring of private sector providers by official receivers' offices will ensure that contracting out will not have any detrimental effect on the investigation procedure.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to ensure that those people who will carry out the duties of the contracted-out services of the Insolvency Service will be obliged to hold the same qualifications as are required now of Insolvency Service employees. [27676]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The requirement scoping document which will be made available to selected potential bidders will set out levels of experience and competencies of staff that will be required by private sector providers. Any contractor must satisfy these requirements.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response he has made to the suggestion of the official receivers that insolvency practitioners could be appointed either as a liquidator or trustee, with the payment of fees guaranteed. [27688]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: This option was considered by Stoy Hayward whose report concluded that it would expose far less of the official receivers' work to competition from the private sector and, if insolvencies were once again to rise, would not prevent the official receivers' specialist investigative resources from being increasingly consumed in the initial stages of casework.

Contracting Out

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to publish the detailed specification of the contracting-out process. [27687]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The draft specification will be made available to selected potential bidders on 15 June 1995.

Private Insolvency Practitioners

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the National Audit Office's report in respect of the levels of rejection of private sector insolvency practitioners' reports. [27680]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There is a significant proportion of cases where elements of unfit conduct have been identified by insolvency practitioners as well as by official receivers, but in relation to which, taking into account all the aspects of the insolvency, it is not in the public interest to institute proceedings under section 6 of the Company

Directors Disqualification Act 1986. There has been a discernible improvement in reporting by insolvency practitioners both in respect of completeness and timeliness and as a result of which the percentage not providing a basis for consideration of proceedings has fallen from 81 per cent. reported by the National Audit Office in October 1993 to 69 per cent. in 1994–95.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Arts Funding

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what assistance his Department is giving towards the restoration of the Grand theatre in Doncaster; and if he will make a statement; [27389]

(2) what assistance his Department is giving for the conversion of the Square chapel at Halifax west Yorkshire to a recital room; and if he will make a statement; [27398]

(3) what assistance his Department is giving to the creation of a theatre in the Odeon cinema at Scarborough; and if he will make a statement; [27399]

Mr. Dorrell: English Heritage has contributed £342,228 towards the cost of eligible repairs to the Square chapel, Halifax. The Arts Council announced last month an award of £1.4 million from the national lottery to the Stephen Joseph theatre, which is developing the Odeon cinema, Scarborough. I understand that plans for the development of the Grand theatre, Doncaster, are still at an early stage.

Both the Square chapel and the Stephen Joseph theatre receive funding for their artistic programmes from the Yorkshire and Humberside arts board.

Channel 4

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will estimate the expected deficit or surplus of Channel 4 in the years 1990 to 2000. [26444]

Mr. Dorrell: Forward financial planning is a matter for the Channel 4 television corporation. Figures for the period 1990–94 are contained within the annual reports published by the Independent Television Commission, for 1990–1992, and Channel 4, for 1993–1994. The figures are:

Date	£ million
April–December 1990	1.1 surplus
January–December 1991	0.2 surplus
January–December 1992	6.6 deficit

From January 1993, when Channel 4 became a self-governing statutory corporation, its retained profit figures, after taxation and payments of excess qualifying revenue to the Independent Television Commission, were:

Date	£ million
January–December 1993	1.3 retained profit
January–December 1994	21.9 retained profit

UNIDROIT Convention

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action he is taking in respect of the draft UNIDROIT convention on the international return of stolen or illegally exported cultural objects; who will be attending from the United Kingdom the June conference to be held in Rome on this subject; what support his Department is giving; and if he will make a statement. [27396]

Mr. Dorrell: The UK will be represented at the conference in Rome by officials from the Department of National Heritage and the Treasury Solicitor's Department. There is still work to be done on the draft UNIDROIT convention. However, the objectives behind the draft are laudable; and we will continue to work constructively with other countries participating in the discussions, to achieve a convention that could be a mutually acceptable compromise to as many states, both importing and exporting, as possible.

National Lottery

Mr Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will ensure that the odds of winning the national lottery are printed on the lottery ticket. [27794]

Mr. Dorrell: This is an operational matter for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

PRIME MINISTER

Competitiveness

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister whether the proposals put forward by the President of the Board of Trade of intervention by Her Majesty's Government to improve the non-price competitiveness of British industry at home and overseas are intended to restore the balance between price and non-price competitiveness; and if he will publish his assessment of the likely cost of such intervention on (a) output and (b) employment in (i) 1996 and (ii) 1997. [27494]

The Prime Minister: The measures brought forward in the Government's recent White Paper on competitiveness are designed to improve the overall competitiveness of United Kingdom business and so help raise output and employment.

Bosnia

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his speech on 31 May, Official Report, column 1001, how many Ukrainian United Nations peacekeeping soldiers were taken hostage by the Bosnian Government forces on 28 May; how long they were held; when and where they were released; what sanctions or threats were made against the Bosnian Government to secure their release; and on how many other occasions since 1992 UN forces have been taken hostage by the Bosnian Government side. [28112]

The Prime Minister: We understand that six Ukrainian UN personnel were detained by Bosnian Government forces in Gorazde on 28 may. They were released later the same day and returned to their camp. We are not aware of any other occasion when the Bosnian Government took UN peacekeepers hostage.

We condemn unreservedly all acts of hostage taking by all parties. The Serbs must release the hostages that they hold immediately and unconditionally co-operate with the UN in carrying out its mandate.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister on what dates he received extracts for comment from Sir Richard Scott's draft report; on what date comments were submitted to Sir Richard; and what requests have been made by his Department for an extension of the period within which comments should have been made. [27554]

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister which Ministers have received a draft, or draft extract, of Lord Justice Scott's inquiry report into the sale of arms to Iraq affair. [27590]

The Prime Minister: The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses. In the case of draft extracts in particular, the inquiry has asked that these be treated in the strictest confidence.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the criteria for determining whether the legal costs arising from the Scott inquiry of (a) Ministers, (b) ex-Ministers and (c) senior civil servants, should be covered by the Government; and if he will list all possible costs incurred or committed; and if he will make a statement. [28139]

The Prime Minister: Legal advice is available to witnesses to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry in each of the three categories listed where it is requested by the individual concerned and where their departmental legal adviser or the Treasury solicitor's department agrees that the request for the provision of such advice is reasonable. The total cost to public funds of providing legal services to witnesses to date is approximately £568,000. This figure includes the costs of legal services provided by the Treasury solicitor's department and by external lawyers. Some legal advice has also been provided by departmental lawyers as part of their normal duties. The cost of this advice is not quantifiable.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Prime Minister (1) which civil servants, Government advisers or ministerial advisers, past or present, have sought legal advice from solicitors or barristers in respect of draft conclusions reached by the Scott inquiry; what is the estimated cost of such legal expenses to public funds; and if he will make a statement; [27882]

(2) which Ministers, past or present, have sought legal advice from solicitors or barristers in respect of draft conclusions reached by the Scott inquiry; what is the estimate cost of such legal expenses to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [27781]

The Prime Minister [holding answers 9 June 1995]: Details of the costs of legal advice to witnesses to the Scott inquiry are not held centrally nor is the cost of advice in respect of draft conclusions identified separately from the cost of other advice. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. It would not right to identify the nature of the advice given to particular individuals. This is a matter of confidence between them and their legal advisers.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister if he intends to establish an inquiry into the leak to the BBC of a provisional draft of the report by Mr. Justice Scott. [27894]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 June 1995]: Extracts of the draft report were sent by Sir Richard Scott to a number of people, some of whom are outside Government. Inquiries have been undertaken to establish whether there is any prima facie evidence that there has been an unauthorised disclosure of the information concerned from within Government. On the basis of these inquiries, there is no reason to suppose that the leak came from within Government.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to include the future of British fishing stocks in the agenda for the intergovernmental conference in 1996; and if he will make a statement. [27244]

The Prime Minister: Intergovernmental conferences deal with treaty change rather than adjustment of the content of individual policies. We will of course continue to work for improvements in the operation of the appropriate fora.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received from his Russian and United States counterparts on the progress made by the Gore-Chernomyrdin Commission on the Iranian nuclear programme and nuclear exports to Iran. [27649]

Mr. David Davis: The Gore-Chernomyrdin Commission has not met since the US-Russian summit in May, but is due to do so before the end of June. Progress has already been made on the question of nuclear exports to Iran with President Yeltsin's commitment at the Moscow summit not to transfer gas centrifuge equipment to the Iranians.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the call by Colonel Gaddafi of Libya on 16 May that the Arab states should collaborate on the production of nuclear weapons. [27653]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. Libya, like most other Arab states, is a member of the non-proliferation treaty and we expect her to comply fully with her obligations not to acquire nuclear weapons.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of the letter, dated 9 May, from the permanent representative of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to the president of the non-proliferation treaty review and extension conference, NPT/Conf. 1995/30, claiming a special status for North Korea within the non-proliferation treaty; and if the United Kingdom within the non-proliferation treaty; and if the United Kingdom has discussed the implications of the letter with the other two depositary states for the treaty. [27655]

Mr. David Davis: We have not discussed the North Korean letter with the other depositary states: we expect all states parties to the non-proliferation treaty to comply fully with their obligations. We have welcomed the framework agreement between the US and DPRK and we hope this will lead to a resolution of the North Korean nuclear issue.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the proposals by Japan to create a nuclear co-operation organisation for states in Asia along the lines of the European Union's Euratom agency. [27654]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We know of no Japanese Government proposals for a nuclear co-operation organisation in Asia on the lines of Euratom. However, there is considerable discussion at a non-government level on increasing nuclear co-operation in the east Asian and south-east Asian area, with particular emphasis on co-operation in the area of research, safety and operating standards. We welcome any moves by Japanese industry or Government to ensure that nuclear energy development in east Asia take place in a sound, safe and secure manner.

Social Development

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the international commitments entered into by Her Majesty's Government through the signing by a Foreign Office Minister of the declaration agreed by participating states at the United Nations world summit for social development in Copenhagen in March. [27805]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The declaration and programme of action of the world summit for social development were adopted by the consensus. No legal commitment was entered into. The advance unedited texts of the declaration and programme of action have been placed in the Library of the House. When the final text issues from the United Nations they will be placed in the Library.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the agreement between the European Union and the Ukraine on the financing of the closedown of the Chernobyl reactors. [27887]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At the EU and G7 summits in 1994, substantial sums were committed to an action plan for Ukraine's energy sector, including the closure of Chernobyl. Following a visit to Ukraine in April by a senior delegation from the EU and the G7, President Kuchma undertook to close the remaining Chernobyl reactors by 2000, which we warmly welcome. Discussions are continuing with the Ukrainians to draw up a final plan on closure. The EU, the G7 and international financial institutions will continue to work closely with Ukraine to achieve this aim as well as the wider objectives of the action plan.

World Service

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the current arrangements for broadcasts by the World Service to Iran and Iraq. [27459]

Mr. Baldry: The World Service broadcasts to Iran in Persian for 22 hours a week. The emphasis is on news and current affairs, but programmes covering the arts, science, economics, medicine, culture and entertainment also form part of the output.

The Arabic service is on the air for 12 hours and 15 minutes every day. All broadcasts are beamed to Iraq. As the World Service's biggest foreign language service, it broadcasts a wide range of programmes, with news and current affairs as the backbone.

English language broadcasts are beamed to Iran for 18 hours a day and to Iraq for twenty-one and a half hours a day. English teaching programmes are also broadcast, either as part of the Persian and Arabic services, or as separate transmissions.

World Service output reaches Iran and Iraq mainly through shortwave transmissions from relay stations at Masirah in Oman, Cyprus and from the UK. Some medium-wave transmissions from Masirah also reach the area. Arabic service transmissions have been jammed within Iraq in the past, but no jamming is taking place at present.

Caribbean

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current expenditure incurred by Her Majesty's Government in the dependent territories in the Caribbean. [27982]

Mr. Baldry: The total expenditure by Her Majesty's Government on the five Caribbean dependent territories for the financial year 1994–95 is estimated to be £20.5 million.

Eastern Europe

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the value of British investment for each of the last five years into (a) Hungary, (b) Poland, (c) the Czech Republic, (d) Slovakia, (e) Romania and (f) Bulgaria and also publish corresponding figures for German, French, Italian and Dutch investment into those countries. [26742]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The value of British direct investment for the five years 1989 to 1993, the latest available, is as follows:

Stock of UK direct investment (book value, £ million)

	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993
Poland	0	4	6	16	18
Hungary	0	0	26	84	68
Czech Republic / Slovak Republic	0	0	1	13	8
Romania	0	0	0	2	11
Bulgaria	0	0	1	6	7

Source: Central Statistical Office

The value of other countries' investment into the region is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Turkey

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will urge the Government of Turkey to allow the Armenian Orthodox and Greek Orthodox churches in Turkey to re-open their theological seminaries. [26883]

Mr. David Davis: Decisions on the operations of the specific religious or educational institutions are a matter for the Turkish authorities. We have raised with the Turkish Government our concerns on the rights of religious and other minorities in Turkey including on the position of the Armenian Orthodox and Greek Orthodox churches.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates he or other Ministers or former Ministers in his Department received extracts for comment from Sir Richard Scott's draft report; on what date comments were submitted to Sir Richard; and what requests have been made for an extension of the period within which comments should have been made. [27591]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses. In the case of draft extracts in particular, the inquiry has asked that these be treated in the strictest confidence.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if a young person is unable to remain within the United Kingdom without the requisite entry clearance whilst adoption formalities are being pursued. [27694]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I have been asked to reply.

A child coming to the United Kingdom for adoption would on arrival normally be expected to be in possession of an entry clearance issued for the purpose. If my hon. Friend has in mind a particular case where an entry clearance has not been issued, I should be happy to advise him further.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Dumping at Sea

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether Her Majesty's Government are required to provide information to (a) the European Commission, (b) the London dumping convention and (c) the Oslo convention the past disposal at sea in the north Atlantic and Irish sea by the United Kingdom of surplus chemical weapon munitions, redundant explosives or other military origin toxic materials. [26701]

Mr. Jack: There are no requirements to report any information on disposal at sea to the European Commission. The reporting requirements of the London and Oslo conventions do not extend to military wastes which are covered by sovereign immunity. However, the UK no longer disposes of such wastes at sea.

Dogs

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many dogs were exported from the United Kingdom to non-EU countries in the last three years; and what was their country of origin. [27107]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is not centrally available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is being undertaken on the application of sludge to farm land. [26940]

Mr. Jack: My Department is spending about £0.7 million in 1995–96 on six research projects concerning sewage sludge applications to farm land. The project titles, contractors and estimated costs for 1995–96 are as follows:

Effects of sewage sludge on agricultural productivity and soil fertility.

This project is funded Jointly with the Department of the Environment, the Welsh Office and the United Kingdom Water Industry Research Limited. The Scottish Office is funding complementary work in relation to this project.

Contractor: ADAS, IACR Rothamsted and WRc

1995–96 costs: £393,000 (MAFF contribution £94,000).

Accumulation of Potentially Toxic Elements by livestock grazing sludge grassland.

Contractor: Chalcombe Agricultural Resource.

1995–96 costs: £169.000.

Assessment of the availability of heavy metals and their effects on soil microbiology.

Contractor: IACR Rothamsted

1995–96 costs: £145.000.

The vulnerability of soils to pollution by heavy metals.

Contractor: Reading University

1995–96 costs £98,000.

Effects of heavy metals from sewage sludge on the growth and yield of legumes.

Contractor: ADAS

1995–96 costs: £97,000.

Effects of inorganic metal salt additions to agricultural soils on soil microbial activity and long-term fertility.

1995–96 costs: £28,000.

In addition, the Scottish Office is spending £0.6 million in 1995–96 on research at the Macaulay Land Use Research Institute and the Scottish agricultural college and the Department of the Environment has an on-going £0.25 million per year research programme on sewage sludge utilisation.

Pesticides

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those nations which are members of the European Economic Community which impose more stringent regulations than those adopted by the United Kingdom on the application of pesticides or herbicides in agriculture and horticulture, in each case specifying the prohibitions or standards they apply additional to those of (i) the European Community and (ii) the United Kingdom. [27314]

Mrs Browning: The UK's regulatory system for pesticides, including herbicides, has the objective of protecting people and the environment while ensuring that pesticides are available to those who really need them. As the harmonised Community regime comes into effect, all member states will increasingly work to the same rules. Differences in decisions taken will then be attributable solely to differences in characteristics such as climate and farming practice.

Fish Quotas

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his ministerial counterpart in the Republic of Ireland about a permanent agreement on fish quota swaps; and if he will make a statement. [27151]

Mr. Jack: I have had no discussions with my opposite number in the Republic of Ireland about a permanent agreement on fish quota swaps. A permanent agreement would risk undermining the principle of relative stability. Agreement on fish quota swaps is reached, however, on a year-by-year basis in the light of prevailing fishing opportunities.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the organisations and individuals who have produced consultative documents to the proposed rural White Paper. [27224]

Mrs. Browning: My right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for the Environment have received written representations from 328 organisations and 53 individuals. A list of the organisations which had submitted representations by 20 February was deposited in the Library of the House on 22 February. I am today placing in the Library of the House an updated list of all organisations and individuals who have made written submissions. Copies of these submissions, except where confidentiality has been requested, are available for inspection in the Ministry's main departmental library.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all products on sale in the United Kingdom controlled under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992. [27203]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

The Secretary of State for the Environment has not issued any consents under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 for products consisting of or containing genetically modified organisms for placing on the market in Great Britain. The information relating to Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

The Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 together implement Council directive 90/220/EEC on the deliberate release into the environment of genetically modified organisms. In accordance with this directive, the products which have been approved for sale in the European Community are a vaccine to control Aujeszky's disease in pigs, a vaccine to control rabies in foxes and seeds of herbicide-tolerant tobacco.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Science and Technology

31. Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made in the past six months in implementing the proposals in the science and technology White Paper. [26063]

Mr. David Hunt: Excellent progress has been made, particularly in building improved partnerships between government and industry to enhance our research and development record.

32. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about the technology foresight programme. [26064]

Mr. Horam: The foresight programme is a resounding success. The Government are grateful for the voluntary efforts of Foresight panels. We need to follow up vigorously on foresight priorities.

Civil Service

35. Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to introduce and develop a code of conduct for civil servants. [26067]

Mr. David Hunt: I intend to introduce the civil service code after due consultation and consideration.

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to ensure that the civil service continues to be seen to be above party politics. [26066]

Mr. David Hunt: The Government will introduce a new civil service code summarising the values, including political impartiality, which civil servants are expected to hold.

Internet

36. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to encourage more Government Departments to make more information available on Internet. [26068]

Mr. Horam: Staff at CCTA, the Government Centre for Information Systems, are working with Departments to increase the breadth and depth of information available over the Internet. Already, more than 40 Departments and agencies have information accessible via the CCTA Government Information Service, and there are, on average, more than 80,000 requests for information each week.

Civil Service College

37. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what opportunities he has identified for the Civil Service College to co-operate with similar institutions overseas. [26069]

Mr. Horam: I mention the Civil Service College's services to overseas ministers and officials whenever appropriate. The college also makes direct contact and is co-operating with a number of similar institutions overseas.

Charter Mark

Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has to increase public awareness of the charter mark scheme. [26062]

Mr. Horam: Charter mark is going from strength to strength. Over 3,000 members of the public have been involved in this year's scheme by nominating organisations they think deserve an award. We are delighted with this response and will give people the opportunity to nominate services again next year.

Access to Information

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what new action he is taking to increase public access to information. [26057]

Mr. David Hunt: We are implementing the proposals contained in the White Paper on open government.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 56, on concessional loans agreements with Indonesia, what projects have been identified for funding under the concessional loan agreements which were signed in April 1993 and April 1994; and what progress has been made towards concluding agreements with the Government of Indonesia in respect of each of those projects. [28182]

Mr. Baldry: The current position on projects funded from the concessional loan arrangements signed in 1993 and 1994 is as follows:

PROJECTS IDENTIFIED FOR FUNDING UNDER CONCESSIONAL LOAN ARRANGEMENT 1993

Samarinda combined cycle power plant

The agreement for the power station was concluded in March 1995 and for the transmission line in May 1995.

Piston engines research laboratory

The soft loan arrangement is being finalised and an agreement with the Government of Indonesia is expected within the next few weeks.

PROJECTS IDENTIFIED FOR FUNDING UNDER CONCESSIONAL LOAN ARRANGEMENT 1994

Cikampek to Cirebon railway Double Tracking

An offer of aid was made to the Government of Indonesia on 23 May 1995 and their reply is awaited.

Science and Technology Equipment for Java Universities

Contract negotiations are in progress between the UK supplier and the Indonesians

Navigational Aids

The results of the appraisal were presented to the Government of Indonesia in April 1995. Their comments are awaited.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 58, if he will list the locations in Indonesia, at sea and on land, at which the lighthouses, light-beacons and lightbouys supplied under the navigational aids project have been installed. [28184]

Mr. Baldry: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his letter of 31 May relating to his answer to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) of 6 December 1994, Official Report, columns 118–20, if (a) full and (b) formal appraisals were carried out in respect of each of the aid projects cited; and by whom each was undertaken. [28192]

Mr. Baldry: Appropriate appraisals were carried out in all cases. Details of these appraisals are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Ms Emma Humphreys

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to refer back to the Court of Appeal the case of Emma Humphreys who was convicted in 1986 of murder; at what Her Majesty's prison she is currently being held; and if he will make a statement. [27415]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Ms Humphreys has been granted leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal. I understand that the case has been listed for hearing on 29 June. She is currently held at Holloway prison.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measurable benefit has been achieved by the operation of the fast-track appeals procedure for safe third country asylum cases since July 1993; at what financial cost; and if he will make a statement. [27704]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information from the first quarter of 1995 indicates that the period between receipt of the appeal and promulgation of the determination for without foundation appeals—which include fast-track appeals—was on average about a third of that for substantive appeals. Costs cannot be attributed separately for fast-track appeals.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been removed to Belgium on safe third country grounds since 26 July 1993; and how many of those so removed have been returned to the United kingdom by the Belgian authorities. [27705]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: One hundred people who had been refused asylum in the United Kingdom on safe third country grounds have been removed to Belgium since 26 July 1993. Of these, eight have been returned to the United Kingdom.

ENVIRONMENT

Hampstead Heath

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of capital expenditure on Hampstead heath (a) between 1981–82 and 1985–86 and (b) when it was under the control of the London residuary body; and what has been the level of capital expenditure since it became the responsibility of the City of London. [27320]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: This information is not collected by the Department.

Air Pollution

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue bulletins to the public on air quality when the threshold of 50 parts per billion of ozone is exceeded over an eight-hour period; and if he will make a statement. [27393]

Mr. Atkins: Up-to-date information on ozone levels is available to the public at all times on the Government's freephone 0800 556677, on Cefax page 404, and on Teletext page 106. Reports and forecasts are sent twice daily to broadcast and print media.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has commissioned into the economic impact of air pollution on agriculture, forestry and materials. [27852]

Mr. Atkins: The UK devotes of the order of £1.5 million to the determination of critical loads—maximum pollutant loading before the onset of damage—for various terrestrial ecosystems such as crops, vegetation and forests. Work has already been commissioned on the effects of acidifying pollutants on forests, soils and natural vegetation. The mapping of critical loads, and exceedances of them, across the UK allows the extent of environmental damage to be assessed, and the national materials exposure programme, which has been running continuously for the last eight years, has allowed determination of the rate of deterioration of various materials exposed to acidifying air pollutants. In addition, ozone damage to crop has been quantified as part of a programme of UK-led experiments within the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe's convention on the long-range transport of air pollutants. A new three-year research programme has also been commissioned in order to quantify the current and future effects and costs of damage to materials caused by ground-level ozone.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has received on the potential economic costs of damage to materials in the UK from tropospheric ozone. [27851]

Mr. Atkins: In 1994, my Department commissioned a report to assess the potential economic costs of damage to materials by ozone. This scaled US estimates from the late 1960s, and provided a range of costs for the UK of £170 million—£345 million in current terms for damage to all stock at risk and antiozonant protection. I am pleased to announce that, following this report, I have commissioned a three-year research programme which will quantify the current and potential future extent and costs of damage to materials from atmospheric ozone.

Hedgerows

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action his Department is going to take in respect of the hedgerow removal at (a) Stamford bridge, grid reference SE 663529, (b) Kilburn, north Yorkshire, grid reference SE 507805 and (c) Balne crossroads, grid reference SE 567197; what assessment he has made of whether the removal of these hedgerows is in contradiction of his countryside stewardship scheme and other initiatives; and if he will make a statement. [27397]

Mr. Atkins: I will write to the hon. Member.

Repossessions

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of repossessions which occurred (a) in Hornsey and Wood Green (b) Haringey, (c) Greater London and (d) England and Wales in each of the last 10 years. [27661]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information requested is not available centrally.

Berkshire

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will identify the geographical characteristics of Berkshire which justify its division into six unitary authorities. [27853]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Geography is among the factors considered in the Local Government Commission's final report for Berkshire which recommended a structure of five unitary authorities, based on existing districts but including a merger of Bracknell Forest and Windsor and Maidenhead. My right hon. Friend accepted the commission's reasons and recommendations for an all-unitary structure but rejected the proposed merger for the reasons given in his statement and written answers of 21 March, Official Report, columns 123 and 145.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he will compensate the six new unitary authorities in Berkshire for the extra costs incurred by entering into separate contracts for highway maintenance, electrical engineering and highway and planning services. [27854]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The effect of the regulations that we have made is that contracts of an abolished authority will normally pass to its successor authorities on reorganisation. Authorities may negotiate different contractual arrangements if they wish: presumably, they would do so only if they judged that making the change would improve cost-effectiveness.

Urban Development Corporations

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has made to other Government Departments within the last year regarding urban development corporations to ensure their efficiency and cost-effectiveness. [27790]

Sir Paul Beresford: None.

Defective Housing

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the names, style and variety of precast concrete materials used in the construction of public sector housing; and which types were deemed to be faulty and as such qualified for financial compensation. [28154]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Precast concrete has been used for a wide variety of purposes in public sector housing since the early 1900s; a definitive list is not available. The following types of properties have been designated in England by the Secretary of State under part XVI if the Housing Act 1985:

Type	Main construction element	Qualifying defect
Airey	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Boot	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Boswell	In Situ concrete	C
Cornish Unit	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Dorran	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Dyke	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Gregory	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Myton	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Newland	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Orlit	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Parkinson	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Reema Hollow Panel	Precast reinforced concrete	A

Type	Main construction element	Qualifying defect
Schindler/Hawksley SGS	In Situ concrete	A
Smith	Precast concrete	B
Stent	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Stonecrete	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Tarran	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Underdown	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Unity/Butterley	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Waller	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Wates	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Wessex	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Winget	Precast reinforced concrete	A
Woolaway	Precast reinforced concrete	A

Qualifying defect:

A: Ineffective protection of the embedded steel in the reinforced concrete loadbearing parts of the buildings.

B: In effective protection of the embedded steel handling reinforcement in the concrete panels forming part of the loadbearing walls.

C: (a) Aggregate containing excessive quantities of unburnt coal in concrete forming the walls, floors or foundations of the dwelling; or

(b) ineffective protection of the embedded steel in any precast reinforced concrete parts of the dwelling.

Local Government Finance

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his decision on the final caps for the nine local authorities which challenged their cap; and if he will make a statement. [28539]

Mr. Gummer: I have laid before the House a draft order, under section 57 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992, setting out our decisions on the final caps for Devon, Gloucestershire, Shropshire and Somerset county councils, Barnsley, Newcastle and Sheffield metropolitan district councils, Norwich city council and Lincolnshire police authority.

We have considered very carefully all the available relevant information, including the case made by the authorities in support of a higher cap, before taking our decisions. We have decided to increase the proposed caps for Somerset and Lincolnshire police by £2.6 million and £1.82 million respectively, to allow the budgets set by the authorities to remain unaltered; and to increase Barnsley's cap by £2 million, £1.09 million less than requested by the authorities.

The cap proposed for the other authorities have been confirmed.

The caps are, in our view, reasonable, appropriate and achievable in all the circumstances of the authorities concerned. These decisions will reduce public expenditure, and the burden on council taxpayers in the areas concerned by £24 million in 1995–96.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General on what dates he or other Ministers or former Ministers in his Department received extracts for comment from Sir Richard Scott's draft report; on what date comments were submitted to Sir Richard; and what requests have been made for an extension of the period within which comments should have been made. [27553]

The Attorney-General: The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the Inquiry and individual witnesses. In the case of draft extracts in particular, the inquiry has asked that these be treated in the strictest confidence.

EMPLOYMENT

New Earnings Survey

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to amend the new earnings survey to include low-paid workers. [24998]

Mr. Oppenheim: There are no plans to change the basis on which the new earnings survey is conducted.

Epileptics

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what training is provided for disability employment advisers and special needs careers advisers to enable them to advise appropriately people with epilepsy about employment and training; [27764]

(2) what training welfare rights officers receive to enable them to advise appropriately people with epilepsy about welfare benefits to which they are entitled. [27765]

Miss Widdecombe: The training currently provided by the Employment Service for disability employment advisers covers a wide range of disabilities, including epilepsy. From July this year, the training will be enhanced. Training will continue to include information on specific disabilities such a epilepsy.

DEAs, like all ES client advisers, are trained on the full range of benefits available to unemployed jobseekers and to those in employment. Clients can be referred to benefits specialists within jobcentres or the Benefits Agency to assist them in making decisions about work and training opportunities or to ensure that they receive their correct entitlement to benefits. The new DEA training will include material on benefits for clients with all types of disabilities and special needs.

The skills, knowledge and attitudes required of careers officers dealing with young people with special needs are included in the post-graduate diploma in careers guidance. Careers officers must hold this or an equivalent qualification. In addition, there are specific training courses run by higher education establishments in a range of topics relating to special needs.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the numbers attending and leaving restart courses, for each year of their operation, including those who left before the completion of the course; [27520]

(2) if he will list the numbers leaving restart courses, as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme, stipulating those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who become unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all. [27510]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Field, dated 12 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the number of people attending Restart Courses for each year of operation and the number of those who left to go into work or further employment schemes.

It may help if I explain that Restart Courses have been in existence since 1986. In April 1994 a new two week Restart Course programme was launched. These new courses combine morning attendance on the course, with individual job search activities in the afternoon. They build on the success of the original shorter one week courses and are designed to boost confidence and job search activity. There is an emphasis on making real applications for jobs and opportunities. They give people an opportunity to take a fresh look at their situation, become aware of the options open to them locally and plan positive steps back to work. During the course each person can plan the steps that they need to take to help them back to work.

The table attached shows the number of people who have attended Restart Courses and the number of referrals to a further option during the period April 1988 to March 1995. Prior to this we did not collect referral information.

From April 1994 information has been collected on the total number of starts resulting from a referral. Between April 1994 and March 1995, 21% of Restart Course completers started a job, an Employment Department employment or training programme or another option.

We do not keep records of the qualification that Restart Course leavers go on to obtain.

From April 1995 we will be able to supply separate figures for starts into jobs, and Employment Department or training programme or another option.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the numbers attending and leaving jobplan workshops, for each year of their operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27522]

(2) if he will list the numbers leaving jobplan workshops, as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme, stipulating those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who become unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all. [27512]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Field, dated 12 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about Jobplan workshops. You have asked about the number of attenders and outcomes since the programme was launched in April 1993.

It may help if I explain that Jobplan workshops are short five day courses for people who have been unemployed for a year, who decline or fail to take up a job or a place on an Employment Department programme at their Restart interview. It aims to help people compete more successfully for jobs and opportunities by allowing them to review their strengths and skills and establish clear job goals. This will help them draw up a comprehensive Action Plan, which maps out the steps they need to take to get them back to work.

Jobplan workshops were launched in April 1993 and the figures in the table attached show the number of people who have taken part in the workshops and the subsequent opportunities to which they were referred during the period April 1993 to March 1995. We do not keep records of qualifications that Jobplan leavers go on to obtain.

Since April 1993, 94% of workshop completers were referred to a job or an Employment Department employment or training programme or another option to help them back to work.

From April 1994 information has been collected on the total number of starts resulting from such referrals. Between April 1994 and March 1995, 26% of Jobplan completers started either a job, an Employment Department employment or training programme or another option. From April 1995 we will be able to supply separate figures for starts in each of these categories.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the numbers attending and leaving job clubs, for each year of their operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27521]

(2) if he will list the numbers leaving job clubs, as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme, stipulating those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who become unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all. Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Field, dated 12 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions to him about the numbers of people attending and leaving Jobclubs for each year of their operation and the outcomes from them. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Jobclubs were first introduced in Great Britain in 1984, but comprehensive figures on entrants, leavers and outcomes have only been collected since 1987. These are shown in the attached table, together with explanations for each category.

We do not keep a record of the qualifications obtained by Jobclub members. Additionally, we have no way of breaking down the "other leavers" category between those who remain unemployed and those who leave for other reason.

It may be helpful if I explain that Jobclubs are for those people who have been unemployed for 6 months or more. Jobclubs offer a professional approach to jobhunting—they provide the support and resources to carry out an effective programme of job search. Jobclub is a long term programme and people may attend for a few weeks or up to 6 months depending on how long it takes to find work. Around 50 per cent. of members leave Jobclub with a job, and others go into training, further education or self employment.

I hope this is helpful.

Part-time Employment

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of state for Employment how many people are currently in part-time employment; and what was the position in 1979. [26385]

Mr. Oppenheim: In December 1994, there were 6,290,000 part-time employees in employment in the United Kingdom. An equivalent figure for June 1979 is unavailable; however, the census of employment shows there were 4,472,000 part-time employees in the United Kingdom in June 1978.

Age Discrimination

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many outstanding vacancies have an upper age requirement on them (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the total. [27592]

Miss Widdecombe: The Employment Service conducts periodic sample surveys of age restrictions on jobcentre vacancies. The last survey was published in June 1994.

Findings revealed that age restrictions were placed on 28 per cent. of all vacancies. This was an improvement upon 1990 when 39 per cent. of vacancies had restrictions. An analysis of upper age limits revealed that 6 per cent. of the vacancies were closed to people aged 40 or over, while 8 per cent. were closed to those aged 60 and over.

A copy of report entitled "A Study of Age Restrictions on ES Vacancies" will be placed in the Library.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) when he last issued guidelines to the Employment Service on how to combat age discrimination; [27593]

(2) if he will publish the guidelines issued to the Employment Service about combating age discrimination. [27594]

Miss Widdecombe: The chief executive of the Employment Service is responsible for issuing guidance on operational matters.

Guidance to ES staff on how to combat age discrimination was last issued in March 1994. This guidance instructs staff in jobcentres to challenge age restrictions placed on job vacancies and to persuade employers to consider jobseekers on their merits.

Where employers insist on imposing age limits, they are reluctantly accepted. However, jobcentre staff are then encouraged to approach an employer on behalf of an otherwise suitable jobseeker who falls outside the stated age limit.

While it is not normal practice to publish guidance prepared for ES staff, a copy of the leaflet "What's Age Got To Do With It?" is available in the Library. This leaflet brings together advice contained in a number of handbooks which are issued to ES staff.

TREASURY

Caravans and Leisure Parks

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current position in respect of the 1995 revaluation of caravan and leisure parks following the discussions between representatives of the leisure caravan industry and the Valuation Office agency; when he expects a national agreement to be reached similar to the one reached in 1990; what further meetings are planned; and if he will make a statement. [27795]

Mr. Nelson: Two meetings took place in April between the representatives of the leisure caravan industry and the Valuation Office agency. At the second meeting on 28 April, the representatives of the industry undertook to select representative sites to be considered in detail. It is expected that they will assemble financial and other information on the individual sites by mid-June to enable discussions to resume. If, as is hoped, a national agreement can be reached on the way in which the sites should be valued, valuation officers will take steps to implement any changes which are necessary.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Exchequer of reducing the rate of value-added tax on energy-saving materials from 17.5 per cent. to 8 per cent. [28148]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There is no definitive list of energy-saving materials in existence; therefore it is impossible to quantify the cost to the Exchequer of taking such action.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the annual cost to the Exchequer of reducing the top rate of value-added tax from 17.5 per cent. to 16.5 per cent. [28149]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The estimated cost in 1995–96, published by Her Majesty's Treasury in the "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs", was £2.6 billion. A new estimate will be published this July.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue impact on the Government of reducing the rate of value added tax on domestic fuel from 8 per cent. to 5 per cent. [28141]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The estimated loss in revenue in 1995–96 from a three percentage point reduction in VAT on domestic fuel is about £500 million. It will be revised this summer. The figure is based on the costings methodology in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

Trading Profits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring up to date the table given in his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby dated 25 March 1982, Official Report, columns 393–94, concerning trading profits and relief from tax. [25619]

Sir George Young: The available information is shown in the table and notes.

1. For companies and financial institutions gross trading profits are as defined for national accounts purposes and are before deducting capital allowances and interest payments.
2. Manufacturing companies interest payments deducted from trading profits for tax purposes are not available.
3. For unincorporated businesses in manufacturing, gross trading profits are estimated from tax assessments and are before deductions for capital.
4. Stock relief was abolished during 1984.
5. All estimates are subject to revision as more information becomes available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 25 March 1982, Official Report, columns 393–94, concerning trading profits and reliefs for tax, if he will now provide and bring up-to-date the figures for taxable profits in each case. [27126]

2. For companies, the estimates include income derived from trading and non-trading sources. For unincorporated businesses, the income is from the trading activities only.

Engineering Sales

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer further to his press notice CSO (95)78 concerning engineering sales, if he will list for the categories closest to those covered by SITC division 75 the corresponding information on sales for 1994 together with his estimate of the import content. [26546]

Mr. Nelson: Information on sales and orders can be found in the CSO publication "Engineering Sales and Orders", which is available in the House of Commons Library. The category closest to SITC 75 is the aggregate "Manufacture of Office Machinery and Data Processing Equipment". Data on a current price basis may be found in table 35 and constant price; seasonally adjusted information may be found in table 74. No estimates are available on the import content of these figures but data on all imports within SITC 75 may be found in the CSO publication MM20A "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom with the World".

Crown v. Abraham, Allen and Henderson

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was paid to leading counsel in the prosecution of the Crown v. Abraham, Allen and Henderson; how much was paid to the costs of the entire prosecution team in the Crown v. Abraham, Allen and Henderson; and what additional costs were charged to the cost of the case by (a) Customs and Excise and (b) the Treasury solicitors. [27172]

Mr. Heathcoat Amory: Fees, including VAT, paid to leading and other counsel in relation to the prosecution were £156,980 and £109,859 respectively. Customs and Excise estimates that its solicitor's office costs for the prosecution were in the region of £40,000. Costs billed by the Treasury Solicitor amounted to £28,300.

Eamon Collins

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if any money or other inducement was paid or offered to Eamon Collins in respect of his claim for unfair dismissal against Her Majesty's Customs and Excise—reference No. 1710/87. [27386]

Mr. Heathcoat Amory: I can confirm that no inducement was offered or money paid to Eamon Collins in respect of his claim for unfair dismissal against Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the figures for loans to nationalised industries in table B20 of the "Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts", 1993–94 to give figures for 1994–95 and plans for 1995–96. [27884]

Mr. Nelson: Outturn figures for loans to nationalised industries in 1994–95 are still being compiled. They will appear as usual in the supplementary statements to the "Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts", which is published each December. This exercise is constrained to outturn figures, and does not extend to the current year.

Credit Expansion

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring up to date his written answer of 10 May 1993, Official Report, columns 277–78, showing the expansion of domestic credit each year since 1952 in terms of sterling and as a percentage of the money supply and add a fresh column to show domestic credit expansion as a percentage of gross domestic product. [27435]

Mr. Nelson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 21 July 1994, Official Report, columns 436–37.

Information Technology Contracts

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what safeguards there are for (a) the public interest and (b) the individuals upon which information is kept, in the contracts with EDS in respect of Government data; what is the overall cost, estimated or actual, to the public purse of each of the contracts; what information his Department has of commissions paid in respect of these contracts; what increases in cost are allowable under the contracts; and if he will make a statement. [27570]

Sir George Young: There are two safeguards. The first is that the contract contains provisions obliging EDS to make all necessary arrangements to protect the privacy of personal information. The second is that contractors and their employees are subject, in the same way as Revenue employees, to the criminal sanctions—a fine, or imprisonment, or both—provided by section 182, of the Finance Act 1989, for unauthorised disclosure of personal tax information.

The contract with EDS for the Inland Revenue's IT requirements is one which provides cost savings to the Department in cash terms of £225 million at 1994–95 prices with estimated expenditure of £1,033 million over the life of the contract to 2003–4.

No commissions have been paid by the Inland Revenue in respect of the letting of the contracts to EDS.

Price increases are allowable on the manpower element in the contract, subject to a cap calculated in accordance with the average earnings index.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to table 15.10 of the April 1995 issue of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics", if he will now combine the table on page 96 with those on pages 97 and 98 by removing the words "manufacture of" at the beginning of each line; and if he will add to each line the relevant weight. [27499]

Mr. Nelson: The information in table 15.10 of the "Monthly Digest of Statistics" is presented in accordance with its periodical collection. The data on page 96 relate to those sectors where quarterly information is available—annual information is also presented—and the data on paged 97 and 98 relate to those sectors where only annual information is available. The Central Statistical Office will continue to publish the quarterly information on page 96 separately from the annual information on pages 97 and 98.

Details relating to "weights" for the manufacturing sector will not be added to table 15.10, but this information can be found in table 2.5 of the "United Kingdom National Accounts 1994".

Bank of England

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the long-term viability of the Bank of England branch in Bristol. [27777]

Mr. Nelson: This is a matter for the Bank of England. The Bank has recently completed a review of the work of its branches and agencies. The Bank will continue and enhance the economic liaison work conducted through its regional agents, including in Bristol. It has, however, decided to cease branch banking operations and will discuss the branches' work on note distribution with the major clearing banks.

Exchange Rates

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the reasons for the change in level of depreciation since 1955. [27580]

Mr. Nelson: Exchange rates are determined in foreign exchange markets.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of Her Majesty's Government's exchange rate policy in 1993 in respect of sterling and the development on the United Kingdom's balance of trade in manufactures. [27500]

Mr. Nelson: Movements in the exchange rate were considered as part of the general assessment of monetary conditions in setting monetary policy during 1993, as they are now. The Government did not and do not set a target rate for sterling.

Government Shares

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a list of shares and securities held by Her Majesty's Treasury for the financial year 1994–95 on the same basis as table B13 of the "Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts", 1993–94. [27883]

Mr. Nelson: The information requested is shown in the table.

Earnings

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 99, what are the numbers and percentage in self-employment who receive (a) £30,000 to £35,000, (b) £35,000 to £50,000, (c) £50,000 to £75,000, (d) £75,000 to £100,000 and (e) over £100,000 annually. [27821]

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 June 1995]: The table covers people whose main source of income assessable to 1993–94 tax was from self-employment. The bands are of profits assessable to 1993–94 tax; that is, generally, profits arising in accounting periods ending in 1992–93. Estimates for later years are not yet available.

Biodiesel

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to announce the rate of excise duty for biodiesel produced from crops under section 11 of the Finance Act 1993. [27090]

Mr Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 6 June 1995]: The rates of excise duty to be applied to biodiesel when used as motor fuel are already known. They are the same as that applied to the equivalent fossil fuel.

These are:

When used as a motor fuel for road vehicles: 31.32p per litre.

When used as motor fuel for other purposes: 2.14p per litre.

No duty will be charged when used as a heating fuel.

A Treasury order implementing these charges is currently being drafted and will be circulated to those concerned before the House rises for the summer recess, with a view to implementation in the autumn.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel Safety Authority

Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority to publish its annual report for the year 1993–94. [28253]

Mr. Watts: The Channel Tunnel Safety Authority has now published it sixth annual report, covering the period from 1 April 1993 to 31 March 1994. I have today arranged for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

A12

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current status and timetable of the dualling of each section of the A12 Ipswich to north Lowestoft; and if he will make a statement. [27246]

Mr. Watts: The roads programme contains six schemes on the A12 between Ipswich and Lowestoft as follows:

A12 Martlesham—Wickham Market Improvement (dualling)

Priority 2 (£11 million). Next step public consultation.

A12 Wickham Market to Saxmundham Improvement (dualling)

Priority 2 (£20 million). Decision awaited following March 95 public inquiry.

A12 Toxford Bypass (single carriageway)

Priority 2 (£4 million). Next stage preferred route announcement following public consultation.

A12 Blythburgh Bypass (single carriageway)

Priority 2 (£5 million). Possibility of local conference prior to public consultation in view of sensitive environment issues.

A12 Wrentham Bypass (single carriageway)

Priority 2 (£3 million). Next stage preferred route announcement following public consultation.

A12 Kessingland—Pleasurewood (standard not known)

Longer term scheme.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects to meet the commitment in the White Paper, "Roads to Prosperity", to dual the A12 from London to Great Yarmouth; and if he will make a statement. [27245]

Mr. John Watts: In March 1994, my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State announced the results of his review of the trunk road programme. He announced that we are to improve some sections of the existing dual carriageway between M25 and Ipswich, but no longer plan a continuous dual carriageway on the environmentally sensitive section north of Ipswich. Here we propose to dual some short sections, but otherwise will concentrate on bypasses to relieve local communities.

Manchester Airport Rail Link

Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Manchester airport rail link, southern spur to begin operations. [28151]

Mr. Watts: In May 1996.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding the dispute between Railtrack plc and Regional Railways, North West, over the funding of the Manchester airport rail link, southern spur. [28150]

Mr. Watts: None.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the arrangements for the financing and operation of the Manchester airport link, southern spur. [28152]

Mr. Watts: These matters are for Manchester Airport plc and the local authorities concerned, who have promoted the scheme and funded it from their own resources.

Highway Authorities

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to whether the proposed division of Berkshire into six highway authorities, including three covering the urban area of Reading, will facilitate an integrated approach to transport provision in the county area. [27993]

Mr. Norris: There is no reason why the proposed restructuring of Berkshire to create six unitary authorities should hinder the delivery of local transport services. It is likely that the new authorities will need to work together in this, and other areas, where strategic issues straddle authority boundaries. We already encourage such joint working between authorities, for example through the package approach for transport funding.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to the extent to which the targeting of expenditure on highway maintenance and road improvements will be as effective in achieving value for money and lessening road accidents if carried out within each of the six unitary authorities proposed for Berkshire as under the current arrangements. [27997]

Mr. Norris: The Local Government Commission took account of the need for efficient and effective performance of all local authority activities in making its recommendations for the restructuring of local government in Berkshire.

Drivers' Hours

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to expand liability for drivers' hours to employers; what plans he has to exclude as a defence that employers have complied with the regulations if they have warned drivers not to exceed the permitted hours; and if he will make a statement. [27760]

Mr. Norris: Under existing legislation employers can be, and are, prosecuted for drivers' hours and tachograph offences where it can be proven that they caused or permitted an offence to take place. In such circumstances, a warning given by the employer to the driver not to exceed the permitted hours might be taken into account but it would be up to a court to decide what weight, if any, to attach to such a warning.

Automated First Registration and Licensing Project

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide the project timetable for the introduction of automated first registration and licensing and the estimated cost of the project; and by whom the cost will be met. [27866]

Mr. Norris: A firm timetable for the automated first registration and licensing project is not yet available.

The cost of the project is to be met jointly by the DVLA and the motor industry. The DVLA's costs are a matter for negotiation with its computer contractor, EDS Ltd., and are subject to commercial confidentiality.

Traffic Area Offices

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate he has made of the saving to his Department from closing two traffic area offices; [27873]

(2) what estimate he has made of the saving to an average coach or bus operator in operator licensing fees per vehicle per year from closing two traffic area offices; [27870]

(3) what estimates he has made of the saving to an average haulage operator in operator licence and vehicle fees per vehicle per year from closing two traffic area offices. [27872]

Mr. Norris: No estimates have been made by the Department of the savings to operators of closing two traffic area offices.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average coach or bus operator pays in operator licence fees per vehicle per year; what element of this is directly attributed to traffic area office costs excluding his Department's headquarters and central on-costs; and what estimate he has made of the average running costs of an average coach or bus. [27869]

Mr. Norris: The cost of the licence for a PSV operator is £54 per vehicle per year; approximately £18 or 33.5 per cent. of the fee is directly attributed to traffic area office costs. The average annual running costs, for a new 53-seater diesel bus was estimated at the year end of 1993 to be £28,306. Running costs include depreciation, maintenance, fuel, tyres and lubricants.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of what the average haulage operator pays in operator licence fees, licence and vehicle fee, per vehicle per year; what element of this is directly attributed to traffic area office costs excluding his Department's headquarters' costs and central on-costs; and what estimate he has made of the annual running costs of an average heavy good vehicle. [27871]

Mr. Norris: The costs of operator licensing based on an average operator with three vehicles are £665 for a five-year licence. This produces an average annual cost of £133 or £44.33 per vehicle per annum. Traffic area office costs represent approximately 27 per cent. of the total costs of goods operator licensing which amounts to an average cost of £11.97 per vehicle per annum.

Annual running costs of operating a heavy goods vehicle are not calculated by the Department.

Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he has introduced with regard to (a) recommendation numbers 100 and 101, (b) recommendation numbers 98 and 99 and (c) recommendation number 102 of the 18th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution. [27865]

Mr. Norris: The Government have welcomed the Royal Commission on environmental pollution's report as a valuable contribution to the wider debate we are encouraging on transport policy.

We recognise the value of cycling transport policies and programmes and we have made it plain in statements and within the recent transport policies and programmes guidance that we expect highway authorities to work with others to achieve better conditions for cyclists. That will inevitably include the development of sound cycle networks, building on the experience from our cycle routes programme. The Government believe that cycling proposals are most effective when they are fitted into a balanced set of measures. Accordingly, we have accepted 37 local authority transport packages for funding, the great majority of which include cycle networks or other measures that benefit cyclists. One notable example is the London cycle network, for which £3 million support will be provided in this financial year. In reaching decisions on funding, my Department looks for evidence that authorities are pursuing viable cycling policies and promoting cycling as a better alternative to the car for many journeys. In addition, I recently announced my intention to develop a national strategy for cycling.

Fatalities to cyclists and pedestrians are at their lowest level since records began in 1927. We shall continue to seek the maximum reduction in casualties, through a wide range of measures, including education, penalties for dangerous driving, research, engineering schemes and substantial publicity campaigns.

British Rail's commercial policy is to welcome cyclists and to convey bicycles whenever and wherever possible, subject to certain fees, provided this will not unduly inconvenience other passengers or displace other revenue earning traffic.

The cyclists' public affairs group, with the assistance of the Department of Transport, has produced a guidance document for rail service operators explaining how they can make their services more attractive to the growing number of cyclists. The franchising director will send copies of the document to all bidders for rail franchises. In addition, the franchising director is currently considering whether the franchise agreement should include any provision for the carriage of bicycles on trains.

A38

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he hopes to complete his study of the options for increasing capacity on the A38 between Exeter and Plymouth; if he has ruled out the possibility of the A38 between Exeter and Plymouth being upgraded to motorway status; and what environmental assessment he has made should increased capacity on the road be recommended. [27355]

Mr. Watts: The Highways Agency has received the consultants' report. I await the agency's recommendations.

M65 (Protestors)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 17 May, Official Report, column 245, (1) which teams of contractors and which specialist climbers were awarded the contract by the under sheriff of Lancashire to evict the protesters from Stanworth woods; if this contract went out to competitive tender; and what were the costs incurred; [27343]

(2) what sums of money from public funds have been paid, and to whom, in respect of the costs incurred by the under sheriff of Lancashire in respect of contract work to clear tree protestors from Stanworth woods between 1 and 5 May. [27171]

Mr. Watts: These are operational matters for the Highways Agency. I have asked its chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Joan Walley, dated 12 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to write in reply to your Parliamentary Questions asking the Secretary of State for Transport, which teams of contractors were appointed by the Under Sheriff of Lancashire to remove protestors from Stanworth Woods; what was the cost of the work undertaken; and whether the contracts were subject to competitive tendering.

The action to evict protestors from Stanworth Woods was entirely the responsibility of the Under Sheriff. He directly recruited the specialist teams and there was no involvement by the Highways Agency.

This is not a matter for which the Agency is responsible, but we understand that the cost, to date, of the work undertaken by the Under Sheriff is some £79,000.

Overloaded Vehicles

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the annual cost of damage to roads and bridges caused by overloaded vehicles. [27148]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked its chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. John Denham, dated 12 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the annual cost of damage to roads and bridges caused by overloaded vehicles.

In 1988 the Transport Research Laboratory (TRL) published a report on road wear caused by overloaded lorries. This was based on the results of ten roadside surveys of goods vehicles carried out in different locations during the 1980s. The conclusion was that for the roads covered in the survey, overloading contributed directly to 5.7% of the road wear attributable to goods vehicles.

The Highways Agency recently asked the TRL to review this figure. The latter concluded that, because of changes in the composition of the vehicle fleet, road wear caused by overloading had probably reduced slightly. Of the £360 million spent on maintaining roads comprising the trunk road network during 1994/95, we estimate that less than 5% (£18 million) was attributable to damage caused by overloaded vehicles.

As for bridges, we use historical data on traffic distribution when developing the loading standards for their design. Although there is therefore some element of initial capital cost associated with overladen vehicles, we do not have an estimate of the annual cost of damage caused by them.

Construction Industry

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what policy his Department has put to the working groups on the Latham report as to the desirability of a single exclusive register for public sector work. [24356]

Mr. Watts: None.

WALES

Health Authorities

14. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to date with regard to the establishment of new health authorities in Wales. [26044]

Mr. Redwood: No steps have been taken formally to establish the new health authorities. That will be accomplished by regulations, subject to enactment of the Health Authorities Bill.

Dental Services

15. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many NHS patients in Wales have been informed by their dentist in the last 36 months that they will no longer treat them on the NHS. [26046]

Mr. Richards: Around 43,000 patients have been removed from dentists registers since 1 August 1992, but many of these will have subsequently registered with another dentist. Between 1992 and 1994 the number of patients registered has remained at about 58 per cent.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the (a) number of adult courses of treatment, (b) total national health service gross expenditure, (c) total cost borne by the Exchequer and (d) total cost borne by patients, for the general dental service, for each year between 1990 and 1994. [27196]

Mr. Richards: The information is given in the following table:

	Adult courses of dental treatment (thousands)[1]	Total NHS gross expenditure (£ million)[2]	Total cost borne by Exchequer (net) (£ million)	Total cost borne by patients (£ million)
1990–91	1,190	57,055	38,923	18,132
1991–92	1,327	69,513	49,426	20,087
1992–93	1,398	73,794	53,327	20,467
1993–94	1,399	67,964	48,928	19,036

[1] Revised figures from Dental Estimates Board.
[2] Excludes refunds, which are netted off against patients fees.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage of people aged five to 18 years with permanent teeth which are actively decayed, filled or missing due to decay. [27201]

Mr. Richards: A national survey of children's dental health was carried out, for the third time, in 1993 by the social survey division of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys and results published by HMSO in "Children's dental health in the United Kingdom 1993", ISBN O 11 691607 9, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The information requested is shown in tables 3.3, 3.5, 3.7 and 3.9 of the publication. Sixteen to 18-year-olds are not covered by the survey.

Welsh Language

16. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new programmes have been announced since the passing of the Welsh Language Act 1993 to encourage mature students to learn Welsh; and if he will make a statement. [26047]

Mr. Richards: The Further Education Funding Council for Wales is responsible for securing the provision of Welsh for adults in the further education sector. The council has ensured that Welsh for adults programmes have been maintained and developed. For the 1995–96 academic year, the council has established a new development fund which will provide an additional £300,000 in support of Welsh for adults projects to generate new provision and improve existing courses.

Part-time Employment

17. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the percentage of part-time workers as a proportion of the overall working population (a) in 1985 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [26048]

Mr. Redwood: According to the labour force survey, in spring 1985, some 20 per cent. of employees of working age in Wales were in part-time employment. The figure for autumn 1994 was 24 per cent.

Unemployment

18. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the level of male unemployment in Newport, Gwent and Wales at the latest available date. [26049]

Mr. Redwood: In April 1995, the unadjusted, male unemployment rate in the Newport travel-to-work area was 11.2 per cent. The corresponding figures for Gwent and Wales were 11.9 per cent. and 11.3 per cent. respectively.

Voluntary Organisations

19. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the value of grants from his Department to voluntary organisations in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what were the figures for 1978–79 at constant prices. [26050]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest available figure at outturn prices for direct grants is £14.1 million for 1993–94. The earliest financial year for which a directly comparable figure can be determined is 1988–89 when the equivalent expenditure at 1993–94 prices was £8.2 million.

Second Severn Crossing

20. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his assessment of the effect of the second Severn crossing on (a) industry and (b) tourism in Wales. [26051]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The second Severn crossing, which is due to open next year, is likely to have a beneficial effect on many aspects of life in Wales. A report by Pieda plc in 1992, based on a survey of businesses in south Wales and Avon, concluded that the crossing would have positive effect on local trading and commercial activity and stimulate investment opportunities in south Wales. The report added that the crossing is unlikely of itself to increase tourism activities in these regions. Copies of the executive summary of the report, entitled "The Economic Impact of the Second Severn Crossing", are in the Library of the House.

Schools (Information Technology)

21. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he has taken to encourage investment in IT in Welsh schools. [26052]

Mr. Redwood: On 6 April, I announced an initiative which will allow all primary schools in Wales to bid for 100 per cent. funding for IT equipment. Schools can choose between multi-media suites or portables, together with the latest and best available software on the basic subjects of the national curriculum.

The initiative will cost up to £3 million during the school year 1995–96, and will include training on the use of the equipment and follow-on training funded separately through grant for education support and training.

In addition, substantial provision has been made for primary and secondary schools through GEST to support the acquisition and greater use of IT across the curriculum. In 1995–96, this amounts to £2.7 million.

Coastal Discharges

22. Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress is being made in reducing the amount of raw sewage being pumped from Wales into the sea.

Mr. Redwood: Considerable progress is being achieved in improving the treatment of sewage discharges to Welsh costal waters. Dwr Cymru is aiming to complete its programme of improvements to discharges affecting EC identified bathing waters by 1998. It plans to invest over £400 million in the next five years, mainly at coastal sites, so that nearly all the waste water it collects will receive sewage treatment.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the National Rivers Authority report on toxic contaminants entering the sea, published on 23 May, in regard to its implications for the Welsh coastline. [26743]

Mr Gwilym Jones: The report "Contaminants Entering the Sea" outlines the results of the National Rivers Authority's monitoring programme over the period 1990 to 1993, in line with international agreements and commitments. Progress toward meeting the commitments to reduce the quantities of contaminants entering the sea has been encouraging. For some of the most toxic metals, the authority's estimate show that the reduction targets have already been met.

The results highlighted in the report do not necessarily signify pollution of the Welsh coastline: rather, they are examples of dissolved substances which, in many cases, occur naturally in Wales. The authority advises that in the overwhelming majority of cases the concentrations of substances found are not a threat to the biology of the river or marine environment in Wales. Areas of potential concern, such as those affected by pesticides or minerals, are being reviewed by the authority's Welsh region to identify appropriate action to be taken.

Teachers

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) primary and (b) secondary schools teachers have been employed by each local education authority in each of the last five years. [26489]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is shown, as at January each year, in the following tables:

618G teacher statistics returns collected by the Department for Education.

The figures include: qualified teachers including on secondment; student teachers and instructors; and peripatetic teachers, advisory teachers and teachers in centres for special education.

The figures exclude: teachers at grant maintained schools; teachers at LEA maintained nursery and special schools; and teachers providing education other than at schools.

The two sixth form colleges, in Clwyd and South Glamorgan, left LEA control in April 1993 and are excluded from the January 1994 data.

Heart Disease

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) cases of heart disease and (b) deaths due to heart disease were recorded for each year since 1990. [27213]

Mr. Richards: Available information on mortality from heart disease is as follows:

	Number
1990	10,972
1991	10,974
1992	10,751
1993[1]	11,873

Information on the number of cases of heart disease is not available. However, the following table shows latest estimates of hospital in-patient or day case activity in Wales where heart disease was recorded as the principal diagnosis.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the transfer of resources from the Countryside Council for Wales to local authority control. [27651]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Where the Countryside Council for Wales and local authorities have general powers to act, we wish to move to a situation where a greater proportion of the work is undertaken by the local authorities. Much of this work is of a local nature and it therefore seems more appropriate that is should be undertaken by a local body. My right hon. Friend and I are consulting with local authority associations and wait their responses before deciding on the best way forward.

Repossessions

23. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for home repossessions in Wales, West Glamorgan and Neath. [26054]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Data on the number of homes repossessed are not available. Figures for mortgage possession actions taken in county courts are published by the Lord Chancellor's Department and not all orders result in repossession. The numbers of possession orders, including suspended orders, made during the first quarter of 1995 in Wales, West Glamorgan and Neath are 1,091, 174 and 82 respectively.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each local education authority and for Wales as a whole (a) the number and (b) the proportion of pupils in grant-maintained (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools. [26788]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is shown in the following table.

General Practioners

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list those family health services authorities which have made payments under part VI, paragraph 34, section 2(u) to single-handed general practitioners' practices in their areas; [28081]

(2) how many single-handed general practitioners' practices were in receipt of additional payments under part VI, paragraph 34, section 2(u) of the NHS (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992 in (a) 1992, (b) 1993 (c) 1994 and (d) in the current year in Wales; [28101]

(3) what was (a) the lowest (b) the highest and (c) the average payment made to single-handed general practitioners' practices under part VI, paragraph 34, section 2(u) of the NHS (General Medical Services) Regulations 1992 in Wales in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) in the current year. [28082]

Mr. Richards: No payments were made by any FHSA in Wales between 1992 and 1994.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those areas in which general practitioners' practices have qualified for additional payments for deprivation as defined under the Jarman index in each of the last five years and the current year. [28084]

Mr. Richards: From the introduction of the deprivation payments scheme in 1990–91 until April 1995, GP practices have qualified for payments for each patient who is resident in one of the wards in table 1. The wards qualifying for payments are derived in Wales using the Jarman index—based on 1981 census data—standardised morality ratios and an index derived from the housing conditions survey. The payments from June 1995 will be to GP practices for each patient resident in one of the wards in table 2. These wards qualify following the recalculation of the Jarman index using 1991 census data and the updating of the SMRs. It is not possible to make meaningful comparisons between the two tables due to the restructuring of wards between the 1981 and 1991 censuses.

University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, columns 72–73, what was the amount of the short-term loan, the time for which it was requested, the day on which the loan was made and the day on which it was repaid [27899]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: A short-term loan of £1.3 million was made on 3 April. It was requested for a period of 15 days and repaid on 21 April, three days later than planned.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, columns 72–73, what steps he has taken to reconcile the financial viability consultation work carried out by Secta Consultation Ltd. on the University Hospital of Wales Healthcare national health service trust with the financial deficit currently reported; and if he will make a statement. [27849]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: None. The financial viability of the trust was independently confirmed by Secta Consulting Ltd. as part of the process of assessing the application for trust status. The trust have now identified a potential deficit and are introducing measures to address in this year.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his latest estimate of the cost of local government reorganisation in Wales. [27540]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: The costs of reorganisation will decided primarily by local government itself.

I decide how much to allocate towards local government reorganisation costs in the light of estimates submitted by local authorities in Wales. The public expenditure statement sets out the grant and capital provision available.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Conwy (Sir W. Roberts), of 22 May, Official Report, column 460, if he will list the figures separately for the financial years 1990–91 and 1994–95; and if he will list the principle components making up the £9 million authorised retrospectively, by means of extra statutory payments. [27896]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: The level of expenditure by general practitioner fundholders from their management allowances between 1990–91 to 1993–94 was:

1990–91	111,630
1991–92	519,556
1992–93	1,622,538
1993–94	2,004,934

Expenditure figures for 1994–95 are not yet available, but provisional accounts suggest that the total sum amounted to some £3.8 million.

Detailed information on the principal components are not held centrally.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 461, what further approaches he has had from the World Wide Fund for Nature. [27897]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: My Department responded on 6 June to a letter dated 30 May from the head of UK programmes and European liaison, World Wide Fund for Nature about Cardiff bay barrage bird compensation measures.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 80, what approaches have been made to landowners in Caldicot, Uskmouth and the Lougher estuary with a view to the acquisition of their land for the bird reserve connected with the Cardiff bay barrage development; on what date the landowners were approached; and if he will list the responses received. [27898]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: This is an operational matter for the corporation and I have asked the chief executive to reply.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 4 April, Official Report, column 1090, what proportion of the transfer costs agreed on 27 March 1990 comprised the redundancy costs; and if he will list the non-redundancy items making up the total that his Department approved on that date. [27405]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 4 April 1995. The costs agreed on 27 March 1990 did not separately identify redundancy or other items.

TACP Architects

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 19 April, Official Report, column 206, which of the work was obtained by competitive tender. [25086]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 22 May 1995]: The following Welsh Office work was obtained by competitive tender:

Landscaping at Cadoxton Barry
Commission for landscape advice

I understand from the non-departmental public bodies concerned that the following work was obtained by competitive tender:

Development Board for Rural Wales: Landscaping Ystradgynlais
Cardiff Bay Development Corporation: Landscaping design services and 19 individual projects
Countryside Council for Wales: Research on traditional orchards
Welsh Development Agency: Warren Hall feasibility study

EDUCATION

Higher Education

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of Education what is the total number of students in higher education in the United Kingdom; and what were the figures in 1979 and 1985; [27758]

(2) what is the current number of overseas students studying in higher education in the United Kingdom; and what were the figures in 1979 and 1985. [27757]

Mr. Boswell: The readily available information is given in the table:

Enrolments in higher education[1] in the United Kingdom (thousands)

Year	Total	Of which overseas students
1979–80	795	[2]56
1985–86	937	[2]54
1992–93	1,444	110

Sources: Education Statistics for the United Kingdom, 1994 and 1983 editions, HMSO.
Notes:
[1] Excludes enrolments on nursing and paramedical courses—85,000 in 1992–93.
[2] Full-time only.

Epilepsy

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what steps are taken to ensure that practising schoolteachers in all types of school continue during their teaching service to be provided with adequate and correct information concerning children with epilepsy; [27647]

(2) what steps are taken to ensure that teachers in training are provided with adequate and correct information concerning children with epilepsy. [27646]

Mr. Forth: The Department is planning to issue later this year guidance on managing children who require medication in schools, which will help inform both serving and trainee teachers about epilepsy.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps are taken to ensure that all pupils are in receipt within their school curriculum, of appropriate and correct epilepsy awareness information. [26789]

Mr. Forth: There is scope within national curriculum science for the teaching of issues which relate to health and well-being. Opportunities also exist within the wider curriculum, for example, through programmes of personal, social and health education, for schools to provide information about a broad range of health issues, including epilepsy.

Under-fives Education

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the standard spending assessment for under-fives education by each local education authority; and what was the actual spending on under-fives education by each local education authority at the latest date for which figures are available. [28017]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on the standard spending assessment for under-fives education by each local education authority is contained in "The Standard Spending Assessment Handbook 1995–96", a copy of which is in the Library. Information on spending on under-fives is not available disaggregated by LEA.

Further Education Lecturers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many further education lecturers have taken early retirement; and how many did so on grounds of ill health for each of the last five years. [27556]

Mr. Boswell: I will write to the hon. Member.

Education Course Costs

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total cost and the average cost per student of the BEd/BAQTS in (a) year one, (b) year two, (c) year three and (d) year four on courses in England and Wales. [27994]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total cost and the average cost per student of the postgraduate certificate of education courses in England and Wales. [27995]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Teachers Superannuation Scheme

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if the Government's proposals to privatise the administration of the teachers pension fund will require secondary legislation. [28153]

Mr. Robin Squire: Before a contractor could administer the teachers superannuation scheme, secondary legislation would be needed to delegate functions of administration to the contractor.

We have made it clear that we shall let a contractor only if it would provide better value for money than keeping the administration of the teachers superannuation scheme in the public sector.

Ethnic Monitoring

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when she expects to make an announcement on the consultation document on ethnic monitoring of school pupils. [28020]

Mr. Forth: The consultation paper invited responses by the end of May. They are still arriving. My right hon. Friend is carefully considering them, and hopes to announce her conclusions as soon as practicable.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many responses she has received to the consultation on ethnic monitoring. [28021]

Mr. Forth: About 100, to date.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps she is taking to ensure that the ethnic monitoring of pupils analyses variations in achievement between different ethnic groups. [28022]

Mr. Forth: This is one of the issues raised in the consultations. My right hon. Friend is considering it in the light of the responses.

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to her answer of 25 May, Official Report, column 690, if she will list the figures for the average teacher's salary in each of the education authorities who (a) do not receive and (b) receive area cost adjustment. [28086]

Mr. Robin Squire: The latest available data are set out in the table. The area cost adjustment reflects relative costs across all salaries as well as other expenses such as higher rates.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the total number of claimants experiencing delays in respect of appeals over disability living allowance giving the figures (a) in total and (b) for each month of delay. [26785]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested. However, I am advised by the President of the Independent Tribunal Service that, as at 31 May, the case load of the disability appeal tribunal central office, which has responsibility within the independent tribunal service for processing appeals to disability appeal tribunals, was 19,808. This figure includes, in addition to disability living allowance appeals, appeals against attendance allowance, mobility allowance and disability working allowance decisions. It is made up as follows:

(i) Appeals which have been lodged with DATCO but are awaiting the adjudication officer's submission from the Benefits Agency—4,782;

(ii) Adjourned appeals which are awaiting further information before they can be prepared for re-listing—1,648;

(iii) Appeals for which DATCO has received the submission but which are not yet ready to list for hearing because they have not completed the pre-listing procedures—6,945;

(iv) Appeals on which the pre-listing procedures have been completed and which are ready for listing—3,506;

(v) Appeals which have been listed but not yet heard—2,927

The average clearance time for an appeal to a disability appeal tribunal, that is from lodgment of the appeal to date of hearing, is 23 weeks.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he proposes to take to ensure that the proposed changes in the calculations of housing benefit entitlement will not put at risk people with special needs whose rent covers a degree of social support given to them by their landlords. [26874]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has recently received the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee following its public consultation on the proposed changes to housing benefit. We will be considering carefully the position of housing where the rent covers a degree of social support as part of our response to the report.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to lay the new housing benefit regulations before Parliament. [28193]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently considering the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee following its public consultation on the proposed changes. He is also considering views expressed by the local authority associations. We intend to lay regulations before Parliament around the end of June.

Family Credit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the total amount of money spent by the Government on their family credit scheme in each year since the scheme's inception. [27261]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is set out in the table.

Family credit

Financial year	Expenditure (£ million)[2]
1988–89	394
1989–90	425
1990–91	494
1991–92	626
1992–93	929
1993–94	1,208
1994–95	[3]1,480

[1] Source:
Social security departmental report.

[2] The figures for the cost to public funds include benefit expenditure only. They exclude administration costs.

[3] Estimate.

Incomes and Benefits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the real income changes in the value of benefits to (a) single person, (b) a single parent with one child, (c) a single parent with two children, (d) a married couple and (e) a married couple with one and two children between 1979 and the latest available date; and if he will estimate the real increase in the average take-home pay of (i) a single person, (ii) a single parent and (iii) a married couple, including child benefit, over the same period. [27221]

Mr. Roger Evans: It is not possible to provide information in the form requested. Average earnings are not available by family type and benefits payable to different family types will depend on their individual circumstances and, in some cases, family composition.

Government policy is to uprate benefits each year in line with inflation. In addition, since 1988, extra help now worth over £1 billion in real terms has been made available to low-income families with children through income-related benefits.

EU Social Security Costs

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if it is Her Majesty's Government's policy to require the funding in each member state of (a) social security costs and (b) state pension costs under the budgetary and expenditure arrangements of the Community. [27771]

Mr. Hague: No. The Government believe that member states should remain responsible for the funding of their own social security and state pension costs through their own budgetary and expenditure arrangements.

Incapacity Credits

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if people in receipt of invalidity or incapacity benefit are entitled to class 1 national insurance payments. [27901]

Mr. Hague: Yes. A person in receipt of invalidity benefit prior to 13 April this year or incapacity benefit thereafter is entitled to be credited with earnings equal to the lower earnings limit for class 1 national insurance contributions in respect of each week of incapacity.

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate his Department has made of the number of dependent children with United Kingdom citizenship who may no longer qualify for benefit as a result of the changes in social security regulations dealing with the criterion of habitual residence; and if he will make a statement. [27823]

Mr. Roger Evans: Dependent children are not entitled to income support, housing benefit or council tax benefit in their own right. No estimate has been made of the number of adult claimants with such dependent children who are not entitled to these benefits because they do not satisfy the habitual residence criteria.

Child Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research he is undertaking to establish to what extent unpaid child support payments are being improperly avoided; and to what extent they represent a genuine inability to pay. [27946]

Mr. Burt: The 1995–96 Department of Social Security research programme includes a planned survey of absent parents. It is intended that the survey will consider all aspects of the impact of the Child Support Act 1991.

Where arrears of child support maintenance are due, the Child Support Agency will contact the absent parent to discuss means of repayment, including reasonable instalment arrangements. In cases where the absent parent refuses to make repayment, appropriate, action to collect and enforce the arrears will be taken. The proposed departure scheme will provide additional help for the small numbers facing genuine difficulties in making payment of maintenance because of exceptional circumstances.

National Insurance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the costs to the Exchequer of reducing the rate of employers national insurance contributions by 1 per cent. for each of the ranges of weekly earnings (a) below £59, (b) between £59 and £104.99, (c) between £105 and £149.99, (d) between £150 and £204.99, (e) between £205 and £440 and (f) above £440. [28147]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information in respect of the 1995–96 year is in the table.

£ million

	Less than £58.00[1] pw	£58–£104.99 pw	£105–£149.99 pw	£150–£204.99 pw	£205–£439.99 pw	£440+ pw
Full year	nil	75	115	245	1,395	1,085
First year	nil	65	105	220	1,250	970

[1] The current lower earnings limit is £58.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the revenue which would be raised by charging employers' national insurance contributions at 20 per cent. for weekly incomes in excess of £1,000. [28145]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The additional revenue is estimated at £1.65 billion in a full year.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of abolishing employers' national insurance contributions for employees on weekly earnings of up to and including £204.99. [28146]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The estimated cost is £2.5 billion in a full year.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the annual cost to the Exchequer of raising the starting point for paying employee national insurance contributions to the weekly earnings equivalent of the annual sum of £3,525; and what is his estimate of the number of individuals who would cease to be liable to pay employee national insurance contributions if such a change were to be implemented. [28144]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The estimated reduction in national insurance contributions from employees would be some £450 million a year. At any one time some 500,000 employees, the majority of whom would be women in part-time employment, would no longer pay contributions.

This answer assumes that employers would continue to pay contributions starting at the lower earnings limit and that there would be no change to the range of earnings governing benefit entitlements.

(Estimates based on rates for 1995–96 and the April 1994 new earnings survey).

HEALTH

GP Fundholding, Warwickshire

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of fundholding practices have exceeded their allocated budget in each of the last three years in the county of Warwickshire and have had to seek new resources from the health authority. [27302]

Mr. Malone: The numbers of fundholders in Warwickshire who have exceeded their allocated budgets over the last three years are shown in the table.

	Total number of fundholding practices	Number of fundholding practices exceeding their budgets	Number of fundholding practices exceeding their budgets by over 5 per cent.
1994–95[1]	26	[2]13	5

Notes:
[1] Provisional information.
[2] Eight have an overspend of less than 1 per cent. and the highest overspend is around 7.4 per cent. A number of practices have made savings of over 10 per cent.

Epilepsy

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to ensure that people aged over 60 years with epilepsy receive treatment from specialists in neurology rather than from geriatricians; [27766]

(2) if she will provide details of her Department's planned expenditure on the provision of epilepsy services in the current financial year, in cash terms and as (a) a percentage of its total budget and (b) equivalent figures for each of the last five years, adjusted for inflation; [27762]

(3) what plans she has to include epilepsy as a condition for special attention in "The Health of the Nation"; [27572]

(4) how many specialist centres and clinics for epilepsy are currently operating in the United Kingdom; and what plans she has to increase the number; [27691]

(5) if she will instruct NHS providers to introduce a maximum waiting time for consultants to see people diagnosed as having epilepsy by a general practitioner. [27763]

Mr. Bowis: The treatment of epilepsy is a matter for clinicians, who decide on specific treatment for each individual patient based on that patient's medical history.

Information on expenditure on the provision of epilepsy services is not available centrally.

Currently, there are no plans to include epilepsy as a condition for special attention in "The Health of the Nation". The Chief Medical Officer's working group on "The Health of the Nation", however, regularly reviews and considers various conditions for such attention.

Information on the numbers of specialist centres and clinics for specific conditions is not available centrally. There are no central plans to increase the number of these for epilepsy, as this a matter for local determination.

The revised patients charter has introduced standard waiting times to first-patient out-patient consultation. This standard applies to all specialties and requires that all patients should be seen within 26 weeks of being referred to a consultant by their general practitioner, and that nine out of 10 patients should be seen within 13 weeks.

These are maximum waiting times and we would expect that patients whose clinical need was urgent should be seen much more quickly.

Disabled Living Centres

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all disabled living centres in England and Wales; and how much her Department contributes to each of their budgets. [27,68]

Mr. Bowis: A list of all the disabled living centres is not available centrally. The Government support the work of the disabled living centres by providing funding to their representative national organisation, the Disabled Living Centres Council—£108,000 in the current financial year.

National Blood Authority

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the findings of the National Blood Authority consequent to its consultations on proposals it has made for changes in the organisation of its service. [27876]

Mr. Sackville: The National Blood Authority will make its final recommendations shortly. A copy of the authority's proposals will be placed in the Library when published.

Emergency Admissions

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been (a) the total number of admissions, (b) the number of emergency and urgent admissions and (c) (b) as a percentage of (a) for each year since 1988–89. [27537]

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table:

Emergency admissions as a total of waiting list, booked, planned and emergency admissions

Phenobarbitone

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reports of adverse reactions have been referred to the Committee on Safety of Medicines in respect of products containing phenobarbitone in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [27573]

Mr. Sackville: The tables shows the number of reports of adverse reactions received by the Committee on Safety of Medicines in respect of products containing phenobarbitone for each of the last five years. A report of a suspected adverse reaction does not necessarily mean that it was caused by the drug. Other factors, including the underlying disease of the patient or other drugs taken by the patient, may be contributing.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many prescriptions for products containing phenobarbitone have been written for people with epilepsy in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [27574]

Mr. Malone: Information about the use of phenobarbitone products is contained in the table. It is not possible, however, from central data to identify the clinical conditions for which the drug has been prescribed.

Notes:

1. The data are from the prescription costs analysis system.
2. The data for 1990 are not consistent with data from 1991 onwards. Figures for 1990 are based on fees and on a sample of one in 200 prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors only. Figures from 1991 are based on items and cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists, appliance contractors, dispensing doctors and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered.
3. Prescriptions dispensed in hospitals and private prescriptions are not included.

DNA Analysis

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the results of the DNA analysis undertaken by the Forensic Science Service of tissue samples allegedly taken from a patient who died in Manchester allegedly of AIDS in 1959, which were provided to it by Central Manchester Healthcare Trust and Professor David Ho of New York. [27816]

Mr. Sackville: Tests are under way on the tissue samples at the Home Office laboratory at Wetherby. It is hoped that the results will be available shortly. The hon. Member may wish to contact Professor S. A. Moore, chairman of the trust, for more information.

Intensive Care Units, Yorkshire

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds there are in intensive care units in Leeds infirmary, St. James' hospital, Leeds, Pinderfields hospital, Wakefield. [27819]

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the Northern and Yorkshire regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. John Greetham, chairman of Northern and Yorkshire regional health authority, for details.

Infant Feeding

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated expenditure for 1995 for producing information on infant and young child feeding (a) for families and (b) those involved in the field of infant and young nutrition. [27928]

Mr. Sackville: As a wide range of organisations may produce such materials, I am unable to estimate expenditure.

The Department of Health spent £53,000 in producing materials in support of this year's National Breastfeeding Awareness Week held last month. We contributed £50,000 towards the costs of the "Invest in Breast" training programme produced jointly by the Royal College of Midwives and Health Visitors Association which was launched on 25 May. We provided some £55,000 in 1994–95, under the section 64 grant aid programme, to the three voluntary groups concerned with informing and supporting mothers about breastfeeding.

The Health Education Authority expended £475,000 in 1994–95 on materials—leaflets and such popular books as "Birth to Five" and "The Pregnancy Book"—which provide information on breastfeeding and other aspects of infant and young child feeding.

Bounty Packs

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations are in place covering the distribution of bounty packs to nursing mothers in hospital. [27929]

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 5 April at columns 1211–12. National health service units decide locally whether they wish to permit the distribution of bounty packs and similar packs to new mothers in their care. The packs and their contents must comply with the relevant provisions on advertising and promotion of baby milks in the Infant Formula and Follow-on Formula Regulations 1995.

Homeless Mentally Ill Initiative

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish the evaluation of the homeless mentally ill initiative's clinical teams. [28848]

Mr. Bowis: The report, "The Homeless Mentally Ill Initiative—An Evaluation of Four Clinical Teams", is being published today and copies are available in the Library. I am grateful to Professor Craig and his colleagues for their work.

The homeless mentally ill initiative, organised by the Department of Health in collaboration with the Mental Health Foundation, was launched in 1990. It provides multidisciplinary community mental health teams to identify homeless mentally ill people in London who are not already in touch with statutory services. The teams assess clients' needs, provide medical and social support, and refer them to appropriate statutory services. The initiative also provides specialist hostels with a high level of care which meets immediate housing needs and offers rehabilitation before clients move on to more permanent accommodation. There is also provision of supported move-on accommodation with capital funding from the Housing Corporation.

The Government have invested over £20 million in this initiative. The five outreach teams, the eight hostels with two more to come and the move-on supported accommodation that is beginning to come on stream have begun to transform lives. It is estimated that between October 1994 and March 1995 about 115 people were rehoused, either into the specialist high care hostels or into permanent accommodation.

The report acknowledges the need for multidisciplinary outreach teams and comments favourably on the high level of direct client interaction that they have been able to attain. It also comments on the positive view taken of the teams by the majority of agencies with which they work.

Professor Craig's report contains a number of recommendations. We shall be studying these in detail and considering what action can be taken to build on the successes that he has identified.

Hyperactive Disorder

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the amount of grant aid given by her Department to (a) the hyperactive children's support group and (b) other voluntary organisations concerned with the treatment of attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder for each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [26581]

Mr. Bowis: The hyperactive children's support group received grant aid from the Department of £7,000 each year from 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1995. The grant has been renewed at an amount totalling £19,000 over three years beginning on 1 April 1995. We make no other grants to organisations dealing exclusively with the treatment of attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder.

GP Fundholding, Cumbria

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholders there are in the county of Cumbria. [27797]

Mr. Malone: From April 1995, there have been 16 fundholding practices in Cumbria.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimate of the cost in cash to health authorities in Cumbria with particular reference to the budget of the West Cumbria Health Trust arising out of individual general practices acquiring fundholding status. [27798]

Mr. Malone: Fundholding general practitioners, like health authority purchasers, are allocated their patients' fair share of national health service resources based on need. It is for NHS trusts to respond to the requirements of purchasers so that services for patients are improved.

Hospital League Tables

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much is being spent promoting the current year's hospital league tables to the editors of regional newspapers. [28000]

Mr. Sackville: Money is not being spent on promoting the league tables. Regional editors are being given the option of receiving the material in hard copy or disk format. They have also been invited to a briefing on the arrangements for publishing the tables.

Mental Health

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were discharged from mental hospitals in each region in each of the last 10 years. [27966]

Mr. Bowis: The number of finished consultant episodes—ordinary admissions and day cases combined—from national health service hospitals in England by main diagnosis of mental disorder and by region of treatment is shown in the table. Data prior to April 1988 are not on a comparable basis.

Special Transitional Grants

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which district auditors have yet to submit audited returns of expenditure by local authorities of the 1993–94 special transitional grant. [27967]

Mr. Bowis: None. All the audited returns detailing community care spending in 1993–94 have now been received.

Home Care Services

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on home care services by each authority in each of the last 10 years, expressed in 1995 prices. [28026]

Mr. Bowis: The information, expressed in 1994–95 prices, will be placed in the Library. These figures should be treated with caution as local authorities differ from year to year in their treatment of administrative and other overhead costs. Year-on-year variations may also reflect changes in types of home care service and changes of contract. New guidelines for future social services accounting have been drawn up by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy and the local authorities, which should result in greater consistency of reporting. Estimates have had to be made for some years for Greenwich, Hackney, Lambeth, Newham, Berkshire, Ealing, Harringey, Sheffield, Manchester and Wakefield.

Kirklees Metropolitan Council

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been made available to Kirklees metropolitan council for alteration and adaptations for 1995–96 to residents' homes to allow them to stay longer in their own homes rather than in residential care; and what were the figures in each of the last 10 years. [27856]

Mr. Bowis: Expenditure by Kirklees metropolitan council up to 1993–94, the latest year available, is shown in the table.

Contract Sanctions

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what sanctions can be applied against a contractor for failing to comply fully with the specifications of a contract awarded to it by an NHS trust hospital following the market testing process. [28383]

Mr. Sackville: This depends on the terms of the contract, and on the nature of the failure to meet specified requirements. Minor or occasional failures would normally be resolved in discussion. In more serious and continuing cases sanctions might include premature termination of contract, withholding of payments pending satisfactory meeting of work requirements, or legal action for breach of contract.

Royal Liverpool University Hospital

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 applied to the contracting out and sub-contracting out of the estates department by the Royal Liverpool University hospital; and what stipulation the contract awarded made in respect of the provision of a pension scheme for those employees transferred. [28385]

Mr. Sackville: I understand that the award of the contract was on the basis that staff would transfer to the new contractor under the provisions of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981. Pension scheme benefits for old age, invalidity and widowhood are explicitly excluded from the transfer arrangements, but the two parties to the contract have ensured accrued pension rights are fully protected and that the new employer's pension arrangements are based on the same employers contribution as the previous national health service scheme. The Royal Liverpool University hospital took legal advice that the transfer accorded fully with all statutory responsibilities under United Kingdom and European law.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received concerning the guidelines and procedures followed by the Royal Liverpool University hospital NHS trust in contracting out its estates department to Mowlem and the subsequent sub-contracting out of the department of Lorne Stewart. [28382]

Mr. Sackville: I have received representations from two hon. Members on behalf of individual constituents whose employment transferred as a result of the award of contract in this case. I am satisfied that the parties concerned have made every effort to meet all liabilities arising under United Kingdom and European law.

NHS Staff, Southwark

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) men and (b) women have been employed within the national health service in the London borough of Southwark as part of the South East London health authority in each of the last five years. [28352]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally in the form requested.

NHS Trust, London

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will state the defined interest or repayment terms on the interest bearing debt and public dividend capital of (a) Newham Healthcare NHS Trust and (b) the Royal Hospitals of St. Bartholomew's, Royal London, and London Chest Hospital Trust together with their respective payments for the years 1975–76 in respect of (i) 6 per cent. of their origination capital debt, (ii) interest and repayment of their interest-bearing debt and (iii) public dividend capital, stating the purpose of each type of payment. [28380]

Mr. Sackville: The two national health service trusts in question were established as at 1 April 1994. Information is therefore only available for 1994–95.

An NHS trust's originating capital debt is divided between a loan—on which interest shall be paid—and public dividend capital. The debt is divided on a 50:50 basis and the interest-bearing element is repayable in equal instalments over 25 years at a fixed rate of interest. The interest rate applicable to NHS trusts established on 1 April 1994 is 8.125 per cent. The actual value of the originating debt of the trusts in question is given in Statutory Instrument 1995 No. 407, dated 20 February 1995.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State may determine the dividend which is to be payable at any time on the public dividend capital element of the trust's originating debt.

The NHS executive's records show that the following payments were made in 1994–95.

	Newham £	Royal London hospitals £
Principal	377,773	1,649,000
Interest	1,469,530	6,409,556
Dividend	720,472	2,842,485

These figures are provisional and subject to audit.

Contract income received by a trust will include a 6 per cent. return on its relevant net assets from which the trust remunerates its debt. The actual return achieved by trusts in 1994–95 will be reported in their annual accounts which will be available following audit no later than 30 September.

Veterinary Medicines

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the use of Baytril in farm animals and the incidence of bacterial resistance in humans; and if she will make a statement on the subject. [26783]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

No specific research has been commissioned into the use of Baytril in farm animals. The Veterinary Products Committee keeps the development of antibiotic resistance in humans and animals under close review. It has recently confirmed, in the light of the latest information, that no change in current licensing policy is required: new antibiotics should not necessarily be precluded from therapeutic use in animals, but their prophylactic use should be discouraged. The committee will continue to consider each case on its merits.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Biodiversity

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action Her Majesty's Government are taking to train sufficient scientists in methods relating to the identification of species to enable the United Kingdom to fulfil obligations under the biodiversity convention; and what assessment has been made of the shortage of taxonomists. [26328]

Mr. Horam: In line with the convention, the Darwin initiative is funding about 30 projects relating to taxonomy costing over £3 million. Those projects involve the training of over 400 developing country scientists.

Responsibility for assessing and meeting the UK's needs more generally rests primarily with the scientific community in universities, institutions such as the natural history museum, and the research councils. The Natural Environment Research Council launched an initiative in 1992 to revitalise taxonomic research and training relevant to the environmental sciences, and currently supports students, fellows, and projects in the field. I understand that Edinburgh university and the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh have introduced an MSc "Biodiversity and Taxonomy in Plants" which has proved successful in attracting students from home and abroad as well as research council support. The UK Systematics Forum, funded by the Office of Science and Technology, now brings together members from across the country to investigate, among other things, ways of increasing the opportunities for training systematists.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what measures Her Majesty's Government have taken to implement the recommendations of Lord Dainton's report on biological taxonomy. [26331]

Mr. Horam: The Government's response Cm 2243 to the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee report on systematic biology research was published in June 1993. Since then, the Office of Science and Technology has set up the UK Systematics Forum and commissioned an independent review of the UK's microbial culture collections.

The Natural Environment Research Council, through its initiative in taxonomy research and training, is currently funding six research fellowships over a five-year period at a total cost of just over £1 million. These fellowships are eligible for associated research grants, for which a further £665,000 has been committed over the same period.

Oral Scientific Histories

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his letter DH/94/M/1078 to the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 7 December 1994, what is the outcome of his investigation into the desirability of oral scientific histories. [26327]

Mr. David Hunt: I agree that the history of science can be enriched by oral scientific histories.

Investigations have established that a number of bodies are engaged in making such histories, including the Royal College of Physicians, the British Library, the Physiological Society and the Biochemical Society. BBC television has some recorded interviews with Nobel Laureates and other scientists who have made a significant contribution across many fields. I have asked the Office of Science and Technology to pursue the issue of oral scientific histories further with the national sound archive of the British Library.

TREASURY

Summer Economic Forecast

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the expected publication date for the Treasury's summer economic forecast. [24495]

Mr. Aitken [pursuant to his answer, 18 May 1995, c. 307]: The Treasury's summer economic forecast will be published on 28 June 1995. Copies will be available from the Vote Office at 11 am on that day.

Public Sector Investment

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made as to how much public sector investment will change over the next three years, as measured by public sector asset creation; and if he will estimate by how much public sector investment has changed in real terms since 1989–90. [27882]

Mr. Aitken: The latest available public sector investment figures are published in table 1.7 of the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96". These cover outturn and plans from 1989–90 to 1997–98 in real and cash terms. In addition, the private finance initiative will harness private sector resources leading to more and better infrastructure projects and improved services.

Income Tax

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new income tax payers recorded in the past two years were previously non-income tax payers of pension age. [27589]

Sir George Young [holding answer 9 June 1995]: There are about 200,000 fewer taxpayers aged over 65 in 1995–96 than there would have been if the 1993–94 tax regime had been indexed.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the categories of goods and services which currently bear value added tax at the rate of 17.5 per cent. together with the annual revenue yield from each of the listed categories. [28142]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 12 June 1995]: VAT legislation does not identify separate categories of goods and services on which VAT is chargeable at 17.5 per cent. but specifies that it should be charged on any supply of goods or services in the United Kingdom made by a taxable person in the course or furtherance of a business, except for supplies of fuel and power for domestic or charity use which are chargeable at 8 per cent., and the zero rates and exemptions listed in schedules 8 and 9 to the Value Added Tax Act 1994.

It is not possible to provide figures for the revenue yield from each individual category of expenditure.

Incapacitated Spouses

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the operation of the additional personal allowance for married men with an incapacitated wife. [28344]

Sir George Young: All personal allowances will be kept under review in the run-up to the Budget. In general, the Government believe that it is better to help both men and women with incapacitated spouses through the social security systems rather than through tax reliefs.

Wild Flowers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Customs and Excise, in examining dried flowers entering Britain, differentiate those specimens collected from the wild and those originating from proven sustainable sources. [26337]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no restrictions on the importation of the dried flowers currently traded, whether wild taken or not, and customs does not, therefore, seek to make such a differentiation.

Take-home Pay

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the level of take-home pay in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other EC countries; and if he will list the evidence on which such figures are based. [26487]

Sir George Young: Taking into account the cost of living, estimated average take-home pay for an unmarried UK production worker, under Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development definitions, is higher than in all other EU countries, except Luxembourg. Average take-home pay plus child benefit—or the equivalent in other countries—for a married couple with two children is also higher in the UK than in other EU countries except Luxembourg, Belgium and the former West Germany. These comparisons are based on figures published in "The Tax/Benefit Position of Production Workers Annual Report 1990–1993", OECD 1994, adjusted using purchasing power parity exchange rates, also published by OECD.

PRIME MINISTER

Scott Inquiry

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister if he will undertake an investigation into the leaking of sections of the Scott inquiry report; and if he will publish the terms of reference of the investigation; how it will be conducted; and by whom. [28379]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 12 June, Official Report, column 374.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 13 June. [26744]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 13 June 1995. [26745]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records exist of the mortality levels and cancer incidence in British nuclear test participants present at Grapple Y. [26663]

Mr. Soames: Personnel present during the test codenamed Grapple Y were among more than 20,000 British nuclear test veterans for whom mortality statistics were collated by the National Radiological Protection Board. The NRPB studies found no overall excess of mortality or incidence of cancer among test participants.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the National Radiological Protection Board has undertaken a study into the incidence of cancer in the children of nuclear test participants in the 1950s and 1960s. [26667]

Mr. Soames: No such study has been undertaken. Studies by the National Radiological Protection Board have shown no overall excess of death or cancer among British test participants. There is therefore no reason to expect an excess of death or cancer among their children.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if personnel involved in the decontamination of HMS Tracker were included in the National Radiological Protection Board studies into British nuclear test participants. [26749]

Mr. Soames: Our records indicate that some decontamination work was carried out by the crew of HMS Tracker before the ship had returned to the UK. The ship's crew were included in the National Radiological Protection Board studies. We have been unable to trace any records of decontamination work that may have been carried out following the ship's return to the UK.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the National Radiological Protection Board study into the effects of nuclear tests upon service personnel took into account potential variations arising from (a) whether tests were of fission or fusion, (b) detonation yields, (c) location of tests, (d) duration of service in test areas and (e) the number of tests witnessed by each individual. [26665]

Mr. Soames: The studies undertaken by the National Radiological Protection Board looked at cancer among test participants for each of the operations that comprised the atmospheric test programme. This examined tests of different types, yields and locations. For no operation was there a statistically significant excess of cancer deaths. Analyses were performed of those groups with the potential for radiation exposure and of those with recorded external doses, as well as the duties undertaken by participants who subsequently developed leukaemia or multiple myeloma.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mortality statistics are held by the National Radiological Protection Board for personnel serving on HMS Tracker during British nuclear tests. [26661]

Mr. Soames: Personnel serving on HMS Tracker during the nuclear tests for which that ship was deployed in a support role were among more than 20,000 British nuclear test veterans for whom mortality statistics were collated by the National Radiological Protection Board. The NRPB studies found no overall excess of mortality among test veterans.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why Mr. Andrew Dickson of Wakefield, West Yorkshire, a British nuclear test participant, received two body scans from the National Radiological Protection Board. [26668]

Mr. Soames: That is a matter between Mr. Dickson and the National Radiological Protection Board.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how British nuclear test participants, not issued with film badges, have been monitored for potential radioactivity. [26690]

Mr. Soames: Film badges were issued only to those personnel who were considered likely to receive a measurable dose of radiation during the tests. It was considered unnecessary to monitor those who were not issued with film badges, as they would not have been exposed to significant levels of radiation.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what investigations have been conducted into the incidence of cataracts in service personnel attending British nuclear tests in the 1950s and 1960s. [26666]

Mr. Soames: As more radiation exposure would be required to produce an excess of cataracts in the population than to produce an excess of cancer, and as the National Radiological Protection Board studies have shown no excess of cancer among British nuclear test veterans, no specific study of cataract incidence has been undertaken for my Department. I understand, however, that the NRPB is itself conducting a small study in this area.

Anthrax

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent information he has received on the discovery of anthrax-contaminated seed stocks in the Irish sea. [26700]

Mr. Soames: My Department is unaware of any anthrax-contaminated seed stocks being discovered in the Irish sea.

HMS Royal Arthur

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the cost to date in (a) rent loss, (b) security patrols, (c) boarding up, (d) depreciation and (e) vandalism in respect of empty accommodation for families and single persons at HMS Royal Arthur. [26848]

Mr. Soames: HMS Royal Arthur was previously used as a training establishment for naval petty officers and the only permanent accommodation was in the wardroom. There was no family accommodation on the site. The site is at present being sold subject to contract. To date, there has been no loss of rent, and no additional costs arising from security patrols; the site has not been boarded up; no assessment has been made of depreciation; and only minimal costs have been incurred as a result of damage by vandals.

Low Flying

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 20 April, Official Report, column 856, when the investigation into the low flying incident over Barnoldswick and Earby in January are likely to be completed. [26958]

Mr. Soames: The RAF police have now completed their investigation. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State wrote to the hon. Member on 7 June 1995 setting out their conclusions. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Washington Flights

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost by year for the last three years for the RAF's twice-weekly VC10 service between Brize Norton and Washington, USA. [27395]

Mr. Soames: The approximate costs of operating the VC10 service between Brize Norton and Washington, Dulles airport, for the last three financial years are as follows:

Financial year	Cost £
1993–94	5,900,000
1992–93	5,500,000

Note:
These figures reflect the cost of an average flight extrapolated over the year.

Naval Exercises

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all naval exercises in United Kingdom waters in each of the last five years; which of these were in the Clyde or off the coast of south-west Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [27384]

Mr. Soames: Details of naval exercises in United Kingdom waters are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, during the last 12 months there have been 23 exercises in the Clyde and off the coast of south-west Scotland involving a combination of ships, submarines and aircraft taking part in continuation sea training.

Minefield Practice, Scotland

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent proposals have been considered for the use of areas in the firth of Clyde and upper Loch Fyne for minefield practice; what discussions are planned with fishing organisations on these proposals; and if he will make a statement. [27383]

Mr. Soames: Mine countermeasures actively in the Clyde area is planned to increase later this year following the move from Rosyth to Faslane of the third mine countermeasures squadron and the small ships operational training staff. A series of constructive discussions with fishing organisations on the location of this activity has been held, and further talks are due to take place later this month.

Tri-service Exercises

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all tri-service exercises in the United Kingdom mainland in each of the last five years; and which of these were located in part in south-west Scotland. [27835]

Mr. Soames: The MOD plans to conduct one major tri-service exercise each year under a series title of "Purple". The exercise may or may not be conducted wholly in the United Kingdom. Exercises follow a four-year cycle of three command post exercises or CPXs followed by a full live exercise in the fourth year. The live exercise in the period, exercise Purple Monarch, 1992, was reduced to a command post exercise following the Gulf war and was conducted in southern England and Gibraltar.

On a small scale, but also planned and conducted on a tri-service basis for specialist units, is a series of exercises termed Minibus. This series again follows a four-year cycle. The live exercise in the period was held in 1994 and the geographic area used included parts of south-west Scotland. Also planned and executed in 1994 was a bi-service amphibious exercise Royal Dawn—which included a landing phase by Royal Marines on the Isle of Lewis.

The annual tri-service Purple exercises for the five-year period were:

Year	Exercise	Description
1991	Purple Victory	CPX
1992	Purple Monarch	Live exercise planned but CPX conducted
1993	Purpose Horizon	CPX
1994	Purple Nova	CPX
1995	Purple Zodiac	CPX

Vehicle Movements

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the journeys that vehicle registration number 16 AY 51 has made in the last 12 months, with dates; from what location the journey started; what was the location of its destination; and what cargo it was carrying. [28246]

Mr. Soames: It is not our policy to disclose details of particular military movements.

Service Accommodation

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, how many units of accommodation have been sold by his Department since April 1993. [27559]

Mr. Soames: Between 1 April 1993 and 31 March 1995 my Department sold 2,925 dwellings.

Territorial Army Barracks, Cardiff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of reconstructing the Park street territorial army barracks, Cardiff and the date on which construction (a) commenced and (b) was completed. [28310]

Mr. Soames: The Park street territorial army barracks in Cardiff was reconstructed between March 1993 and July 1994 at a total cost of £2,041,000.

Dartmouth Royal Regatta

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 193, if he will consider substituting a Royal Naval Reserve vessel as the guard ship at the Dartmouth royal regatta in place of a ship from the Royal Navy. [28458]

Mr. Soames: Following a major review of the RNR nearly two years ago, we concluded that the River class minesweepers then operated by them were no longer required, given the changed operational circumstances following the end of the cold war, and advances in mine warfare and technology. Accordingly, these vessels were withdrawn and RNR personnel now go to sea in all types of RN ships where they are employed alongside regular personnel in appropriate duties. The RNR no longer has any vessels of its own; therefore, it will not be possible for one to be sent to the Dartmouth royal regatta.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Services Ombudsman

Mr. Coe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the legal services ombudsman intends to publish his fourth annual report. [28621]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The legal services ombudsman will tomorrow publish his fourth annual report, and copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

State Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions since 1970 the Crown has claimed ownership of state papers held privately. [26969]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Crown made a claim of ownership of such papers in legal proceedings in relation to the Churchill papers. Information is not collated or available centrally where more informal action has been taken.

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make it his policy to allow Queen's counsel a choice between uttering an oath or making a declaration to match the procedure followed by hon. Members. [27204]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Only in Northern Ireland are newly-appointed Queen's counsel required to take an oath of allegiance. The matter is therefore one for the Supreme court authorities, in consultation with the General Council of the Bar of Northern Ireland, on whose advice my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland acts in these matters.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department who has discretion to modify the requirements of the oath and declaration required of Queen's counsel. [27206]

Mr. John M. Taylor: When in November 1972 the form of the declaration made by Queen's counsel in England and Wales was last modified, Her Majesty approved the Lord Chancellor's recommendation made with the agreement of the treasures of the four inns of court and the chairman of the General Council of the Bar.

The form of the declaration made upon admission to the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland is governed by the faculty regulations. Any amendment would require the approval of the Lord President of the Court of Session.

Any modification to the oath and declaration for Queen's counsel of Northern Ireland would be made by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in the exercise of the royal prerogative. He would be advised on the matter by the Supreme Court authorities after consultation with the General Council of the Bar of Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if the oath and declaration required of Queen's counsel are identical throughout the United Kingdom and Commonwealth. [27205]

Mr. John M. Taylor: In England and Wales a declaration is made by newly appointed Queen's counsel in the following terms:

> "I [A.B.] do sincerely promise and declare that I will well and truly serve Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second and all whom I may lawfully be called upon to serve in the office of one of Her Majesty's Counsel learned in the Law according to the best of my skill and understanding".

In Scotland, advocates make a declaration of allegiance when they are admitted to the faculty of advocates. The declaration, commonly known as the oath of allegiance, is made in the following terms:

> "I [A.B.] do solemnly, sincerely and truly declare and affirm that I shall bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, her heirs and successors according to law".

When an advocate is granted the status of Queen's counsel in Scotland, he or she is not required to make any further declaration. The arrangements for appointment as a Queen's counsel are made through correspondence and there is no ceremony associated with appointment to this rank.

In Northern Ireland, Queen's counsel take both an oath of allegiance and make a declaration., The oath of allegiance is in the following terms:

> "I, [A.B.] do swear by Almighty God that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second, her Heirs and Successors, according to law".

The declaration made is as follows:

> "I, [A.B.] do declare that well and truly I will serve the Queen as one of Her Counsel learned in the Law and truly counsel the Queen in Her matters, when I shall be called upon so to do, and duly and truly minister the Queen's matters and sue the Queen's process after the course of the Law, and after my cunning. I will duly in convenient time speed such matters as I may lawfully do which any person shall have to do in the Law against the Queen. And in all other respects I will be attendant to the Queen's matters when I be called thereto".

Different procedures for the recommendation and appointment of Queen's counsel subsist throughout the Commonwealth.

Legal Aid

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what is the amount of legal aid awarded to Kasim Mohamed Bacchus; and if he will make a statement about this award of legal aid; [26982]

(2) what plans he has to investigate the award of legal aid to Kasim Mohamed Bacchus. [26931]

Mr. John M. Taylor: A legal aid certificate was issued in favour of Mr. Bacchus on 13 April 1995 to cover contested matrimonial proceedings. The granting of legal aid in this case is now under investigation by the Legal Aid Board. No payments have been made from the legal aid fund to date.

If it is found that an assisted person has failed to disclose his true financial position, the legal aid certificate may be revoked. In those circumstances, the Legal Aid Board would be entitled to recover its costs in full. With regard to this particular case, I have received a full report from the chief executive of the Legal Aid Board. Because of the confidentiality provisions of the Legal Aid Act 1988, I cannot disclose further details of the information. I am, however, satisfied that the matters which were of concern to the trial judge have been fully investigated and that appropriate action will be taken.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what were the costs of legal aid paid to each defendant in the case of the Crown v. Abraham, Allen and Henderson; and how much was contributed by or recovered from each defendant. [27173]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Details of the legal aid payments made to lawyers acting on behalf of the three defendants, and the amounts recovered from each defendant, are as follows:

Defendant	Legal aid costs excluding VAT £	Amount recovered £
Abraham	124,541	546
Allen	122,112	52
Henderson	232,375	5,000

Search Warrants

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what powers he has to monitor the issuing of search warrants by magistrates; and how many representations he has received from the public in the last year concerning the issuing of search warrants; [27168]

(2) what percentage of police applications for search warrants is refused by magistrates; and what instructions and guidance are given to magistrates on how they should exercise their powers and responsibilities when requested for search warrants. [27167]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Statistics on the number of search warrants issued or refused are not recorded centrally. Individual cases are for magistrates to decide, and it is not for the Government to seek to advise them on the exercise of their judicial discretion. Home Office circular 88/1985 contained guidance on the statutory provisions for search warrants under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and was copied to the magistrates courts. I am not aware of any representations from the public about the issue of such warrants.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the statutory instrument which passed into law during 1994 which both implement EC measures and impose fines or other penalties together with the reference number of the EC measures concerned.

Mr. Newton: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Churchill Papers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to his answer of 24 May, Official Report, column 647, on the value of the Churchill archive (1) if he will disclose the identity of the dealer in the field of antiquarian books who provided an independent valuation. [26977]

(2) if he will place in the Library the valuation report on the Churchill archive; [26960]

(3) what consideration the national heritage memorial fund gave to taking second and third opinions of the monetary value of the papers. [26959]

Mr. Dorrell: These are matters for the national heritage memorial fund, which is an independent body. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member and to place copies of his letter in the Library of the House.

Ealing Film Studios

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what local and other employment opportunities he expects to be consequent upon the £2 million expenditure to save the Ealing film studios; and if he will make a statement. [27992]

Mr. Dorrell: It is too early to say precisely what employment opportunities will become available because the new owner of Ealing film studios, the National Film and Television School, is still in the process of considering how best to use the complex in future.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

11. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of the work force in the east midlands is engaged in temporary work; and how that compares with the record of other EU countries. [26517]

Mr. Oppenheim: The latest results from the labour force survey indicate that 6 per cent. of workers in the east midlands are engaged in temporary work. The share of temporary employment in Britain is among the lowest in the EC.

Job Opportunities (Former Mining Areas)

12. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assistance his Department is giving to encourage job opportunities in areas run down by mine closures; and if he will make a statement. [26718]

Mr. Paice: The Government's sound economic policies are the best way to create jobs. But, in addition, the Government have provided a £200 million special measures package for areas affected by pit closures.

Strikes

13. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current strike record in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Germany; and what were the figures in 1979. [26719]

Mr. Oppenheim: In 1979, the UK lost 29.5 million days, over 50 times Germany's total 0.5 million. In 1993, the United Kingdom and Germany each lost 600,000 days to labour disputes.

Social Chapter

14. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recent representations he has received from the hotel industry about the social chapter. [26720]

Miss Widdecombe: The Government's rejection of the social chapter is strongly supported by all sections of British industry, because of the damage it would have done to the UK economy and to jobs.

Unemployment

15. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the relationship between (a) educational and training qualifications and (b) unemployment. [26722]

Mr. Paice: Unemployment rates are lower among people who have qualifications.

25. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what, at the latest possible date, are the total figures for the unemployed in the United Kingdom; and what the figures were in June 1979. [26485]

Mr. Oppenheim: On the consistent, seasonally adjusted basis there were 2,327,900 people claiming unemployment-related benefits in April 1995 compared with 1,067,400 in June 1979.

Jobseeker's Allowance

16. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the effects of the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance in Nottinghamshire. [26723]

Miss Widdecombe: Jobseeker's allowance will help focus the efforts of unemployed people to find jobs and will provide incentives for them to get back to work.

Age Discrimination

17. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what monitoring he is doing of age discrimination in employment. [26724]

Miss Widdecombe: Age discrimination in the work place is well documented, as are the benefits of recruiting and retaining older workers—I refer the hon. Member, for example, to the Employment Gazette, April 1995, a copy of which is available in the Library. The campaign for older workers continues through voluntary means to persuade employers not to restrict jobs to a particular age group. I propose, through the advisory group on older workers, to evaluate the success of the campaign in due course.

19. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has assessed the success of the "Too Old, Who Says?" campaign; and if he will make a statement. [26479]

Miss Widdecombe: The success of the campaign for older workers is continually being assessed. There are encouraging signs that an increasing number of employers are reviewing age restrictions, and consequently providing greater numbers of job opportunities open to older workers.

Works Councils

18. Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on works councils. [26478]

Mr. Oppenheim: Works councils are one of the many forms of voluntary employee involvement practices used by employers in the UK.

The Government are firmly committed to the principle of employers informing and, where appropriate, consulting their employees about matters which affect them. But we believe that, to be successful, employee involvement must always be voluntary.

Inactivity Rates

20. Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on inactivity rates. [26480]

Mr. Oppenheim: Inactivity rates in the UK are low, and activity rates are high, compared to other EU countries. Our activity rate is higher than any of the other main EU countries, and higher than most of the rest, the exceptions being Denmark, Finland and Sweden.

Labour Costs

21. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of high non-wage labour costs on employment prospects. [26481]

Mr. Paice: Non-wage labour costs are lower in the United Kingdom than in most countries of the European Union. They contribute substantially to unit costs and therefore to the ability of a business to remain competitive and employ people.

Earnings Surveys, Isle of Wight

22. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has received from his officials in respect of the earnings surveys on the Isle of Wight. [26482]

Mr. Oppenheim: The published information from the regular earnings surveys is limited by the small size of the Isle of Wight population. The results of the new earnings surveys show that average weekly earnings in April 1994 were: £291 for full-time men; £237 for full-time women and £86 for part-time women.

Employment Service

23. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have been placed into work by the Employment Service in the past 12 years; and if he will make a statement. [26483]

Miss Widdecombe: Over the 12 years to December 1994 there were 20.9 million job placements in Great Britain by the Employment Service, and its predecessor the Manpower Services Commission. In 1995–96, I am asking the ES to place a record 1.9 million people into work.

South Thames Training and Enterprise Council

24. Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the receivers of South Thames TEC. [26484]

Mr. Paice: Employment Department officials meet regularly with the receiver.

Youth Unemployment

26. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what initiatives are being pursued to combat the problem of youth unemployment; and if he will make a statement. [26486]

Mr. Paice: The Government guarantee a training place to all 16 and 17-year-olds not in education or employment. Modern apprenticeships, which aim to increase the number of young people training to higher levels, will add to the comprehensive range of education and training initiatives already available.

Employment Rights

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to discuss statutory employment rights with trade unions. [24952]

Mr. Oppenheim: I met the general secretary of the MSF last November. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Minister of State and I have each met the general secretary of the TUC on separate occasions this year. I will shortly be meeting the hon. Member and a group of Rolls-Royce convenors.

Further Education

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the numbers leaving the work-related further education programme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all. [27528]

Mr. Paice: None. The work-related further education programme funded developments in further education institutions to improve responsiveness to the needs of employers and individuals. There was no element of direct support for individuals.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people attended and left the work-related further education scheme in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme. [27454]

Mr. Paice: None. The work-related further education programme funded developments in further education institutions to improve responsiveness to the needs of employers and individuals. There was no element of direct support for individuals.

TVEI

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people attended and left the technical and vocational education initiative in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme. [27453]

Mr. Paice: The technical and vocational education initiative is a national programme through which local education authorities introduce a range of measures in schools and colleges to help prepare young people aged 14 to 19 for working life. It is institutions, rather than individuals, which take part in the initiative; students do not "attend" or "leave" the programme. However, it is possible to estimate the number of students directly affected by TVEI funding.

Academic year	Number of students (thousands)
1983–84	4
1984–85	19
1985–86	38
1986–87	62
1987–88	117
1988–89	335
1989–90	592
1990–91	895
1991–92	1,053
1992–93	1,278
1993–94	1,281

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the numbers leaving the technical and vocational education initiative as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all. [27527]

Mr. Paice: The technical and vocational education initiative is a national programme through which local education authorities introduce a range of measures in schools and colleges to help prepare young people aged 14 to 19 for working life. It is institutions, rather than individuals, which take part in the initiative, therefore information is not available in the form requested.

Wages Councils

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table using data from the 1994 new earnings survey relating to former wages council industries in the format of tables 30 to 53 of the 1933 new earnings survey, part B. [27243]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 9 June 1995]: As information on whether employees would have been covered by a wages board or council was not recorded by the 1994 new earnings survey, it is not possible to provide the requested tables.

Unemployed Persons (Warnings) Decisions

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many (a) decisions, (b) disallowances and (c) warning letters, were issued in each region and Great Britain as a whole in each quarter since April 1990 in respect of those actively seeking employment. [28118]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 13 June 1995:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of decisions and disallowances in respect of actively seeking employment and the number of warning letters issued since April 1990.

The statistics you asked for on adjudication officers' decisions on actively seeking employment for each region, and for Great Britain as a whole, are contained in the quarterly summary entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions". Copies are held in the Library of the House. The latest available information relates to the quarter ended March 1995.

I enclose a table showing by region, and for Great Britain, the number of warning letters issued to clients whose jobsearch activity was not considered to be adequate. This information is available for the period up to March 1995.

I hope this is helpful.

Temporary Contracts

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has for setting a time limit on open-ended temporary contracts for employees. [28296]

Mr. Oppenheim: None. Contractual agreements are a matter for the parties concerned.

Personal Protection Equipment

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received concerning the Personal Protection Equipment at Work Regulations 1992 and their effect on the Sikh community; and if he will make a statement. [26617]

Mr. Oppenheim: We have received a number of representations on this issue, to which we have responded individually. The Personal Protective Equipment at Work Regulations 1992 implement the use of personal protective equipment directive.

Youth Training

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much is currently being spent on training schemes for 16 to 18-year-olds; how many are covered by the schemes; what changes to the schemes he is planning; and if he will make a statement. [26746]

Mr. Paice: The planned expenditure on youth training and modern apprenticeships for 1995–96 is £680 million, which will cover 150,000 first-time entrants; 243,000 will be in training during that year.

A wide range of initiatives is already available for young people aged 16 to 18 to improve their employment prospects and achievement of vocational qualifications. We are currently working with employers to develop modern apprenticeships and accelerated modern apprenticeships, to increase the number of young people training and to increase the number achieving qualifications at supervisory and technician levels.

Since September 1994, 1,440 young people have commenced training in modern apprenticeship prototypes. It is expected that about 50 frameworks will be available for introduction across England from September 1995.

Construction Industry

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the estimated number of people employed in the construction industry within each region for England and Wales for each year since 1988. [28121]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Employees in the construction industry by standard region: December 1988—December 1994

Graduate Unemployment

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 98, if he will provide comparable information on graduate unemployment for each of the last five years. [28088]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 12 June 1995]: Regional information on graduate unemployment, on the International Labour Organisation definition, is given in the following table:

Sewage Disposal

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 104, if he will list by area the visits undertaken by the health and safety executive inspectors to sewage disposal sites last year. [28381]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 105, how many of the Health and Safety

Executive inspectors' visits to sewage disposal activities in 1994–95 were related to the maintenance of the existing sewer network. [28172]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 104, when he expects to have finalised the guidance package on occupational health risks from sewage. [28171]

Mr. Oppenheim: The guidance package on occupational health risks from sewage is expected to be finalised towards the end of July 1995.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 105, how many of the 104 visits to sewage disposal activities in 1994–95 resulted in (a) satisfactory or (b) critical reports. [28173]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Police Discipline Records (Disclosure)

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Attorney-General if he will place in the Library a copy of the (a) advice issued in August 1992 to chief officers of police by the Director of Public Prosecutions concerning the disclosure of police discipline records, pursuant to the case of R v. Edwards, and (b) practical instructions introduced in January 1993 concerning the same matter; and which advice and practical instructions were referred to in the Crown Prosecution Service's annual report for 1992–93 at paragraph 5.1. [27439]

The Attorney-General: The guidance concerning the disclosure of police discipline records and the case of R v. Edwards was issued on 5 October 1992 and is referred to in paragraph 5.3 of the Crown Prosecution Service's annual report for 1992–93 rather than paragraph 5.1 of the report which refers to the director's advice on disclosure matters generally. Its purpose was to ensure a consistent approach to the disclosure of potentially sensitive information about police officer's disciplinary records.

Advice given by the Director of Public Prosecutions to the police is usually treated as confidential. However, because of the interest and importance of this subject, the advice on these issues was circulated to professional bodies and others in the criminal justice system and I have placed a copy in the Library.

The practical instructions to CPS staff referred to at paragraph 5.1 of the report supplement the separate advice on disclosure matters generally. They are confidential.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Director General of Gas Supply

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made in discussions with the Director General of Gas Supply about her remuneration. [27562]

Mr. Heseltine: In September 1993, Ms Spottiswoode was appointed Director General of Gas Supply with effect from 1 November 1993 at the advertised salary of £70,000. This has risen to £73,725 through annual increases of 2.75 per cent. in April 1994 and 2.5 per cent. in April 1995. She was allowed to hold up to two non-executive directorships, subject to my approval and so long as any appointment did not involve a greater call on her official time than I judged appropriate. Her pension arrangements were to be broadly equivalent to the civil service pension scheme arrangements.

Subsequently, in December 1993, in response to the MMC report on gas supply, I announced my decision, subject to passage of the necessary legislation, to require the separation of British Gas trading and gas transport activities, and to accelerate to 1996–98 the introduction of competition into the domestic market. In November 1994, the Government announced that they would bring forward the necessary gas legislation in the current parliamentary Session.

The Gas Bill would substantively increase the director general's responsibilities and work load. Apart from the licensing of new domestic gas suppliers, shippers and gas transporters, she is being given new powers under the Competition and Service (Utilities) Act 1992 in respect of the industrial and commercial gas market. She is also taking over the DTI's responsibility for regulation of gas meters and gas quality.

Against this background, and following discussions with the director general, her salary is to be increased to £90,000 backdated to November 1994 when the decision on legislation was taken. It has also been agreed that she will be able to hold only one non-executive directorship, which will involve an annual commitment of not more than 12 to 20 days; and I shall need to be satisfied that the appointment will not prejudice the performance of her functions as director general.

There have been separate discussions on pension arrangements. The director general has opted to make her own independent pension arrangements to which Ofgas will contribute a sum equivalent to 19.5 per cent. of salary. This is broadly the cost of the comparable pension provision under civil service arrangements.

The remuneration of each utility regulator is a matter for individual negotiation. Information on the current salaries of the regulators of the main utilities is being placed in the Library of the House by the respective sponsoring Departments. I believe that overall the proposed changes in Ms Spottiswoode's remuneration are reasonable and fair in terms of both the changes to her own job and the remuneration of other regulators.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those compliance cost assessments published during the latest six-month period available. [28845]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Since April 1993 the Government have required Departments to prepare and publish compliance cost assessments with all proposed legislation presented to Parliament to assess their impact on business costs. This includes a special test of the impact on small businesses. CCAs are central to the Government's deregulation initiative and are a vital part of the decision-making process. They are used to help parliamentary consideration of regulatory proposals and to give business the opportunity to respond to such proposals.

A command paper listing 104 CCAs published between 1 July 1994 to 31 December 1994 has been presented to Parliament today by the President of the Board of Trade. Copies of the CCAs listed are available in the Libraries of the House. This is the second such Command Paper; the first listing CCA published between November 1993 and June 1994 was published on 15 December 1994 Cm 2719. Further command papers listing CCAs published in the preceding six-month period will be published at six-monthly intervals.

Balance of Trade

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each country the United Kingdom's crude trade balance in the latest year for which figures are available. [27770]

Mr. Needham: Information is published by the Central Statistical Office in Business Monitors MM20 and MM20A, "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", which are available in the Library of the House.

Import Penetration

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the import penetration ratios in (a) computer equipment (b) refrigerators, (c) fridge freezers, (d) washing machines, (e) microwave ovens, (f) colour television sets, (g) video recorders and video disc players, (h) electric kettles, (i) dry irons, (j) steam irons and (k) facsimile transmission equipment, in the latest year for which figures are available [27769]

Mr. Needham: Available figures showing import penetration ratios in these products are published in UK markets annual reports Nos. 60, 61 and 68 for 1993, which are available in the Library of the House.

Disused Mine Shafts

Dr. Berry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the Coal Authority's records of disused mine shafts in the Kingwood-Bristol area. [27703]

Mr. Page [holding answer 12 June 1995]: This is a matter for the Coal Authority.

Intellectual Property Rights

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what help the United Kingdom gives to developing countries in legal expertise in drawing up legal instruments for intellectual property rights. [26340]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Most of the assistance in drawing up intellectual property legislation given to developing countries is provided through the World Intellectual Property Organisation and the United Kingdom makes substantial contributions to the work of this organisation. Officials from developing countries responsible for the introduction of new legislation often make study visits to the UK Patent Office to discuss issues with my officials. My officials have also taken part in missions to developing countries and have frequently corresponded with their opposite numbers for the same purpose.

Crown Post Offices

Dr. Godman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many Crown post offices there were in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in 1992; and how many there are currently. [27312]

Mr. Heseltine: I understand from the Post Office that the information requested is as follows:

Number of Crown post offices

	March 1992	March 1995
Inverclyde	2	2
Strathclyde	44	32
Scotland	92	60

Consultation about the conversion of the two Crown post offices in Inverclyde to agency status is currently in progress. The number of post offices in Scotland offering the full range of services increased from 194 in March 1992 to 202 in March 1995.

Executives' Pay

Mr. Khabra: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on executive pay. [26470]

Mr. Hall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to control the remuneration of senior executives. [26721]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Executive salary levels and remuneration packages are matters for individual companies and their shareholders. It is not for Government to determine salaries in the private sector or to limit companies' ability to pay competitive salaries. The Government look forward to seeing the recommendations of the Greenbury committee on best practice in determining and disclosing executive remuneration.

Manufacturing Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the United Kingdom share of exports of manufactures by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries in 1994; what was the corresponding percentage in 1979; and in which years since then the percentage has been lower than in 1994. [27432]

Mr. Needham: Information on the UK share of exports of manufactures by the OECD countries for 1994 is not yet available. In 1979, the UK share of exports of manufactures by the OECD countries was 8.9 per cent.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give the United Kingdom percentage share of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries in the latest year and latest quarter and in the third quarter of 1977. [27433]

Mr. Needham: The information requested is published in table D1 of the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" and is available from the Central Statistical Office's central shared database, which can be accessed from the Library of the House.

Overseas Commercial Posts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade pursuant to his answer of 24 May, Official Report, column *644,*concerning the effectiveness of commercial posts overseas in increasing exports, from what date United Kingdom exports to India have increased by 50 per cent.; what were the equivalent increases or decreases in exports to India by Germany, Japan, the USA, France and Italy; and if he will publish the percentage change in Indian imports since that date from the six countries to the latest annual quarter, and the corresponding change in exports from the six to India. [27495]

Mr. Needham: The following table sets out figures for UK-India bilateral trade in the period 1992–94 and the comparable figures for our main competitors.

G6 exports to India 1992, 1994 and percentage change

	1992 £ million	1994 £ million	Percentage change
Germany	1,034	1,351	30.6
Japan	847	1,338	57.8
USA	1.091	1,500	37.5
France	384	533	38.9
Italy	276	462	67.5
UK	944	1,311	38.9

G6 imports from India 1992, 1994 and percentage change

	1992 £ million	1994 £ million	Percentage Change
Germany	982	1,367	39.3
Japan	1,161	1,731	49.0
USA	2,155	3,462	60.6
France	410	586	43.1
Italy	437	659	50.7
UK	860	1,288	49.7

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 24 May, Official Report, column 644, concerning the effectiveness of commercial posts overseas in increasing exports, if the increase in exports made possible by Action Japan or the Indo-British Partnership is likely to exceed (a) their foreign exchange cost, (b) the total cost to Government and (c) the benefit of a 1 per cent. fall in the real value of sterling relative to those of the United Kingdom's competitors in the relevant markets. [27504]

Mr. Needham: The information is not available.

Manufacturing Trade

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the terms of trade for manufacturers in the three months to (a) February 1995, (b) February 1990 and (c) February 1976; and if he will include for each date the figure for (i) import penetration and (ii) the UK share of exports of manufactures by the main manufacturing countries. [27496]

Mr. Needham: The terms of trade for manufactures in the periods requested were (a) 100.3, (b) 99.3 and (c) 85.5 compared with a value of 100 for the base year, 1990. The remaining information is not available for the months specified. However, information on the UK share of exports by the main manufacturing companies and, up to mid-1989, on import penetration for manufactures, is available on a quarterly basis: both series can be obtained from the central shared database, access to which is available in the Library of the House.

World Trade Share

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the trend in volume terms of Britain's share of world trade over the last 30 years for (a) invisibles, (b) visibles and (c) invisibles and visibles combined. [27501]

Mr. Needham: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. For information on value share, I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 22 May 1995, Official Report, column 424.

Franchised Post Office Outlets

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many supermarkets currently designated for closure by their owners contain franchised Post Office Counters outlets. [27259]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 6 June 1995]: The Post Office is not aware of any such cases.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those Post Office Counters outlets which have been relocated from Crown post offices to franchised outlets and which have subsequently been transferred to other premises, with a statement of the reason in each case. [27258]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 6 June 1995]: I understand from the Post Office that there have been two such cases involving franchised post offices in Sutton in Ashfield and in Cinderford. At Sutton in Ashfield, the host store closed down but, in accordance with the terms of the franchise contract with Post Office Counters Ltd., the post office remained open until a suitable alternative partner and site were found. At Cinderford, the original franchisee took on the outlet on the same site as the previous Crown office with a view to changing premises later. In the event, the franchisee was unable to do this and, after a brief period of being run by Post Office Counters staff, the office was franchised to another agent at a different site.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Health Boards

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the total cost, including staff time, incurred in carrying out the competitive tendering process for support services for each contract tendered by the four health boards since 1990. [25999]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the form requested, as not all elements of the costs can be attributed to individual contracts. However, the total cost, including staff time dedicated to market testing, incurred in carrying out the process in the four health and social services board areas is as follows:

Annual cost of carrying out the market testing process by board area

Tender evaluation reports on which the Award of Contracts were based.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the annual sum of net savings from competitive tendering contract awards of NHS support services for each year since 1990 for each of the four health and social services boards. [26009]

Mr. Moss: The information requested, which is net of market-testing process costs, HPSS staff and consultants; monitoring and contract management costs; redundancy and early retirement costs; avoidable overhead costs; and national insurance costs, is given in the table. The information relates to all market-testing contract awards both in-house and commercial.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the client side costs, including monitoring of the contract and contract management costs for each support service contract awarded since 1990 for each health board.

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available in the form requested as not all the elements of these costs can be allocated to individual contracts. However, the information in terms of the total costs of the monitoring and contract management of all contracts, both in-house and commercial, for the support services by board area and financial year is given in the following tables.

Farm Improvement Grants

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, when applications in respect of SPARD—farm improvement grants—will be approved and payments issued to farmers. [25940]

Mr. Ancram: Applications received up to and including 22 March 1995 will be processed and related claims paid according to the targets in "Our Service Standards". Applications received after 22 March 1995 will be acknowledged as soon as practicable, but related claims will be paid only according to the financial resources available and after the Department has discharged its obligations to those who submitted their applications up to that date.

Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of the directors of Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd.; how much grant has been made available to this organisation from the Government or European Union sources over the past two years; how many developments have been assisted by Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd.; what measures have been undertaken by the Northern Ireland tourist board to market or promote directly or indirectly the activities of Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd.; who are the owners of the establishments leased to Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd.; and what monitoring he has undertaken to ensure that this body, and those establishments supported by it, have not received any more preferential support in the marketing and promotion of their activities than is given to other self-catering developments in Northern Ireland. [26630]

Mr. Ancram: The names of the directors of Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd. are:

Mr. J. Armstrong
Mr. I. Henderson
Dr. D. MacNeice
Mr. G. McWhinney
Mr. D. Myles
Lord Rathcavan
Ms M. Ritchie
Mr. T. Sturgess

Over the past two years, £375,000 has been made available to the organisation from Government and European Union sources.

To date, four cottages have received assistance.

Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd. undertakes its own marketing. NITB will offer advice and support to the company on its marketing and promotional activities as it does with any tourism organisation or individual accommodation provider.

Leases have been signed with the following:

Mr. M. Jameson: Ballycastle
Mr. H. McDonnell: Glenarm
Mr. G. McKeown: Broughshane (2 cottages)

The activities of Rural Cottage Holidays Ltd. will be monitored by the Northern Ireland tourist board. The tourist board is represented on the board of the company and will ensure that the company and its properties do not receive preferential support towards marketing and promotion activities.

Grafton Recruitment

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he became aware that the chief executive of a health and social services board was the majority shareholder in a nursing recruitment agency; and what inquiries he has made into health service contracts placed with that recruitment agency. [26967]

Mr. Moss: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 9 June, Official Report, column 346.

Northern Ireland Electricity

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the 16th report of the Committee of Public Accounts on the privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity HC24 of Session 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [27135]

Mr. Ancram: A response will be represented to Parliament in due course in the Department of Finance and Personnel memorandum of reply to the Public Accounts Committee report.

Early Years Services

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will adopt to increase the level of grant aid to the four health and social services boards in respect of early years services. [27140]

Mr. Moss: The Department of Health and Social Services allocates resources to the health and social services boards on a capitation basis. It is for the boards to determine priorities for the use of these resources within broad guidelines laid down by the Department. They do not receive grant aid, and funds are not earmarked for particular services.

In September 1994, the Government published a policy statement for the development of day care nursery education for young children in Northern Ireland. The statement announced the creation of an early years development fund, which will channel over £1 million extra over the three years ended April 1997 to early years projects in the voluntary and community sector.

This is in addition to the board's regular spending on early years services, and to recurrent grant aid of over £279,000 annually from the Department towards the regional activities of voluntary organisations in this field.

Tooth Decay

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the percentage of people aged five to 18 years with permanent teeth which are actively decayed, filled or missing due to decay. [27202]

Mr. Moss: The information for people aged five to 15 years is given in the table. Figures for ages 16, 17 and 18 are not available.

[2] Less than 1 per cent.

Environmental Protection Agency

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made on the establishment of an environmental protection agency in Northern Ireland. [27169]

Mr. Moss: A prior options study completed earlier this year concluded that a next steps agency should be set up, within the Department, from 1 April 1996, responsible for the implementation of environmental policies in Northern Ireland. It rejected the concept of an independent environmental protection agency. Work is now on schedule to set up the new agency.

Heart Disease

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) cases of heart disease and (b) deaths due to heart disease were recorded for each year since 1990. [27211]

Mr. Moss: Information on the number of cases of heart disease in Northern Ireland is not collected centrally. The number of finished consultant episodes for hospital inpatients suffering from heart disease is as follows:

	Number
1990–91	17,584
1991–92	18,398
1992–93	n/a
1993–94	22,422

n/a - Not available.

The number of deaths due to heart disease is as follows:

	Number
1990	5,047
1991	4,924
1992	5,039
1993	4,997
1994	[1]4,853

[1] Provisional.

Further Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what has been the capital expenditure on further education in Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years in real and constant price terms; [27424]

(2) what has been the capital expenditure on the buildings of the Belfast Institute of Further Education in each of the past 10 years in real and constant price terms. [27425]

Mr. Ancram: Capital expenditure on further education in Norther Ireland and on the further education colleges in the Belfast education and library board area for each financial year from 1984–85 to 1992–93 is in the statements and summary of the education and library boards' accounts—Cmnds 9820, 255, 388, 690, 1105, 1531, 1977, 2249 and 2603—copies of which are available in the Library. The figures for 1993–94 will be published in July 1995. Accounts for 1994–95 have not yet been finalised by the boards.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the planned capital building programme for the further education sector for the next five years. [27427]

Mr. Ancram: There is no specific allocation of resources to a capital building programme for the further education sector for the next five years. Further education projects compete annually for allocations from the capital new starts programme.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what reports he has received from inspectors of education about physical conditions in Northern Ireland's institute of further and higher education; and if he will make those reports available. [27428]

Mr. Ancram: Since January 1989, there have been 17 published inspection reports within the further education sector in Northern Ireland. Each of these reports includes comments on the physical conditions of the institution(s) concerned and copies may be obtained from inspectorate support branch, Department of Education (NI), Rathgael house, Balloo road, Bangor, BT19 7RP.

Ormeau Buildings

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the official assessment of the conditions of the Ormeau buildings of the Belfast Institute of Further and Higher Education; if they meet basic health and safety requirements; and what he proposes to do about them. [27426]

Mr. Ancram: The general fabric and structure of the original building at Ormeau has deteriorated extensively and part of it has been closed for reasons of safety; the general fabric and construction of the Orlit building and the later extension is in reasonable condition, with the exception of the flat roofing. Measures have been taken by the Belfast education and library board to address the essential health and safety problems.

An economic appraisal to examine the institute's most pressing accommodation needs will be commenced shortly by the board. The target date for the completion of the appraisal is October 1995.

Police (Body Armour)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 25 May, Official Report, column 756, if the body armour provided by the RUC is (a) bullet-proof and (b) knife-proof. [27826]

Sir John Wheeler: The body armour provided is classified as bullet-proof, but, although providing some protection, is not classified as knife-proof.

Education Administration

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what action he proposes to take to ensure that incorporated colleges and schools act co-operatively to provide an integrated service for their communities; [28470]

(2) what plans he has for a Northern Ireland further education funding council or similar body when colleges are incorporated; [28474]

(3) what action he will take to ensure that incorporated colleges make sufficient provision for those with problems of literacy and numeracy; [28469]

(4) what proposals he has for students to be on the managing bodies of incorporated colleges; [28473]

(5) what proposals he has for non-industrialists from the community to be on the managing bodies of incorporated colleges; [28471]

(6) if he will require incorporated colleges to reach set standards in provision for those with special needs; [28468]

(7) what proposals he has for college staff to be on the managing bodies of incorporated bodies. [28472]

Mr. Ancram: The consultation period on the Government's proposals for the restructuring of educational administration in Northern Ireland ended on 9 June. Before making any final decision, I will consider very carefully all the responses which we have received.

Belfast City Council

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all the public service offices other than local government offices and the number of persons employed in such offices in Belfast city council in (a) January 1992, (b) January 1993, (c) January 1994 and (d) January 1995. [26966]

Sir John Wheeler: The available information has been placed in the Library.

SCOTLAND

Hunting

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether all hunts which hunt on Forestry Commission land are required to hold a licence to do so; what monitoring procedures are in place to ensure that the terms and conditions of a licence are adhered to; and for what reasons licences are issued to hunts to hunt on Forestry Commission land. [27124]

Sir Hector Monro: All hunts require permission to enter Forestry Commission land. This permission may be in the form of a licence, or there may be a general permission where there is a long and established tradition of hunting over the land. Forestry Commission staff carry out random checks on hunt days to ensure that licence conditions are being observed. The commission allows hunting over land where it has traditionally been practised or where the right to hunt has been reserved in the commission's title.

Theatres (Funding)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the theatres in Scotland which receive public funding, showing the amount of revenue funding provided by (a) the Scottish Arts Council and (b) local authorities to each theatre in each of the last five years. [27316]

Sir Hector Monro: The theatres in Scotland which have received public funding from both the Scottish Arts Council and local authorities between 1989 and 1994 are shown in the table. Final figures for 1994–95 are not yet available. Information on theatres supported by local authorities but not by SAC is not held centrally.

Community Hospital, Ayrshire

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision he has made in his NHS capital programme for the community hospital in south-east Ayrshire. [27381]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A provisional sum of £4.0 million has been identified within the overall capital programme for Scotland in 1995–96 for the south-east Ayrshire community hospital, with a further £9 million provision in subsequent years. The availability of these monies is dependent on the outcome of Ayrshire and Arran health board's consultation on the siting of the service, submission and approval of a business case for the scheme and full exploration of private finance, which, if successful, will release identified public funds for other uses.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has approved the decision by Ayrshire and Arran health board in respect of which bodies will be allowed to put forward tenders, bids or offers to operate the community hospital in south-east Ayrshire. [27382]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The decision to restrict tenders to operate the new community hospital to NHS providers is entirely a matter for Ayrshire and Arran health board.

Nurses

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total full-time equivalent number of nurses in Scottish hospitals or community posts at the most recent date of which information is available; how many of these are (a) employed full time on permanent contracts by NHS trusts, (b) employed part time on permanent contracts by NHS trusts, (c) employed on short-term contracts by NHS trusts and (d) provided to trusts through contracts with private or other non-NHS employers; and what were all these figures one year previously. [27380]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information available centrally is shown in the following table. Permanent and short-term contracts cannot be distinguished. Information is not collected about nurses who may be employed through contracts between trusts and private or other non-NHS employers.

Qualified nurses[1] directly employed by the NHS in Scotland; hospital and community; by type of contract; at 30 September

[1] Comprises senior nurse managers and qualified nurses working in hospital and community. Some senior nurse managers have been transferred on to new A and C senior manager scales and are not included in these figures.
[2] Excludes the following groups of nurses; working for the state hospital, Carstairs, the Common Services Agency or health boards; nurses in training, nurse teachers, agency and bank nurses.
[3] Includes DMUs.
[4] Health boards may purchase health care from the private sector. Nurses employed in the private sector to fulfil such contracts are not included in the data.
[5] There were 17 NHS trusts at 30 September 1993 and 39 at 30 September 1994.

Police Complaints Procedure

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of officially investigated complaints against the police in each Scottish region for each of the last five years; what percentage were found to be justified in each case; and how many resulted in (a) disciplinary action and (b) dismissal in each case. [27378]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is published at table 10 of each annual report by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary for Scotland. The relevant reports—Cm 1993, Cm 2198, Cm 2587 and Cm 2856—are available in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received over the past year regarding the need for an independent police complaints procedure in Scotland; what consideration he has given to the introduction of such procedure; and if he will make a statement. [27379]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Following a review of the existing complaints procedures by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary, published on 11 February 1993, my right hon. Friend concluded that a police complaints authority should not be established in Scotland. He has decided, however, that Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary should make a greater input to the complaints procedure. New arrangements to this end will be introduced as soon as possible under the provisions of the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994.

Very few representations on this matter have been received following the publication of the report of the review.

New Farmers

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make provision for compensation to newly established farmers in respect of interest incurred on bank loans as a result of delays in allocating and payment sheep annual premium and suckler cow premium quotas to newly established farmers. [27780]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 June 1995]: There is no provision in the EC legislation governing the respective schemes which would allow compensation to be paid in such cases.

Accidents at Work

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many fatal accident inquiries have been held into fatalities in the workplace in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [27310]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Crown Office does not hold records centrally of the number of fatalities in the workplace which were subsequently the subject of a fatal accident inquiry. An inquiry must be held in the case of a death which appears to have resulted from an accident while the person who has died, being an employee, was in the course of his employment or, being an employer or self-employed person, was engaged in his occupation as such, unless criminal proceedings have been concluded against any person in respect of the death or any accident from which the death resulted and the Lord Advocate is satisfied that the circumstances of the death have been sufficiently established in the course of such proceedings. In the past 10 years the Health and Safety Executive has received notification of 298 deaths in the workplace in Scotland.

Prison Accommodation

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) male prisoners and (b) female prisoners are currently held (i) three to a one-person cell and (ii) two to a one-person cell; and what the figures were for each of the past seven years. [27309]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 13 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question about the extent of double and triple occupancy of cells designed for one person.

Occupancy of single cells by more than one prisoner can arise due to factors other than high prisoner numbers, for example to allow refurbishment to improve prisoner accommodation (including the installation of in-cell toilets and electrical power). In some cases single cells are in double occupancy at the request of prisoners themselves, who for their own reasons prefer to share.

Historical records of instances of double or triple occupancy are not maintained, but the current position - as at lock-up on the night of Wednesday 7 June - is set out in the attached table.

Police Protective Clothing

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to make funds available to chief constables to ensure that all police officers have ready access to bullet-proof vests and/or knife-proof vests; and if he will make a statement. [27308]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for police authorities to fund provision of equipment for their forces. The Scottish Office would pay police grant in the usual way at 51 per cent. of expenditure on such provision.

Woodlands

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) county or Scottish region all woodlands currently owned by the Forestry Commission, giving their name, location, hectarage and indicating whether they are leasehold or freehold and their market value. [27332]

Sir Hector Monro: Lists of all Forestry Commission woodlands, both by parliamentary constituency and by county or Scottish region, were placed in the Library of the House in 1994. A list of woodlands sold by the commission in 1994 is also held in the Library. These lists give the name, location and size of each woodland.

It is not possible to include the legal status of individual woodlands on the lists because the woodlands often consist of land acquired under several titles, which may be both freehold and leasehold. The commission does not estimate market values for individual woodlands unless they are to be sold.

Radioactivity, Dounreay

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he has received from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment and the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee about radioactive particles on the beaches near Dounreay nuclear establishment. [26782]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A joint statement by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment and the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee, "Potential Health Effects and Possible Sources of Radioactive Particles Found in the Vicinity of Dounreay Nuclear Establishment", has been published today. A copy of that statement, which is published by HMSO, has been placed in the Library of the House.

The Government are grateful to both committees for their work and look to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority to respond positively to the recommendations made in the statement.

TRANSPORT

Vehicle Styling Bars

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the benefits in terms of the reduction of serious injuries of polyurethane deformable front styling bars for cars; and if he will make a statement. [26580]

Mr. Norris: The digest of the Transport Research Laboratory project report 19 of 1993 indicates that approximately 60 per cent. of pedestrian casualties are struck by the fronts of cars. Softer car fronts could lead to a 7 per cent. reduction in the number of fatally injured pedestrians and could reduce injury severity for 21 per cent. of the seriously injured pedestrians.

Polyurethane deformable bumpers were found to be one method of achieving savings. The Department has not carried out any tests on polyurethane styling bars.

Forth Rail Bridge

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking on the latest reports to him from the Health and Safety Commission on the state of the Forth rail bridge. [26618]

Mr. Watts: The Health and Safety Executive has made no reports recently on the condition of the Forth rail bridge. However, the Health and Safety Executive is currently undertaking an assessment of the structural condition of the bridge and hopes to publish its findings later this year.

Taxis

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation he has held with police authority representatives over plans to change the nature of number plates exhibited by taxis and private hire car vehicles. [27952]

Mr. Norris: None.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he will ensure that radio circuit operators monitor insurance records for taxis and private hire vehicles. [27953]

Mr. Norris: This is one of the matters that will be considered before legislation is introduced in Parliament.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will promote a system of regular driver assessment for taxis and private hire vehicles. [27955]

Mr. Norris: No.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if licensing authorities will have access to all relevant documentation required for the licensing of taxis and private hire vehicles. [27956]

Mr. Norris: Yes, if it can be legally shown to them.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to publish the operation by local authorities of a licensing life scheme, requiring the replacement of taxis after a specified number of years, following his response to the Transport Select Committee's recommendations on taxis and private hire vehicles in the fourth report of Session 1993–94. [27957]

Mr. Norris: None. The criterion should not be the age of the vehicle, but whether it is fit for its intended use.

Rail Fare Reductions

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the annual revenue loss which would result from a 1 per cent. general reduction in United Kingdom rail fares assuming constant ticket demand; and what estimate he has made of the price elasticity of demand for United Kingdom rail travel. [28315]

Mr. Watts: In 1993–94, passenger receipts were £2,165.8 million. In that year, a 1 per cent. reduction in rail fares at a constant level of demand would therefore cost £21.7 million. The Department does not prepare estimates of price elasticity of demand for rail travel.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the final report on the A34 Newbury bypass from the Highways Agency. [28459]

Mr. Watts: The Highways Agency has been asked to report to the Secretary of State as soon as possible.

Cycle Helmets

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce legislation to make the wearing of helmets compulsory for pedal cyclists. [28242]

Mr. Norris: The Government actively promote the benefits of cycle helmet wearing, but we have no plans to make them compulsory.

Road Rage

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State if he will initiate a study into the condition known as road rage. [28337]

Mr. Norris: I have no plans to do so at present.

A14

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will examine the dangers of the A14, formerly the A604, road in Cambridgeshire and make plans to improve its safety; and if he will make a statement. [28294]

Mr. Watts: In response to local concerns about the A14 the Highways Agency is appointing consultants to recommend appropriate interim remedial measures that will improve safety until the completion of the major scheme on the A14 between the M11 and the A1.

Drivers' Hours

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to extend powers to the Vehicle Inspectorate and the police to prohibit domestic registered vehicles from proceeding where it is clear that excess hours are found; and if he will make a statement. [27668]

Mr. Norris: None. The driver of a domestic registered vehicle who is found to have driven excess hours, or taken inadequate rest, is liable to prosecution. In such circumstances, the driver would be advised to take the required rest or face the prospect that refusal to do so would be reported to the court in any subsequent prosecution and further charges might be brought. There is no evidence to suggest that this procedure is an inadequate means for preventing drivers from continuing their journey.

Helicopter Sites, Central London

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what study he has commissioned or supported concerning the location of additional helicopter sites to serve central London; what conclusions it has reached; and what consultations relating to them he has initiated with the relevant local authorities. [27875]

Mr. Norris: The London heliport study working group was set up in February 1992. Its report was published on 21 March 1995 and copies were placed in the Library of the House.

Any firm planning application for a new heliport, whether in respect of one of the study sites or elsewhere, would first have to be submitted to the appropriate local authority in accordance with the statutory planning procedures.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the consultations he has held with industry on the changes in vehicle excise duty. [26496]

Mr. Norris: Vehicle excise duty is for the Chancellor of the Exchequer. It is not normal practice to consult on taxation rates.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

International Labour Organisation

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries have withdrawn from the International Labour Organisation in the last 30 years; and when. [27809]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In the last 30 years the following countries have withdrawn from the International Labour Organisation:

South Africa (1966): rejoined 1994
Lesotho (1971): rejoined 1980
Vietnam (1976 and again in 1985): rejoined 1980 and 1992
United States of America (1977): rejoined 1980

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what notice is necessary before a country withdraws from the International Labour Organisation. [27808]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under the terms of the constitution of the International Labour Organisation, two years' notice is necessary before a country can formally withdraw from the International Labour Organisation.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the International Labour Organisation programme to eradicate child labour. [27806]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We support the ILO's international programme on the elimination of child labour. The programme helps countries assess and tackle the practical problems they face through advice and direct technical assistance.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs what is his assessment of the work of the International Labour Organisation together with the International Maritime Organisation and the United Kingdom Government in the prevention of maritime accidents leading to loss of life and environmental pollution. [27814]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Maritime safety is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Although the International Maritime Organisation is the United Nations agency in the lead on maritime safety matters, the International Labour Organisation has developed a substantial body of conventions and resolutions addressing various aspects of the employment of seafarers. It has encouraged the international adoption of standards relating, for example, to the accommodation, fitness, catering and other health and safety aspects of working at sea.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he or his colleagues have held with Senator Jesse Helms, chair of the United States Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, about membership of the International Labour Organisation or the other United Nations agencies. [27804]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what representations he has received from the Confederation of British Industry about United Kingdom participation in the International Labour Organisation. [27812]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the International Labour Organisation's work in building social safety nets in eastern Europe since 1989. [27807]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The International Labour Organisation is one of a number of multilateral and bilateral donors which have been operating in central and eastern Europe since 1989 to help support the transition to democracy and a market economy. It has helped member states to develop new labour market institutions such as employment and training services; to revise and modernise their labour legislation and social security systems and to help the development of independent employers' organisations and trade unions.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the annual costs of sending employer representatives to participate in International Labour Organisation meetings. [27811]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The cost is estimated to be about £18,000.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what follow-up there has been to the paragraphs in the declaration signed by Her Majesty's Government at the United Nations world summit for social development urging ratification and implementation of International Labour Organisation conventions relating to employment rights of minors, women, youth, the disabled and indigenous persons. [27813]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The declaration is a political statement and not a set of minimum standards to be applied universally.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made as to how many United Kingdom nationals would lose their jobs as a result of Britain withdrawing from the International Labour Organisation. [27817]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have made no such estimate.

Bosnia-Herzegovina

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the recognition of the Yugoslav province of Bosnia-Herzegovina as a national state by Her Majesty's Government followed in all respects international law and custom; on whose initiative it was so recognised; what was the date of recognition by each of the principle powers; and what regard was had to the views of its religious and racial minorities. [27434]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We and our EC partners recognised Bosnia-Herzegovina on 7 April 1992 following acceptance of the report of the arbitration commission attached to the EC conference on former Yugoslavia. The US Government recognised Bosnia-Herzegovina on the same day and the Russian Government did the same on 28 April 1992. A key factor in the EC's decision was the Bosnian Government's guarantee to respect the rights of minorities.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the population of Sarajevo was Serb before Bosnia-Herzegoina was recognised as a separate state; and how many of them still remain there. [27497]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: According to an official census conducted in April 1991, 27.8 per cent. of the population of Sarajevo was Serb. There are no reliable figures for the current Serb population.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the proportion of humanitarian supplies to Bosnia-Herzegovina which have (a) been stolen by the Bosnian Muslim Government to supply its forces and (b) reached criminals operating in the black market. [27578]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are no reliable figures relating to this issue. We condemn all such acts perpetrated by any side against the UN and other humanitarian relief agencies operating in Bosnia.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the population of the former Yugoslav province of Bosnia-Herzegovina is effectively represented by the Foreign Minister appointed by the Bosnian Muslim Government. [27498]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We consider Mr. Sacirbey, the new Bosnian Foreign Minister, to represent the legitimate and internationally recognised Government of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Western Slavonia

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when western Slavonia was detached from the rest of Slavonia; and for what reasons it was recognised as part of Croatia. [27579]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The term "Western Slavonia" was given to that part of the region of Slavonia situated within the internationally recognised borders of Croatia which remained in Serb hands at the time of the creation of the United Nations protected areas in November 1991.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what mandate the European Union and NATO have to intervene in the military situation in the former Yugoslavia except in so far as they are requested to do so by the United Nations. [27575]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: NATO's mandate is to act in support of the UN in former Yugoslavia. The EU has no military role in the conflict in former Yugoslavia.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the United Kingdom's contribution to (a) the tribunal and (b) the office of special prosecutor established by the United Nations in relation to war crimes, etcetera in the former Yugoslavia with particular reference to (i) finance, including voluntary funds, (ii) staff, including secondments from the United Kingdom, (iii) equipment, (iv) forensic assistance, and (v) witness protection. [26919]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In 1994 we contributed £20,000 worth of computer and camera equipment and seconded a military lawyer to the prosecutor's office. In May 1995, we seconded four police officers to work for the prosecutor's office as investigators and analysts and will be contributing £200,000 toward these costs. In addition, we have helped the tribunal identify other British citizens to work for the prosecutor's office.

We are currently discussing the question of witness protection with the tribunal.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to assist the tribunal established by the United Nations in relation to the former Yugoslavia in the event that prison sentences are passed by the tribunal. [27921]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are currently considering the tribunal's request to offer prison space to those convicted by the tribunal.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes in United Kingdom law he expects as a consequence of the establishment of the United Nations special tribunal in relation to the former Yugoslavia; and when he expects such changes to be made. [27920]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Provision is needed to enable the UK to give effect to orders of the tribunal for the transfer of persons and other assistance. The necessary provisions are being drafted and it is hoped that they will be ready in the near future. In the meantime, we are co-operating informally with the prosecutor's office.

Croatia

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the (a) legal and (b) other grounds on which Her Majesty's Government recognises a territory as a national state; and to what extent these criteria had been met when Her Majesty's Government recognised Croatia as a national state. [27503]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In recognising a national state, we take into account that a country should have a clearly defined territory with a population, a Government with a prospect of retaining control and independence in its foreign relations. These criteria are always subject to interpretation in the light of circumstances on the ground. In January 1992 we and our EC partners recognised Croatia on the basis of advice from the arbitration commission that Croatia largely fulfilled the guidelines on recognition adopted in December 1991. These were that the state to be recognised should respect the United Nations charter, guarantee the rights of minorities, respect the inviolability of frontiers except by peaceful agreement, accept commitments on disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation, security and regional stability and promise to settle by agreement questions of state succession and regional disputes.

Overseas Domestic Workers

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of applications made by foreign visitors to bring their overseas domestic workers with them on visits to the United Kingdom since 9 December 1994 have been turned down at British consulates abroad on the ground that they fail to comply with the new arrangements for the admission of overseas domestic workers announced on that date. [28019]

Mr. Baldry: Comprehensive figures for the number of overseas domestic workers granted entry clearance are not kept. Such figures as are kept cover six-month periods. I will let the hon. Member have the figures for the period 1 January to 30 June 1995 as soon as these are available.

Japan (Former Prisoners of War)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have recently been made, formally or informally, to the Government of Japan on compensation payments for British ex-prisoners of war; what representations he expects to make in the foreseeable future; and if he will make a statement. [28076]

Mr. Goodlad: We are precluded on legal grounds from raising the question of compensation formally with the Japanese Government, but Ministers have drawn their attention to the strong feelings which the situation of the former prisoners arouses in the UK. Most recently, I discussed the matter with the Japanese Government during my visit to Japan from 26 to 29 May. We intend to continue these discussions.

Protection of Minorities

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Calder Valley (Sir D. Thompson) of 25 May, Official Report, columns 667-68, if he will detail the technical points that are holding up ratification by the United Kingdom of the Council of Europe's framework convention for the protection of national minorities. [28363]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The timing of the ratification of an international legal instrument is a matter of political judgment. The framework convention was opened for signature very recently, on 1 February 1995. So far, the convention has been signed by 27 member states of the Council of Europe and ratified by one.

The technical points to which I referred in my answer of 25 May remain under consideration.

Ukrainian Prisoners, Bosnia

Mr. Robert N. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Ukrainian soldiers serving with UNPROFOR in Gorazde were taken captive by Bosnian Government forces on 28 May; and what action her Majesty's Government and their North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies are taking to secure their release. [28371]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Ilford, South (Mr. Gapes) on 12 June 1995, Official Report, columns 372-73.

Tibet

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about his current policy towards Tibet. [28312]

Mr. Goodlad: We regard Tibet as autonomous while recognising the special position of the Chinese authorities there. We are deeply concerned about abuses of human rights and the threat to the cultural and ethnic identity of the Tibetans. We regularly raise these matters with the Chinese authorities.

HOME DEPARTMENT

First Offenders

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted offenders in west Yorkshire were sent to prison for a first offence in each year since 1985. [27707]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not held centrally.

Juvenile Offenders

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many juveniles aged 10 to 16 years were cautioned on more than one occasion during each year since 1985; [27708]

(2) how many juveniles aged 10 to 16 years were (a) convicted and (b) cautioned in west Yorkshire for each year since 1985. [27709]

Mr. Maclean: The information is not collected routinely. The table shows results from special studies of those cautioned for indictable offences in one week in each of the years 1985, 1988, 1991 and 1994 in England and Wales.

Juveniles aged 10–16 cautioned in study week, 1985, 1988, 1991, and 1994

"Tomorrow's Job"

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 136, if he will place a copy of the publication "Tomorrow's Job" in the Library. [27905]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 12 June 1995]: I understand that the Crown Prosecution Service is considering whether distribution of this publication may constitute an offence under section 19 of the Public Order Act 1986. I am not prepared at this stage to increase its general circulation by placing a copy in the Library.

Fire Safety

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to implement the proposed Fire Precautions (Places of Work) Regulations 1994, in order to comply with the requirements of EC directives 89/391 and 89/654. [27958]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 25 May, Official Report, column 707.

Private Security Industry

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to take urgent steps to introduce a statutory scheme of regulation for the private security industry. [27945]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 12 June 1995]: I am currently looking again at the policies in this area. The Home Affairs Select Committee report on the industry is a timely contribution to the debate on regulation and has some very helpful recommendations. We will respond as soon as possible.

DNA Testing

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the DNA analysis undertaken by the Forensic Science Service of tissue samples allegedly taken from a patient who died in Manchester allegedly of AIDS in 1959 indicates that all sets of tissues come from more than one patient; [27818]

(2) what were the results of the DNA analysis undertaken by the Forensic Science Service of tissue samples allegedly taken from a patient who died in Manchester allegedly of AIDS in 1959, which were provided to it by Central Manchester Healthcare NHS trust and Professor David Ho of New York. [27815]

Mr. Maclean: Responsibility for these matters have been delegated to the Director General of the Forensic Science Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dr. Janet Thompson to Mr. Denis MacShane, dated 13 June 1995:

You recently tabled two Parliamentary Questions about a commission by the Central Manchester Healthcare Trust to conduct DNA tests on tissue samples. As you know, the arrangement now is that the Chief Executive of an Executive Agency, with the agreement of the Minister, replies to Members of Parliament on operational matters. I am therefore replying on behalf of the Forensic Science Service.

I can confirm that the FSS has been commissioned by the Central Manchester Healthcare Trust to undertake DNA tests on tissue samples allegedly taken from a patient who died in Manchester allegedly of AIDS in 1959. This is however a private commission and I am unable therefore to provide any information about the results. You may wish to contact Central Manchester Healthcare Trust direct about this matter.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what schemes are available for local authorities to apply for funds to contribute to the establishment of closed circuit television for a town or city centre. [27848]

Mr. Maclean: Local authorities can bid for funds under the single regeneration budget for various purposes, including the establishment of CCTV schemes. The recent CCTV challenge competition has injected £5 million into local CCTV schemes, generating up to £13.8 million in other funding. The possibility of further competitions in the future has not been ruled out, but it is too early to give a firm commitment.

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which towns and cities have received grants for the establishment of closed circuit television systems in town or city centres in the last five years; and what was the total amount given for each year and to each project. [27847]

Mr. Maclean: The only direct grants made by this department for this purpose were the recent awards to the winners of the CCTV challenge competition, which included many town and city centre schemes. The results of the competition were announced on 27 March. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche) on 31 March, Official Report, columns 854-56. Other funding has been made available for such schemes in the past via safer cities projects, through the single regeneration budget, or by police forces or local authorities. Information on the funding of CCTV schemes from these sources is not collected centrally.

Video Shop Retailers (Prosecutions)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been under the terms of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 of video shop retailers who have hired out or sold material to under-age children; and if he will make a statement. [27772]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 21 March, Official Report, column 137.

Mr. David Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources are made available to trading standards offices to prevent the dissemination of unclassified videos and to ensure the prosecution of shopkeepers who hire out or sell such videos to under-age children. [27773]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I have been asked to reply.

Resources are made available to local authority trading standards offices, as well as various other local authority services, through the other services block standard spending assessment. As the Government do not allocate these resources to specific services, the amount spent by local authorities on trading standards is a matter for individual authorities.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total amount given by each Government Department to voluntary organisations in the latest year for which figures are available. [27844]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: For 1992–93 I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Dorset, West (Sir J. Spicer) on 13 April 1994, Official Report, columns 178-79. The data for 1993–94 are currently being collated; details will be published as soon as this has been completed.

EDUCATION

Student Finance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on what basis student grants and loans are treated as income. [27940]

Mr. Boswell: Student grants and loans are not treated as income for the purposes of the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has to consider the economic contribution that a student would provide after leaving education when fixing the level of student grants. [27944]

Mr. Boswell: The total resources in grant and loan available to students are a contribution to their living expenses while studying. It is for individual students to consider the likely benefits to them of investing in their own higher education, particularly by utilising the student loan facility.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has for alternative methods for former students to repay their student loans; and what alternatives have been considered by her Department. [27937]

Mr. Boswell: A number of methods of repayment were considered when the loans scheme was being established. The Government continue to keep all aspects of the scheme under review but have no current plans to alter the method of repayment.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what account she takes in the determination of the level of student grants of the level of income support and attached benefits; and what further plans she has in this regard. [27941]

Mr. Boswell: The benefit system, which exists to help those in involuntary difficulty, is not an appropriate means of support for most students. The total resources available to students through grants and loans has been uprated annually since 1990 in line with forecast inflation. The Government monitor student income and expenditure through regular surveys. The next survey will take place in 1995–96.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proposals she has to increase financial support for students with families. [27938]

Mr. Boswell: Students with dependants are eligible for additional allowances as part of the means-tested mandatory award. The value of these allowances has again been uprated for 1995–96, in line with forecast price increases. Students who are lone parents remain eligible for social security benefits. The access funds can offer additional assistance to students in particular need.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the present system of student grants in encouraging people into education. [27942]

Mr. Boswell: The present system of student grants and loans introduced in 1990 has been accompanied by increased participation. The number of home full-time undergraduates in Britain increased by over 50 per cent. in the five years between 1987–88 and 1992–93. Some 30 per cent. of young people now enter higher education, compared with only 15 per cent. in 1987. The number of mature home entrants to full-time undergraduates courses also rose by some 125 per cent. between 1987–88 and 1992–93.

Education Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has to pilot a voucher scheme for pre-school provision. [28018]

Mr. Forth: A voucher system is one option under consideration for funding the Prime Minister's commitment to provide, over time, a pre-school place for every four-year-old whose parents wish to take it up. An announcement on the new policy will be made when it has been finalised.

University Staff

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps she is taking to encourage university staff to spend time in British industry on secondment. [28007]

Mr. Boswell: We support all opportunities that enable academic staff to gain industrial experience. Similarly, we look to industrial personnel to reciprocate wherever possible. Responsibility for developing links with business, of all kinds, rests with individual institutions. Many are conscious of the need to do so, and participate in the range of programmes promoted by the Departments for Employment and of Trade and Industry and the Office for Science and Technology.

Special Needs

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what is the average cost of sending a special needs child to (a) a mainstream primary school and (b) secondary school in Lancashire including the cost of escort; [27439]

(2) what is the average cost of sending a special needs child to a special school in Lancashire. [27538]

Mr. Forth: Lancashire local education authority estimates that for the financial year 1994–95 the average cost of a school place is as follows:

£7,541 at a special school;

£4,830 at a mainstream primary school for a child with a statement of special educational needs;

£4,990 at a mainstream secondary school for a child with a statement of special educational needs.

The cost of transport, including escorts, could not be readily disaggregated since transport and escorts may be shared between pupils attending primary, secondary and special schools and pupils with and without statements of special educational needs.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education in what circumstances a child with epilepsy, but with no other circumstance giving rise to concern, may receive a statement of special educational needs under the provisions of the Education Act 1993. [27690]

Mr. Forth: The responsibility for making provision for school children with special educational needs rests with schools and LEAs. The code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs gives guidance on the exercise of this responsibility.

The majority of children with epilepsy will continue to be educated in ordinary schools and will not need special provision requiring a formal assessment and statement of special educational needs. However, a few children with epilepsy will be subject to a formal assessment and statement because of the severity of their condition.

ENVIRONMENT

Shire County Council Employees

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of people excluding teachers employed by each shire county council per thousand population. [27303]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The available information is as follows. The levels of employment in individual authorities are not directly comparable because of variations in, for example, population structure and social characteristics, the extent of the use of private firms and contractors and the level of work undertaken for other authorities and public bodies on an agency basis.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment following the decision of the High Court on 23 May to grant leave to the royal county of Berkshire to review his decision announced on 21 March to abolish the county council, if the time allowed for responses to the draft order issued by his Department on 22 May will be delayed until the ultimate outcome of the judicial review is known. [27850]

Mr. Curry [holding answer 9 June 1995]: I see no need at present.

Public Events

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the correspondence he has received complaining about the 14-day rule which allows public events to be held on agricultural land for a maximum of 14 days in a year; and what proposals he has to reform the rule. [28170]

Sir Paul Beresford: During the period 1 January 1995 to 31 May 1995, we received eight letters from hon. Members; two from local authorities, one from a police consultative committee, one from a parish council federation and one from a residents' association. The General Permitted Development Order grants a general planning permission for a temporary change of use on land for up to 28 days a year for most activities, but for only 14 days in respect of car boot sales and motor sports. More frequent use requires a planning application. These controls strike a balance between the freedom to use land for any lawful, occasional purpose while protecting amenity. We have no plans to amend them.

Darwin Initiative

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans Her Majesty's Government have to increase the funding of grants for the Darwin initiative and related funds for training ecologists in developing countries. [26330]

Mr. Atkins: Since the inception of the Darwin initiative, funds have been increased from £1 million in 1993–94 to £3 million in the current financial year. So far, £9 million has been allocated for 86 projects in over 50 developing countries, involving around 60 UK institutions and almost a 1,000 developing country participants. Present public expenditure plans allow a continuing rolling programme of £3 million per year.

Biodiversity Convention

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who is to represent the United Kingdom at the Scientific Advisory Body of Biodiversity convention in Paris in September. [26338]

Mr. Atkins: The UK delegation for the first meeting of the Subsidiary Body on scientific, technical and technological advice of the biodiversity convention will be led by my Department with appropriate scientific support. I will write to the hon. Gentleman when the composition of the delegation has been decided.

Rented Housing

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his projection of housing new build for rent, in rental units, over the next 10 years. [27960]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: There are no Government projections for housing new build for rent over the next 10 years.

Unfit Housing

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest assessment of homes which require demolition because of disrepair. [27961]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The 1991 English house condition survey found 584,000 dwellings that were unfit due to disrepair. The extent of this disrepair varies considerably and decision as to whether demolition is the most satisfactory course of action is for the local authority concerned in each case.

Household Statistics

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of households currently living in accommodation shared with another household, who require rehousing. [27962]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The 1993–94 an estimated 400,000 households lived in accommodation that was not self-contained. Of these, 200,000 had a strong preference for separate accommodation, 140 would prefer it but not strongly, and 60,000 preferred to share.

The estimates are from the survey of English housing 1993–94 and, like all estimates from household surveys, they are subject to sampling error.

Home Ownership

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the proportion of dwellings in owner occupation for each year since 1990. [27964]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The available figures are shown in table 2.23 of the December 1994 quarterly edition of part 2 of the publication "Housing and Construction Statistics". A copy of this publication is in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many persons aged 25 years or under became home owners in each year since 1970. [27965]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The available information is set out in the table. It is based on a sample survey of mortgage completions and covers those first-time purchasers aged 25 or under who bought with a building society or Abbey National plc mortgage in the UK in the years 1975 to 1994.

Planning Policy

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department has conducted to support the statement in paragraph 1.6 of planning policy guidance note 7 on protecting and improving the countryside through maintaining a healthy rural economy. [28231]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department expects to publish research on the implementation of planning policies for diversifying the rural economy later this year.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the statement in paragraph 1.6 of planning policy guidance note 7 on protecting and improving the countryside through maintaining a healthy rural economy is intended to refer to protecting and improving (a) the built environment in rural areas and (b) agricultural land and natural habitats. [28232]

Sir Paul Beresford: Paragraph 1.6 refers to the aims of the Government's countryside policies generally. Many factors contribute to a healthy rural economy, including an attractive built environment, an adequate supply of agricultural land and natural habitats. Under the planning system, the guiding principle in the wider countryside is that development should benefit the rural economy and maintain or enhance the environment.

Southwark Council

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) men and (b) women were employed by Southwark council in each of the last five years. [28350]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The information is not available centrally.

Species 2000

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans the United Kingdom Government have to participate in Species 2000 and the formulation of a new species list. [26339]

Mr. Atkins: The UK expects to consider initiatives such as species 2000 at the first scientific advisory meeting of the parties to the biodiversity convention in Paris in September, in the context of the provision of scientific technical assessments of the status of biodiversity under article 25 of the convention.

Local Government Residuary Body

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what decision he has reached about the appointment of a chairman for the Local Government Residuary Body (England). [28846]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I am happy to announce that Mr. Roy Swanston, currently president of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors, has accepted the offer of appointment as first chairman of the Local Government Residuary Body (England). The appointment will be made as soon as possible, once the other founder members of the residuary body have been selected.

Thames Gateway

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the final version of the Thames gateway planning framework. [28847]

Mr. Curry: The planning framework for Thames gateway, RPG9a, which sets out planning guidance for the major regional growth area extending from Newham and Greenwich in London to Thurrock in Essex and Swale in Kent, is being published this week. Copies will be placed in the library at 10.30 am tomorrow.

WALES

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much local government reorganisation has cost so far; and to what extent that cost has been borne by (a) local and (b) central government. [27541]

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 9 June 1995]: There are no figures available centrally for expenditure by local authorities on local government reorganisation. It is up to local government to take advantage of the scope for savings available by bringing and planning, finance and other central administrative services under one control.

I have issued the following funding, which is additional to the local government revenue and capital settlements:

1994–95
Supplementary credit approvals: IT	790,786
1995–96
Supplementary credit approvals: IT	19,209,189
Special grant	[1]4,563,252

[1] To 9 June 1995. A total of up to £19.5 million is to be issued under the Special Grant Report (Wales) 1995; of this £17.55 million will be issued in 1995–96.

The expenditure on IT should produce savings in administration and management, if local authorities spend wisely. There will also be capital receipts from sale of assets that are surplus to requirements.

House Condition Survey

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 254, if he will set out the year or years in which the houses were assessed for the Welsh house condition survey, published in 1993. [28138]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The physical surveys on which the Welsh house condition survey was based were conducted in 1993. The related opinion surveys were carried out in 1992.

Car Ownership

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of Welsh households own two or more automobiles. [28446]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: According to the 1993 family expenditure survey, 23 per cent. of Welsh households own two or more cars or vans.

Hyperactive Children

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amount of grant aid given by his Department to (a) the Hyperactive Children's Support Group and (b) other voluntary organisations concerned with the treatment of attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder for each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [26579]

Mr. Richards: The Welsh Office has not received any applications for grant from the Hyperactive Children's Support Group, nor from any voluntary organisations specifically concerned with attention deficit and hyperactivity disorder.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to locate a local landfill site for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste from nuclear sites in the Ynys Môn constituency. [27371]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Planning Guidance

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to publish a strategic guidance for Wales indicating to the newly elected unitary councils strategic guidance on (a) nature conservation, (b) transport, (c) planning and the historic environment, (d) planning and pollution control, (e) planning and noise and (f) aggregate provision and strategic planning; and if he will make a statement. [28195]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend will be issuing draft planning policy guidance shortly and minerals policy guidance in due course.

Welsh Health Common Services Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the non-executive directors of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority; and on what date they were appointed. [28303]

Mr. Redwood: The non-executive members are as follows:

Mr. K. C. White, appointed 1 August 1985; recently reappointed until 31 July 1997.

Mrs. E. Elias, appointed 22 May 1995 until 31 March 1997.

Mr. M. Wallace, appointed 1 June 1995 until 31 March 1997.

EstateCare Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place a copy in the Library of the Touche Ross report into the EstateCare Group of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority. [28311]

Mr. Redwood: No. The report is one of a number of working documents which will contribute to my consideration of the future of WHCSA.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements for compulsory competitive tendering will apply to county and county borough councils; and if he will make a statement. [28620]

Mr. Redwood: I have been giving very careful consideration to the timetable for reintroducing and extending compulsory competitive tendering after local government reorganisation. The Under-Secretary of State—my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones)—and I have received a number of representations from local authorities and others, in particular about the timetable for reintroducing CCT which was announced in December 1993.

I have concluded that the new councils should be given some more time. Generally, the revised timetable will be as follows:

Reintroduction of CCT under the Local Government Planning and Land Act 1980: 1 April 1997

Reintroduction of CCT under the Local Government Act 1988: 1 October 1997

CCT will apply to new joint committees which are established by the new councils from 1 October 1997. Where work covered by the 1988 Act will not be greatly affected by the reorganisation, I propose that it should be subject to CCT from 1 April 1997. This will apply to:

Joint committees continued in existence by section 59 of the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994.

The defined activity of catering for purposes of schools and welfare in the case of Powys county council.

The defined activity of collection of refuse in the case of the following councils:

Anglesey county council

Blaenau Gwent county borough council

Bridgend county borough council

Cardiff county council

Cardiganshire county council

Merthyr Tydfil county borough council

Monmouthshire county council

Newport county borough council

Torfaen county borough council

The Vale of Glamorgan county borough council

Wrexham county borough council

I have also been considering the responses to recent consultation exercises on the extension of CCT to personnel, finance and information technology services. I have concluded that I should make no further change to the implementation date for finance of 1 October 1998 and for IT of 1 October 1999. I have decided however that it would be appropriate to take account of the pressures which personnel departments will face as a result of local government reorganisation and the introduction and extension of CCT, and that CCT should apply to personnel services from 1 October 1999.

Finally, I have decided not to make any major changes to the specified minimum and maximum lengths of contract periods which apply in Wales under the 1988 Act. For county and county borough councils the contract periods will be:

	Years
Other cleaning	3–7
Refuse collection	5–7
Sports and leisure management	4–6
All other defined activities	3–5

In the case of building cleaning and ground maintenance, the contract period will be three to four years where the contract includes a significant element of work at a school.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 22 May, Official Report, column 432, to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East (Mr. Timms), how the figure for benefit savings achieved by the Child Support Agency was arrived at; and if he will give a detailed breakdown. [27998]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 13 June 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the benefit savings achieved by the Child Support Agency during the year 1994/1995.

The Agency achieved benefit savings totalling £479.05 million during 1994/95. The table at Annex A shows how the benefit savings for 1994/95 were comprised.

Annex A

Income support claim withdrawn within 4 weeks of CSA action	199.53
Reductions in Family Credit or Disability Working Allowance resulting from CSA assessments	12.84
Housing benefit/Council Tax reductions resulting from CSA assessments	52.25
Total	479.05

Industrial Injury Disablement Benefit

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to pay industrial injuries benefit direct into the bank of the recipients; and for what reasons this arrangement is not currently available. [27950]

Mr. Hague: The administration of industrial injury disablement benefit is a matter for Mr. Ian Magee, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ian Magee to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 12 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the payment of Industrial Injury Disablement Benefit (IIDB) by Automated Credit Transfer (ACT).

Payment into a bank account by ACT is made on computer produced magnetic tapes. For practical reasons, payment by ACT has been restricted to those benefits which are paid by computer. As IIDB is a clerically administered benefit, an exercise is currently underway to transfer all IIDB payments onto a computer system enabling payments to be made by ACT. This facility is expected to be available by the end of this year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Poverty

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how he proposes to involve people living in poverty in the design, implementation, monitoring and assessment of national strategies and programmes for poverty eradication, as required in article 28a of the action programme agreed at the world summit for social development in Copenhagen in March. [26758]

Mr. Burt: The Department already consults widely with representative non-governmental organisations and other groups on proposed initiatives and policy changes. In addition, Ministers regularly meet with organisations representing vulnerable groups.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to issue a national poverty eradication plan in compliance with article 26b of the action programme agreed at the world summit for social development in Copenhagen in March. [26757]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 10 May, Official Report, column 496.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to issue a report on collaboration with European and other Governments on the evaluation of policies to combat poverty in accordance with article 29 of the action programme agreed at the world summit for social development. [26756]

Mr. Burt: There is no requirement in paragraph 29 of the programme of action to issue such a formal report and we have no plans to do so.

There is regular discussion and evaluation of social policies in a variety of international forums in which the UK participates.

Social Security Expenditure

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the basis for his estimate of a £4 billion reduction in the forecast for social security expenditure by 2001 which will occur in addition to the £4 billion reduction due to policy changes he has initiated. [27223]

Mr. Hague: All projections for 2000–01 were made on the same basis as the projection published in "The Growth of Social Security" 1993.

The total reduction in forecast expenditure projected for 2000–01 is £7.8 billion. Of this, £4 billion is due to policy changes. Approximately £2.1 billion of the difference is due to the use of a lower unemployment assumption than that used in "The Growth of Social Security" reflecting the reduction in unemployment which has already occurred.

The remaining £1.7 billion is the net effect of a wide range of forecasting changes due partly to the use of more up-to-date information on trends in benefit case loads and expenditure and the use of improved forecasting techniques.

Note:

All figures are in 1994–95 prices.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estiamte what it will cost each working person per day to finance social security expenditure by 2000–01. [27219]

Mr. Hague: Total social security benefit expenditure in 2000–01 is estimated at £98.1 billion in 1994–95 prices, including administrative costs at 1994–95 levels. This is approximately equivalent to £16 per working day on the basis of the current working population.

Back to Work Bonus

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to include a back to work bonus in his reforms of the unemployment benefits. [27571]

Mr. Roger Evans: We intend to introduce a back to work bonus scheme in October 1996 in jobseeker's allowance and income support as part of our plans to improve work incentives for unemployed people. Claimants who undertake small amounts of work while on benefit will be able to build up a lump sum bonus of up to £1,000 which they can claim when they leave benefit to take up work.

National Insurance

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the additional annual revenue which would have been raised in 1995–96 if the upper earnings limit for employee national insurance contributions have been indexed to wages rather than prices. [28194]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions is statutorily linked to the rate of the basic retirement pension and has been set at £440 for 1995–96. If the increase in the upper earnings limit for 1995–96 over 1994–95 has been based on the general increase in earnings instead of prices in the year ending September 1994, the limit is likely to have been rounded to £445. The additional revenue which would have been raised by such an increase is estimated as £48 million in the first year.

Source: Government Actuary's Department.

Note: The reply assumes that the lower earnings limit continue to be based on the increase in prices, thus broadening the contributions base.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the (a) likely cost and (b) maximum cost of exempting employers for a period of one year from paying national insurance contributions for employees directly employed after having been unemployed for one year or more. [28316]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The estimated cost could be as much as £200 million per annum. Allowing for less than full take-up of the exemption, the cost is likely to be in the region of £150 million.

These estimates do not allow for any possible changes in behaviour.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the employment effect of reducing employers' national insurance contributions by (a) 1 per cent., (b) 2 per cent. and (c) 3 per cent. [28314]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Any reduction in employers' national insurance contributions would cut employers' non-wage costs and could be expected to provide an increase in employment opportunities. However, it is not possible to assess the differential effect of a range of contribution reductions.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Southern Africa

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the value by category of channel of British humanitarian and emergency relief through both bilateral and multilateral channels to each of the member states of the Southern African Development Community for each year since 1979 in both cash and constant prices. [26950]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is available only for the years 1986–87 to 1993–94. Tables have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the total European Union aid (a) to the institution of the Southern African Development Community and its predecessor the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference and (b) to individual member states of the Southern African Development Community for each year since 1979 in both cash and constant prices; what are the projections for future years; and what has been the United Kingdom's contribution. [26949]

Mr. Baldry: EC net official development assistance to individual members of the Southern African Development Community from 1979 to 1993, the last year for which figures are available, is set out in tables A and B. South Africa joined the SADC in 1994. Information on EC aid to institutions of the SADC is not available.

Projections of future levels of aid are not available.

The primary source of EC aid to SADC states has been successive European development funds. The UK contribution to each EDF is set out in table C.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the Government bilateral related aid (a) to the institution of the Southern African Development Community and its predecessor the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference and (b) to the individual member states of the Southern African Development Co-ordination for each year form 1979 to 1994 in cash and constant prices; and what is the projection for future years. [26948]

Mr. Baldry: Following is a table which indicates levels of bilateral aid given both to SADC as an institution and to the member states of SADC between 1979 and 1993–94. South Africa has also been included even though that country only became a member of SADC very recently.

Projections of future levels of aid are not available. However, the FCO departmental report for 1995, Cm 2802, page 61, contains a table which outlines the expected levels of bilateral aid expenditure on a regional basis.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the United Kingdom Government total bilateral aid to the African, Caribbean and Pacific states for each year since 1979 in both cash and constant prices; and what future projected aid is planned. [26951]

Mr. Baldry: Total United Kingdom Government bilateral aid for the period 1979 to 1993–94 is set out. Projections of future level of aid are not available.

British Aid Statistics 1994 Edition.

Notes:

[1] Gross Public Expenditure on aid is expenditure by all official UK sources i.e. Government Departments and public bodies such as the Commonwealth Development Corporation.

[2] For years up to 1987 information is available on a calendar year basis only. For subsequent years information is available only on a financial year basis.

[3] Calendar year figures are in 1993 prices while financial year figures are in 1993–94 prices.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the total British humanitarian and emergency relief through both bilateral and multilateral channels in cash and constant prices to the African, Caribbean and Pacific states for each year since 1979; and what humanitarian aid is planned for future years. [26952]

Mr. Baldry: British bilateral emergency aid includes that part of emergency aid channelled through multilateral agencies for which the British Government can identify the specific recipient country in advance. The allocation of other multilateral emergency aid to individual countries is not available.

The following table gives total British bilateral emergency aid to African, Caribbean and Pacific countries for the years 1987–88 to 1993–94. This is the only period for which it is possible to provide this information for these countries on a consistent basis. It is not our practice to publish estimates of expenditures on emergency relief which, by its very nature, is unpredictable.

Multilateral Aid (Export Benefits)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what value in export benefit to British manufacturers arises from each pound contributed in multilateral aid in each year since 1979. [26868]

Mr. Baldry: Data on sources of procurement by the multilateral agencies are subject to various qualifications. The quality and coverage varies from agency to agency; there are considerable fluctuations from year to year in procurement from single countries and the data made available to donors are often late. 1982 is the earliest year for which the comprehensive data are available.

There is no direct link between donor contributions and procurement, but we estimate that over the 10 years between 1982 and 1991 the agencies procured about £1.20 of UK goods and services for every £1 contributed by the UK to the agencies. Estimates for individual years are unreliable.

We are currently compiling estimates from the data provided for 1992 and 1993 and will provide data shortly.

Social Development Summit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons Her Majesty's Government did not support the Copenhagen social summit proposal tabled by the UN Development Programme in respect of a levy on international currency transfers; and if he will make a statement. [27392]

Mr. Baldry: We support the summit's conclusion that this type of taxation should not be promoted as a way of assisting developing countries. There are huge practical difficulties in the application of such a tax and it would distort international financial transactions.

The best way to help poorer countries develop is to allow them to participate fully in international commerce. This is why my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development made it clear in her address to the summit that full implementation of the general agreement on tariffs and trade is more likely to generate increased jobs worldwide than any other single international development.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what grounds Her Majesty's Government did not support the Copenhagen social summit proposal tabled by the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund and the United Nations Development Programme in respect of the 20:20 initiative; and if he will make a statement. [27400]

Mr. Baldry: We worked with our international partners to agree an acceptable formula for the world summit for social development declaration. We support the Copenhagen declaration and programme of action including the section which refers to the 20:20 initiative.

China (Family Planning)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will place in the Library the information provided by the International Planned Parenthood Federation to his Department on the activities of the Chinese Family Planning Association; [27296]

(2) what information he has on the amounts donated to China from the core funds of the United Nations Population Fund—UNFPA—and the International Planned Parenthood Federation for each of the last 16 available years; [27238]

(3) what facilities or arrangements exist for Parliament to monitor the expenditure of funds by the International Planned Parenthood Federation and—UNFPA granted by Her Majesty's Government to the core funds of the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the UNFPA; [27295]

(4) if he will list the results of his policy of funding the Chinese population control programme via the core funds of the UNFPA and the International Planned Parenthood Federation; and if he will make a statement; [27241]

(5) what is his estimate of the number of ultra-sound machines now operating in China; what assistance has been given by the UNFPA, IPPF and the Chinese Family Planning Association in respect of supplying, operating or training operators of such machines; and what information he has on the purposes to which such machines are being put. [27233]

Mr. Baldry [holding answers 8 June 1995]: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will write to the hon. Member and copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what information he has on the situation in the villages of Feng Jia Zhuang and Long Tian Gou in Hebei province, following the Chinese Government's push to enforce population control laws there; and what representations Her Majesty's ambassador to China has made regarding the situation in these villages; [27227]

(2) what information he has on the situation of Chinese Roman Catholics who conscientiously object to Chinese population control policies; and what assurance he has received from the Chinese Government that conscientious objection will be respected; [27228]

(3) if his Department has obtained a copy of the law of the People's Republic of China on maternal and infant health care adopted in October 1994; and if he will raise the law at the United Nations as liable to breach the United Nations guaranteed human rights to found a family freely and decide the number and spacing of children; [27229]

(4) what information he has on eugenic practices in China's population control policy; and if he will make a statement; [27230]

(5) what information he has on the Chinese Government's announcement in February 1995 of tougher goals for population growth rates and the measures to be taken to achieve such goals; and if he will make a statement; [27231]

(6) what information he has on Chinese Government proposals to offer incentives to those complying with population control legislation and to reward local officials who successfully lower regional birth rates; and if he will make a statement; [27232]

(7) what information he has on the reasons for the disproportionate proportion of boys born in China compared with the world's natural birth ratio; and if he will make a statement; [27234]

(8) if he will make a statement on the special report in the April edition of the "Catholic World Report" on the new eugenics law and population control programme in China, a copy of which has been sent to him. [27237]

Mr. Baldry [holding answers 8 June 1995]: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will write to the hon. Member, and copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Desertification

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's schedule for ratification of the desertification convention; and what additional resources will be committed to it. [28014]

Mr. Baldry: We have no specific schedule. We intend to ratify concurrently with other EU and OECD countries. The level of resources committed will depend significantly on the priority given by our developing country partners to projects to combat desertification, in relation to their other proposals for funding from our aid programme.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 58, what satellite remote sensing technology has now been, or will be, supplied to the Indonesian Ministry of Forestry under (a) the bilateral aid programme and (b) commercial arrangements; what is the precise nature of the technology; and which British companies are involved. [28186]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1995]: Under the tropical forestry management programme we have supplied the Ministry of Forestry with a local application of remote sensing techniques—LARST—system to receive and process up-to-the-minute information from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration satellite and Meteosat which are used to monitor the incidence of forest fires in Kalimantan. The project has also supplied NASA satellite imagery for forest and land use mapping purposes.

LARST is a personal computer—based system developed by the Natural Resources Institute at Chatham, in co-operation with the universities of Bradford, Reading and Cranfield, and the Meteorological Office, under an ODA research grant.

LARST is low cost, simple and robust, and has many applications: drought and famine early warning, vegetation and pest monitoring, animal tracking, weather forecasting and aquatic resource management.

As to the precise nature of the technology provided under the aid and trade provision, I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 6 June 1995, Official Report, column 58. The seminar was arranged by Technology Applied Systems Ltd.—using a team which included representatives from the British National Space Centre, Farnborough, the universities of Dundee, Nottingham and North Wales, the Natural Resources Institute, Technology Applied Systems Ltd., Hunting Technical Services and Gems of Cambridge.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 584, if he will give the exact date on which full and formal appraisal documents were submitted by the Overseas Development Administration and the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of the aid and trade provision support for the AIS submarine cable project; and by whom the appraisals were undertaken. [28189]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry's appraisal document was completed in March 1984 and that of the Overseas Development Administration in June 1984. Each appraisal was conducted by officials of the relevant department. The ODA obtained additional advice from technical staff of the Crown Agents for Overseas Governments and Administrations.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, columns 56–57, what specific equipment was supplied under the Bali and Medan airport security project; and who the Government engaged to carry out the associated training programme. [28183]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The equipment supplied under the Bali and Medan airport security systems project was as follows:

External Items
CCTV Cameras
Lifting Boom type gates
Hand-held radios
Mobile X-Ray units
Portable X-Ray units
Microphonic fence detection systems
Microwave transceivers

Internal Items
CCTV Cameras
Hand baggage X-Ray units
Hold baggage X-Ray units
Hand-held metal detectors
Hand-held explosives vapour detectors
Archway metal detectors (Passenger gateways)
Passive infra-red detectors
Access control system
Guard tour points

Associated Items
Cables—mains power, coaxial video, fibre optic, data
Video recorders
Central control console
Camera control system
Alarm monitor computer
Tools and test equipment
Uninterrupted power supplies
Spares
Training was carried out at the college of the UK supplier.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 584, if he will give the exact date on which full and formal appraisal documents were submitted by the Overseas Development Administration and the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of the aid and trade provision support for the Bukit Asam rail bridges project; and by whom the appraisals were undertaken. [28187]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry's appraisal was completed in August 1984 and that of the Overseas Development Administration during October 1984. The appraisals were undertaken by officials of the departments, with assistance from technical staff of the Crown Agents for Overseas Governments and Administrations.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 584, if he will give the exact date on which full and formal appraisal documents were submitted by the Overseas Development Administration and the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of the aid and trade provision support for the isolated diesels project; and by whom the appraisals were undertaken. [28188]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The appraisal documents for this project were submitted by both Departments in August 1982. The appraisals were conducted by the relevant officials in each Department.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 584, if he will give the exact date on which full and formal appraisal documents were submitted by the Overseas Development Administration and the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of the aid and trade provision support for the Mrica hydro project; and by whom the appraisals were undertaken. [28190]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry's appraisal document was completed in September 1981 and that of the Overseas Development Administration in January 1982. Each appraisal was conducted by officials of the relevant department.

Coconut Shells (Fuel)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid he gives to schemes designed to substitute empty shells of coconut and other palm, fast-growing trees and other materials for mangrove, as fuel in coastal areas of developing countries. [26332]

Mr. Baldry: Research carried out by the Natural Resources Institute into the use of coconut shells as fuel, based on carbonisation with waste heat recovery, helped to develop technologies which are being used commercially in Indonesia and Sri Lanka. In addition, the Overseas Development Administration continues to fund research into fast-growing tree species, to provide fuel and other products, through its forestry research programme managed by the Oxford Forestry Institute.

We have helped several developing countries in Asia and central America to carry out tree inventories of coastal zones, including mangrove forests. Most recently, the ODA has offered United Kingdom expertise to South Africa to help prepare strategies for managing its coast line and hopes to agree a coastal zone project shortly in Ghana.

St. Helena

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of state for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what help is being given to St. Helena to restore unique and rare ecology. [26333]

Mr. Baldry: In 1993 the ODA funded a visit to St. Helena by a consultancy team led by the royal botanic gardens, Kew, which prepared a report containing proposals for a sustainable environment and development strategy on the island. Following their consideration of the report, the St. Helena Government made a number of further requests for assistance from the United Kingdom. As a result three consultancies, each dealing with discrete areas of environmental or conservation concern, have taken place. One report, on the rehabilitation of Crown wastelands, has been forwarded to the St. Helena Government for comment. Two further reports, dealing with an endemic plants rescue programme and organic waste composting technology, are awaited.

The ODA also supports the agriculture and forestry department of the St. Helena Government as the body responsible for environmental conservation on St. Helena, through provision of three technical co-operation staff and substantial grant-in-aid contributions to facilitate the Department's on-going habitat restoration work.

Multilateral Aid

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the value of the United Kingdom's contribution, in cash and constant prices, to multilateral aid programmes for each year since 1979 by category of institution; what are the projections for future years; and if he will provide a breakdown of the United Kingdom's contribution to specific programmes of international institutions. [26947]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested, by major categories of multilateral spending, is contained in the tables. Detailed information on UK contributions to individual institutions is published in "British Aid Statistics", copies of which are in the Libraries of the House.

Cameroon

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what help he gives to schemes for eco-tourism in Cameroon. [26334]

Mr. Baldry: We are not directly assisting eco-tourism in Cameroon. However, ODA-supported forestry/biodiversity projects at Mount Cameroon and the Korup national park are attracting small numbers of eco-tourists.

Madagascar

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what help he gives to promoting the needs of biodiversity in Madagascar. [26336]

Mr. Baldry: Under our joint funding scheme we are providing £402,000 in support of two World Wide Fund for Nature projects to assist the Government of Madagascar in biodiversity and protected areas management, and environmental education.

As soon as Madagascar ratifies the convention on biological diversity, it will become eligible to receive funding under the global environment facility.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Baytril

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the use of the drug Baytril in farm animals; [26779]

(2) when the drug Baytril was approved for use in farm animals in the United Kingdom; and how much has been administered per month since approval; [26781]

(3) what estimates he had made on the future levels of Baytril which will be administered to United Kingdom farm animals. [26782]

Mrs. Browning: Baytril contains enrofloxacin, a synthetic broad spectrum antimicrobials, bactericidal in action and effective against a wide range of gram positive and gram negative bacteria, as well as mycoplasmas. It is presented as an oral solution; or injection for farm animals, and licensed for use in pigs, cattle and poultry. Full details are given in the 1994–95 "Compendium of Data Sheets for Veterinary Products," published by the National Office of Animal Health. The major use is in poultry for which licences were issued on 11 November 1993.

Baytril is available on veterinary prescription only and indicated for use only where clinical experience, supported where possible by sensitivity testing of the casual organism, indicates enrofloxacin as the drug of choice. Its use is therefore at the discretion of individual veterinary surgeons, in exercising their professional judgment over the treatment considered necessary on clinical grounds. For this reason, no information is available on the amounts administered per month, nor can forecasts be made on future levels of administration.

Non-human Primates

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information is available to quantify the numbers of non-human primates in transit through or via the United Kingdom for which the United Kingdom is not the final destination. [26671]

Mrs. Browning: Official records are available for all non-human primates entering the United Kingdom which have to be licensed under the Rabies (Importation of Cats, Dogs and other Mammals) Order 1974, as amended. These include animals moved immediately to another port or airport for re-export. Non-human primates which arrive and depart from the same port or airport without entering the United Kingdom are not licensed. Details of such movements will be available from the animal holding facilities at the port or airport.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review importation controls for live primates entering the United Kingdom following the ebola outbreak in Zaire. [26679]

Mrs. Browning: The importation of live non-human primates originating in or coming from Zaire into the European Union is currently prohibited under Commission decision 95/171/EC following the ebola outbreak in that country. My officials are also considering whether any longer-term changes to the import controls for live non-human primates may be necessary.

Food Labelling

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what European Community restrictions apply in respect to member states independently legislating for (a) food labelling and (b) food safety. [26659]

Mrs. Browning: Food labelling is a harmonised area of legislation in the European Community and as a result member states can make new national rules only if they have been notified to the Commission and other member states and if there have been no objections.

Similar arrangements also apply in most cases of food safety legislation. However, member states have greater scope for independent action to deal with emergencies or threats to the safety of their food supplies, in accordance with article 36 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many foods produced using genetic modified organisms have been (a) licensed for sale and (b) labelled as from genetically modified organisms. [27212]

Mrs. Browning: Ministers have accepted the advice of the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes and cleared, on food safety grounds, nine foods produced using genetically modified organisms. The food advisory committee has recommended that GMOs containing ethically sensitive copy genes must be labelled. None of the foods cleared so far requires such labelling, although applicants are encouraged to give informative labelling on a voluntary basis in response to public interest.

Mr Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce labelling of country of origin for (a) meat, (b) meat products, (c) eggs and (d) dairy products. [27198]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave him on 8 June 1995 to a similar question covering meat and meat products. The situation as regards dairy products is the same.

Eggs are covered by separate EC egg marketing regulations, which already contain an option for the use of country or locality of origin descriptions. For eggs imported from third countries, the country of origin must be declared.

Deregulation

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the projects being undertaken by his Department's deregulation unit. [26941]

Mr. Jack: The departmental deregulation unit co-ordinates the Ministry's deregulation programme which covers key measures such as the deregulation of the milk market, the potato market and, more recently, the agricultural tenancy rules. The unit is currently involved in

- the completion of a comprehensive review of the Department's legislation, with a view to repeal or simplification wherever possible;
- the repeal of unnecessary primary legislation using the new deregulation order-making powers contained in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994;
- use of the new deregulation enforcement powers contained at section 5 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 following a comprehensive review of enforcement provisions;
- the preparation of compliance cost assessments for all new regulatory proposals which have the potential to impose burdens on business;
- the improvement of regulatory practice through, for example, the promotion of risk assessment and better guidance to enforcement bodies;
- action on priorities for deregulation identified by the deregulation task force;
- action to repeal or simplify national food composition regulations, and to simplify national food labelling regulations and food additives regulations.

Slaughterhouses

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses in the United Kingdom have failed to reach the required standards of hygiene and animal welfare in the years 1994–95. [26956]

Mrs. Browning: Where hygiene falls below the required standards, action depends on the circumstances of the case and will range from discussions—confirmed in writing—with slaughterhouse operators explaining the specific deficiencies and suggesting improvements in working practices and equipment, to the refusal or revocation of licences. In the 1994–95 financial year in the UK we acted to refuse or revoke 19 licences on hygiene grounds, of which 11 were subsequently relicensed.

The state veterinary service made 1,982 visits to licensed red meat and poultry slaughterhouses in Great Britain last year and 206 visits to unlicensed poultry premises in England and Wales at which welfare was monitored. Figures for visits to unlicensed premises in Scotland are not available. In 17 cases—three licensed and 14 unlicensed premises—conditions were found which warranted welfare advice to be given. Where necessary, follow-up visits are made to ensure that the advice is acted upon.

In Northern Ireland departmental veterinary staff on permanent duty at meat plants regard animal welfare as a priority. Advice is provided when necessary and on no occasions were conditions found to be unacceptable.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what circumstances sheep may be exported for outdoor religious slaughter, and in what circumstances such slaughter conforms with EU slaughter and hygiene regulations. [27106]

Mrs. Browning: Directive 91/628/EEC on the protection of animals during transport contains measures subject to which the transport of animals between member states is permitted. The provisions of this directive are implemented in our national law by the Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1994, as amended.

As for slaughter, this is covered by directive 93/119/EC on the protection of animals at the time of slaughter or killing which recognises the particular requirements of certain religious rites. The directive also requires that all animals, including sheep slaughtered by a religious method outdoors, are spared any avoidable excitement, pain or suffering during their movement, lairaging, restraint or slaughter. However, outdoor religious slaughter is carried out for the owner of the animal and the meat derived from the animal is returned to the owner for his own use. As no sale is involved, such slaughter is not required to comply with EU hygiene rules, which apply only to the slaughter of animals whose flesh is intended to be placed on the market and require such slaughter to take place in approved premises.

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated number of sheep and lambs that die, each year, in transit from the United Kingdom. [26957]

Mrs. Browning: No such estimates are made.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what grounds he has decided not to implement article 36 of the treaty of Rome in respect of imposing export restrictions on grounds of public morality, public policy or the health of animals; and if he will make a statement. [27338]

Mrs. Browning: My right hon. Friend has set out in some detail the legal reasons why article 36 of the treaty of Rome is not available to justify imposing restrictions on the export of live animals. I refer the hon. Member to the reply he gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Thanet, North (Mr. Gale) and the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 2 February 1995, Official Report, columns 846–47.

Food Science Laboratory, Torry

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost of the most recent refurbishment of the food science laboratory at Torry, Aberdeen; and if he will make a statement on the proposal to close the laboratory. [27372]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 9 June 1995]: The most recent refurbishment of the food science laboratory at Torry took place between 1991 and 1994 at a cost of £1,997,000. It was completed before Torry became part of the enlarged central science laboratory. As to the proposal to close the Torry laboratory, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight) on 6 June 1995, Official Report, columns 1–2.

Fishing Vessels

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his Spanish counterpart in respect of avoiding acts of aggression towards United Kingdom fishing vessels; what measures are in place to ensure the safety of fishing vessels; what steps have been taken in anticipation of the opening of the tuna fisheries; and if he will make a statement. [27404]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 9 June 1995]: We keep in close contact at ministerial, diplomatic and technical level with the Spanish authorities both directly and through EU channels. The Royal Navy has the dual role of enforcing fisheries regulations and protecting UK fishing vessels. In the case of this year's tuna fishery in the north-east Atlantic, the Government have been closely in touch with the fisheries organisations. Among other things, a procedure has been agreed for measuring and recording the length of their nets before departure to the fishing grounds and for regular checks at sea.

Wine Industry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what amount of financial support has been given by the European Community to the wine industry in each member state for the past five years; and what is the forecast of funding for each of the next three years. [28155]

Mr. Jack: Details of expenditure on the wine regime by the EU, broken down by member state, are contained in annexe 2 of the annual financial reports on the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund, guarantee section, copies of which have been deposited in the Library. The latest report available relates to 1993. Figures for the main wine-producing member states for 1994, taken from the draft annual financial report, are set out in the table.

Country	£ million
Germany	6.1
Greece	29.2
Spain	290.6
France	176.5
Italy	365.5
Holland	2.5
Portugal	29.4
United Kingdom	0.8
EU Total	901.3

The common agricultural policy budget is drawn up one year in advance, and is set in relation to forecast expenditure throughout the EU, and not on the basis of allocations to individual member states. The current budget for 1995 is £843 million and for 1996, £913 million.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what veterinary products are now approved by his Department to prevent sheep scab and flystrike which avoid the need to use organophosphorous sheep dips; and if he will make a statement. [28353]

Mrs. Browning: A number of non-organophosphorus products are licensed for the treatment of these conditions. Details are contained in the booklet "Veterinary Medicinal Products (Dips, injectables, pour ons and sprays) available in the United Kingdom for use as Ectoparasiticides in Sheep" published by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate. Copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

TREASURY

Retail Prices

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the largest percentage increase in price of any one item included in the retail prices index since May 1994. [27581]

Mr. Nelson: Average price information is available only at item level and only for selected homogeneous products. Of these average prices, the largest percentage increase was for old loose white potatoes which rose by 55 per cent. between May 1994 and April 1995.

At the section level of aggregation, which is published for the whole RPI, the largest percentage increase in any index between May 1994 and April 1995 was 41 per cent. for unprocessed potatoes.

The largest percentage increase for a non-seasonal item was 42 per cent. for filter coffee.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the change in the cost of mortgage interest since May 1994; and what effect this has had on the retail prices index. [27582]

Mr. Nelson: The percentage increase in the mortgage interest payments index between May 1994 and April 1995 contributed +0.79 percentage points to the 2.9 per cent. increase in all items RPI. During this period the average mortgage interest rate used in the calculation of this index rose from 7.70 per cent. to 8.36 per cent.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the new date will be for the payment of capital gains tax under self-assessment; how the bringing forward of its date will affect the period allowed for reinvestment relief; and in what respects he will adjust the effects of this change of date for capital gains and taxpayers in respect of periods of relief. [27933]

Sir George Young: Under self-assessment, capital gains tax will normally become due and payable on 31 January following the year of assessment to which it relates. This is later than the present date of 1 December. Reinvestment relief is available where qualifying shares are acquired within one year before, or three years after, the disposal of an asset. The change in the due and payable date for capital gains tax under self-assessment does not affect this period.

VAT (Home Care)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to zero rate home care services for VAT purposes where the home care is provided by non-medically qualified personnel in the private sector. [28218]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: None. Any extension of existing zero rates would be contrary to the EC sixth VAT directive.

Additional Personal Allowance

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many married men with a totally incapacitated wife were entitled to the additional personal allowance for the year 1994–95. [28345]

Sir George Young: About 10,000.

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual costs of extending the additional personal allowance to married women with a totally incapacitated husband. [28343]

Sir George Young: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Inland Revenue and Contributions Agency

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor or the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the administrative savings to be made from amalgamating the Inland Revenue and the Contributions Agency. [28334]

Sir George Young: The relationship between the Contributions Agency and the Inland Revenue was examined last year. It was concluded that the overlap between the Revenue and the agency did not warrant an amalgamation of the two businesses. In addition, any efficiency gains would be outweighed by transitional costs and disruption to both departments.

Work is in hand, as part of their respective deregulatory plans, to achieve closer working between the two organisations which should offer worthwhile savings to business.

Income Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the annual cost to the Exchequer of reducing the tax rate applicable to the lower rate income tax band from 20 per cent. to 10 per cent. [28140]

Sir George Young [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The direct revenue cost would be about £5.2 billion in a full year at 1995–96 income levels.

Earnings (Female)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of women who have earnings below (a) the tax threshold and (b) the national insurance threshold at the latest date. [27951]

Sir George Young [holding answer 13 June 1995]: It is estimated that in 1995–96 about 2.2 million women employees have no income tax liability, and about 2.3 million have earnings below the national insurance lower earnings limit. Some women in this latter category will be taxpayers due to income from other sources.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what dates he or other Ministers or former Ministers in his Department received extracts for comment from Sir Richard Scott's draft report; on what date comments were submitted to Sir Richard; and what requests have been made for an extension of the period within which comments should have been made. [27555]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses. In the case of draft extracts in particular, the inquiry has asked that these be treated in the strictest confidence.

Economic Statement

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the economy. [29179]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Achieving low inflation is a key feature of the Government's economic policy to deliver prosperity and secure jobs. The Government's current aim for underlying inflation is to keep within the range 1 to 4 per cent., and to get down to the lower half of the range—that is 2½ per cent. or less—by the end of the present Parliament. I am fully committed to achieving that aim and do not propose to change it.

Beyond this Parliament, I propose that our aim will be to continue to achieve underlying inflation—measured by the RPI excluding mortgage interest payments—of 2½ per cent. or less. Monetary policy will be set consistently to achieve this target. This should ensure that inflation will remain in the range 1 to 4 per cent.

Achieving this target would put us on course to achieve the best performance on inflation this country has seen for over half a century and one of the best performances in Europe.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Churchill Papers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consideration he gave to arranging for the Sir Winston Churchill wartime documents to be circulated to museums and county archives throughout the United Kingdom, instead of being housed permanently at Churchill college, Cambridge; and if he will make a statement. [27935]

Mr. Dorrell: In making a grant to the Sir Winston Churchill archive trust, access to the archives and the conservation and presentation of the papers to scholars and the general public were always key priorities for the trustees of the national heritage memorial Fund. Churchill college, Cambridge will be mounting an exhibition of selected papers from the Churchill archive at the Jock Colville hall, from 29 June to 4 July. There are also plans to show selected papers at the British museum, at the national museums of Scotland and Wales and at other institutions in the near future.

English Heritage (Advice)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the occasions when advice by English Heritage in relation to urban development corporations has been overruled by a Secretary of State; and what was in each case the reason for the decision to overrule advice by English Heritage. [27785]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 June 1995]: My Department has no record of any cases in which English Heritage's advice on scheduled monument consent applications by urban development corporations has been overruled.

Royal William Yard, Plymouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations have been received by his Department regarding the type of slate to be used on the roof of listed buildings at Royal William yard in Plymouth, and if he is prepared to accept further representations. [27787]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 June 1995]: My Department has received representations from Camborne Natural Slate Ltd. As with all applications for scheduled monument consent, I will consider all relevant representations up to the time of my decision.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to make recommendations to the Plymouth development corporation regarding the type of slate which should be used to cover the roof area of listed buildings within the Royal William yard; and if he will make a statement. [27791]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 June 1995]: I have no such plans. My Department has received six applications for scheduled monument consent from the Plymouth development corporation to refurbish individual buildings in the Royal William yard, Plymouth, which would include the replacement of roof slates. My Department is currently considering advice received from English Heritage, which has had discussions with the development corporation about the choice of historically appropriate slates. I will issue decisions in due course.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total cost difference between using Camborne slate and Welsh slate to cover the roofs of listed buildings at Royal William yard in Plymouth. [27784]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 June 1995]: Precise figures cannot be released for reasons of commercial confidentiality but I understand that Welsh slates are expected to be 50 per cent. more expensive than Camborne slates.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what scientific evidence has been presented to his Department by English Heritage in respect of its decision to recommend the use of Welsh slate on the roof of listed buildings at Royal William yard in Plymouth. [27786]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 June 1995]: I am advised by English Heritage that Rennie's original specification for roofing material in Royal William yard merely required best sized Queen Rag slates. The actual source of the slates was not specified, and has not been identified by historical research. In practice, the choice would have been between Welsh and Cornish slates. The latter are no longer available in the quantity required, and Welsh slates remain the likely nearest equivalent historically, and the best match in terms of tones and textures.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the original slate specification in the application for monument consent by Plymouth development corporation regarding the roof area of listed buildings at Royal William yard; how many times the slate specification has since been changed; and what is the current slate specification. [27788]

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 12 June 1995]: None of the six applications for scheduled monument consent contained a specification for a particular source of slate when first submitted by the Plymouth development corporation. Camborne natural slates were subsequently proposed by the Plymouth development corporation for four of the applications, but all the applications have now been changed by the corporation to specify slates of Welsh origin.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid Fraud

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many firms of solicitors are currently being investigated for alleged legal aid fraud by the Legal Aid Board; and what were the figures in each of the last five years. [28318]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The number of detailed investigations currently being undertaken by the Legal Aid Board against solicitors' firms for alleged legal aid fraud is 87. These are all cases which have been carried forward from 1994–95. To date, no new cases have been undertaken this financial year.

The number of detailed investigations in each of the last five years is as follows:

Financial year	Cases brought forward from previous year	New cases started	Total cases during year
1990–91	31	28	59
1991–92	53	25	78
1992–93	60	38	98
1993–94	74	32	106
1994–95	89	28	117

EDUCATION

Chinley School

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received in relation to the proposal for grant-maintained status at Chinley school, Derbyshire; and if she will give a breakdown of the nature of those representations and their origin. [28467]

Mr. Robin Squire: None.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to her answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 9, which of the bodies listed in the reply to the hon. Member for the City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg) of 7 February, Official Report, column 145, supported the introduction of vouchers for nursery education. [28275]

Mr. Forth: Most of the responses to consultation were received before voucher funding for pre-school education became an issue for debate.

Nevertheless, written responses from the following organisations support a voucher scheme;

Incorporated Association of Preparatory Schools
National Private Day Nurseries Association
Playgroup Network
The GM Initiative.

Technology Centres

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her Department's involvement in the network of regional technology centres being set up by the Gatsby charitable foundation; and if she will make a statement. [28280]

Mr. Forth: The Department for Education and the Office for Standards in Education are represented on the working group for this initiative. We welcome the support that the Gatsby charitable foundation is giving to technology education.

School Meals

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the percentage and number of children receiving (a) free school meals and (b) parentally paid for school meals for the last 10 years in England. [28439]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on school meal arrangements in maintained schools in England since 1989 is shown in the table. Information prior to 1989 is not available on a comparable basis although results of earlier school meals censuses were published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy in, for example, "School Meal Statistics at October 1988" copies of which are available in the Library.

Number and percentages[1] of day-pupils taking paid and free school meals in maintained schools[2] in England 1989–94
Position in January each year

	Paid		Free
	Number	Percentage	Number	Percentage
1994	1,980,295	27	1,217,126	17
1993	1,956,106	27	1,137,895	16
1992	2,001,644	28	998,872	14
1991	2,130,350	31	819,058	12
1990	2,203,226	32	762,486	11
1989	2,205,181	32	776,900	11

[1] The number of day pupils who took a paid or free meal on the census day expressed as a percentage of the number of day pupils on roll.

[2] Excludes sixth form colleges which ceased to be classified as schools in April 1993.

Bull Bars

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many vehicles owned or hired by her Department are fitted with bull bars; for what reasons; and what plans she has to remove them. [28251]

Mr. Boswell: None of the vehicles owned by the Department are fitted with bull bars.

Teachers' Salaries

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list for each education authority not in receipt of area cost adjustment the average teacher's salary for the last year for which figures are available; if she will list for each education authority in receipt of area cost adjustment the average teacher's salary for the last year for which figures are available' and whether average salaries include (i) London weighting allowances and (ii) special responsibility allowances. [28362]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield Brightside, (Mr. Blunkett) on 12 June, Official Report, column 417. The average salaries quoted in the table do include London weighting allowances and incentive allowances for additional responsibilities where applicable.

Pre-school Provision

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the number and percentage of four-year-olds in (a) maintained nursery schools and nursery classes, (b) reception classes in primary schools, (c) private or voluntary sector provision and (d) pre-school provision overall, at the latest available date. [28079]

Mr. Forth: The table shows the breakdown between schools for four-year-olds born between 1 January 1989 and 31 August 1989. This is based on information collected in the Department's schools' census in January 1994. It excludes both those children who were three years old on 31 August 1993 but who were four years old on 1 January 1994, and those who were four years old on 31 August 1993 but who were five years old on 1 January 1994—the rising fives.

A separate estimate of all children who were four years old on 1 January 1994 suggests that at that time 498,000 four-year-olds—77 per cent. of all children aged four—were attending maintained schools. We estimate that approximately 120,000 more—19 per cent. of all children aged four—were in some form of private or voluntary provision.

Pupils aged 4 years of age in schools in England: January 1994

School type	Pupils	Percentage of population [1]
Maintained nursery schools and infant classes	48,176	11
Infant classes in primary schools	326,634	75
Independent schools[2]	18,511	4
All schools[3]	395,384	91

[1] Full-time and part-time pupils aged 4 years of age at 31 August 1993 excluding pupils of compulsory school age in January 1994 (the rising 5s), expressed as a percentage of the relevant portion of the population aged 4 at 31 August 1993.

[2] Includes pupils in direct grant nursery schools.

[3] Includes pupils in maintained nursery, primary and special schools, non-maintained special schools and independent schools.

Student Grants

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the number and percentage of students in higher education qualifying for full maintenance grants. [20011]

Mr. Boswell: Information is collected centrally only on the effect of means testing on some grants paid to students in higher education. Provisional figures for 1993–94 show that 325,000 mandatory award holders domiciled in England and Wales received grants which were not reduced on account of their or their parents' or spouses' resources. This represents 45 per cent. of all mandatory award holders.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action is being taken to ensure that deactivated firearms are not brought back into use. [27908]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The standards to which firearms are deactivated have been comprehensively reviewed. Revised, more stringent specifications will be introduced shortly.

Live Performances (Minors)

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has given to local authorities about the admission of minors to live performances in local authority venues of material classified as adult viewing when available on videotape. [27968]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: None. The Theatres Act 1968 does not provide for age restrictions to be included in the licensing conditions imposed by local authorities.

Equalities Associates

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) to what extent the contract for race and community relations training which was put out to tender in 1994 was similar to the previous contract awarded to Equalities Associates in 1989; and if he will list the differences; [28134]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 152, if the contract awarded to Equalities Associates in 1994 was the same as was tendered for by Equalities Associates and others in 1994; and if he will place copies of the contracts, for (a) 1989 and (b) 1994, in the Library. [28135]

Mr. Maclean: Details of contracts are subject to commercial confidentiality. On each occasion, bidders were invited to submit their plans for the provision of specialist support in community and race relations training for the police service. Equalities Associates provided the best combination of quality and value in competition with other bidders, and the contract with it was finalised by negotiation.

Race and Community Relations

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the central planning and training unit and the police staff college will be employing civilians and lay contributors to provide training in race and community relations in accordance with the recommendations by Lord Scarman. [28133]

Mr. Maclean: Both the central planning and training unit and the police staff college already employ civilian trainers who assist in providing community and race relations training. Both establishments work closely with the specialist support unit, Turvey, which provides training for the training staff, and with the Equal Opportunities Commission and Commission for Racial Equality who provide contributions for some courses.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will provide a breakdown by ethnic origin for all staff at the police staff college, Bramshill and the central planning and training unit, Harrogate; which are civilians and which are serving police officers; if he will list the dates on which they joined the units, their grades or ranks; if he will list those who would be used as trainers for the race and community relations courses at the police staff college and the central police training unit; and if these persons would be trained to deliver race and community relations training. [28131]

Mr. Maclean: Of 108 staff at the central planning and training unit, Harrogate, 104 are white and four are of ethnic minority origin, 67 are police officers and 41 are civilians.

The most recent survey at the police staff college, Bramshill, showed that of 100 civilian staff, 91 were white, three were of ethnic minority origin, and six were not classified. The survey did not cover police officers, of whom there are currently 20.

Staff who deliver training in community and race relations at either the police staff college or at the central planning and training unit undergo appropriate training at the Home Office specialist support unit, Turvey.

The other information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 192, if he will place in the Library a copy of the HMI (Schools) and the independent assessor's report on the specialist support unit. [28129]

Mr. Maclean: These reports will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, columns 192–93, if he will place in the Library copies of the relevant minutes regarding funding of the Home Office specialist support unit's management board meetings. [28137]

Mr. Maclean: No. The board is not an executive body, and decisions on funding remain with the Home Office.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the expertise of the central planning and training unit and the police staff college to provide the training in race and community relations to the level that is currently being provided by the Home Office specialist support unit; and if he will make a statement. [28132]

Mr. Maclean: The present contract of the specialist support unit—requires it to provide advice and support to the central planning and training unit—EPTU—so that the latter should be capable of providing community and race relations training to police service trainers by the end of the current contract period in June 1997. The SSU provides advice to both the CPTU and Bramshill in the planning of community and race relations elements in training courses. It is for the management of the colleges to ensure training provision is effective.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 193, how many police officers, at the level of superintendent and above, have attended the Holly Royde seminars in the last five years. [28128]

Mr. Maclean: A total of 222 officers have attended as members of the seminar over the last five years, of which 99 were at superintendent rank or above. In addition a number of senior officers, including chief constables, have contributed to the seminar programme.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 192, if he will list the amount paid by the Home Office to the Home Office specialist support unit for race and community relations training in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95, and the amounts paid by HMI of constabulary to the Home Office specialist support unit in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95. [28136]

Mr. Maclean: Home Office funding for the unit was as follows, including provision of approximately £60,000 in each year for seconded police liaison officers:

1993–94: £598,000

1994–95: £543,000

No funding was provided to the unit by HM inspectorate of constabulary.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 191, who is responsible for assessing the police trainers in their competence to deliver race and community relations training; who trained the assessors; when they were trained; and what assessment he has made of their competence to judge race and community relations training. [28130]

Mr. Maclean: Training is provided in various ways in the police service at the central planning and training unit; the police staff college at Bramshill; local police training centres; and by forces. Assessment of trainers is a matter for line managers at each venue. Specialist training for trainers and force training managers is provided at the specialist support unit, which also provides consultancy to the colleges and training centres on the planning and assessment of community and race relations inputs.

Central records are not maintained of the number of trainers, but 15 out of the 17 directors of study at CPTU, who are responsible for assessment of trainers, have received specialist training at the SSU over the last two years. In addition, a new competency-based trainers' course is being introduced there in consultation with SSU staff.

Animal Experiments (Tobacco)

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of animals used in experiments in the United Kingdom to investigate the effects of tobacco products in each year between 1987 and 1993; and if he will identify separately the numbers used to investigate the effects of environmental tobacco smoke. [28115]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I refer the hon. member to the reply given to questions from the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 30 March, Official Report, column 807.

Statistics for the numbers of animals used to investigate the effects of environmental tobacco smoke are not separately recorded.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under which category in Home Office statistics experiments on animals for the effects of environmental tobacco smoke are listed. [28114]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Where the primary purpose of the procedure is to study the effects of environmental tobacco smoke on body systems, it would be included in the appropriate column of the "body systems studies" section of tables 2A and 2B, and in the corresponding section of table 25. Where the primary purpose is to evaluate the general hazards posed by environmental tobacco smoke, it would be included within the safety column of the "applied studies or purposes" section of tables 2A and 2B; and also in the corresponding sections of table 25, and in the "tobacco" columns of tables 3 and 26. All references are to the "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Liming Animals, Great Britain 1993".

The revised system for the collection of statistics, being introduced this year, will ensure that all work relating to tobacco will in future be clearly distinguished.

Child Witnesses

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department intends to take in response to the findings of Leicester university research into the effectiveness of the special provisions for child witnesses contained in the Criminal Justice Act 1991. [27925]

Mr. Maclean: We are considering the findings of this report, and in particular whether the memorandum of good practice should be revised to take account of them.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to revise the memorandum of good practice in child abuse cases to clarify and refine the recommendations governing the decision to interview. [27926]

Mr. Maclean: We are considering whether to revise the memorandum of good practice to take account of this and other points raised by research and experience to date.

Aids (Prisoners)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates in prisons in England and Wales are currently HIV positive or have AIDS. [28006]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 14 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of inmates in prisons in England and Wales who are currently HIV positive or have AIDS.

At present, 51 male and 3 female inmates are reported by prison medical officers as being HIV positive. There is no one currently in the prison system in England and Wales who is reported to have AIDS.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been infected with HIV while in prison in England and Wales. [28004]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 14 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about AIDS/HIV in prison.

There is only one documented case of a prisoner who clearly became infected with HIV while within the prison system in England and Wales. This infection occurred in 1993.

Prison Cells

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cells holding one prisoner in 1992–93 currently hold more than one prisoner. [28109]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Mike O'Brien, dated 14 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of cells holding one prisoner in 1992–93 which currently hold more than one prisoner.

The information requested is not available centrally.

However, in 1992–93 the average total prison population in England and Wales was 43,903. The average number of prisoners sharing a cell designed for one was 7,727, 17.6% of the total population. On 26 May 1995, the total prison population in England and Wales was 50,802. The number of prisoners sharing a cell designed for one was 8,362, 16.5% of the total population.

Mr. Marc Rich

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the charges relating to tax fraud faced by Mr. Marc Rich from US authorities. [28073]

Mr. Maclean: As far as I can ascertain, no representations on this subject have been received recently. This is an operational matter which falls entirely within the responsibility of the chief constable.

Disabled Police Officers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers became disabled in each year since 1992–93; how many of those were found employment within the police service; and what arrangements were made for those not found such employment. [27996]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The information is not available. However, information is available for 1992 and 1993 on the numbers of medical retirement, and is shown in the table.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Report

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General which Ministers, former Ministers or civil servants, in his Department have sought independent legal advice in assisting their response to draft extracts from Sir Richard Scott's report; in each case from whom the advice has been sought; and what limit has been placed on payment for such advice from public funds. [28387]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister today.

Private Prosecutions

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General on how many occasions in the last five years the Director of Public Prosecutions has taken over a private prosecution and then dropped it; and if he will list the details. [21738]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 4 May 1995]: Crown Prosecution Service headquarters has asked senior staff who might reasonably be expected to recall private prosecutions which have been taken over by the Crown Prosecution Service and terminated to provide details of such cases. The table sets out the number of such cases in relation to each CPS area and CPS headquarters casework division.

The numbers cited cannot be taken as definitive because the information given is based on staff memory. It relates to the period since April 1993 when the present CPS areas came into being.

PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28522]

The Prime Minister: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Appointments

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the appointments which he is specifically required and/or able to make by virtue of his office; and if he will list those appointments which arise during the next 12 months; and if he will list the name, age, expected time commitment, place of residence, current or previous occupation and salary, honorarium, allowance or payment for each post; and if he will make a statement. [28536]

The Prime Minister: A list of the appointments to public bodies which I am able to make as Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury is available in the Library of the House. It is not possible to know all those appointments which will arise in the next 12 months. The details requested for each post are not available.

Director General of Gas Supply

Dr. Spink: To ask the Prime Minister what action he intends to take to resist excessive pay demands from those who serve the public; and if he will make a statement on the recent pay claim from the Director General of Ofgas. [27322]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 13 June, Official Report, columns 451-52.

Government Property

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Prime Minister how many houses and flats are owned by Government departments; and how many of these are currently empty. [27796]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Up-to-date information is being calculated and will be published by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment in due course.

Scott Report

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister which Ministers, former Ministers or civil servants have sought independent legal advice in assisting their response to draft extracts from Sir Richard Scott's report; in each case from whom the advice has been sought; and what limit has been placed on payment for such advice from public funds. [28386]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Sir Richard Scott has requested that all those in receipt of extracts from his draft report should hold this material in confidence. The Government are not aware of the identity of all the recipients and, in accordance with the vice-chancellor's request, would not consider it right to disclose the identity of those recipients of whom it is aware.

Apart from legal advice from departmental lawyers, legal services have been provided to witnesses to the inquiry by the Treasury Solicitor's department and by external lawyers. In each case their costs are subject to the approval of the legal advisers to the Departments who are responsible for payment.

TRANSPORT

Railway Restructuring

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provision he is making for the additional costs being incurred by the English passenger transport authorities and their executives as a result of the restructuring of the railways. [29266]

Mr. Watts: A special grant report has been laid before the house today for the payment of metropolitan railway grant in 1995–96 to English passenger transport authorities. The broad aim of MRG is to provide support to those PTAs for the additional costs failing to be met by the PTAs in the financial year 1995–96 for the railway passenger services provided by British Rail to those authorities' passenger transport executives, arising from the restructuring of railways in Great Britain in accordance with the Railways Act 1995.

Airline Pilots

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list his Department's individual replies to the specific objections in respect of the Civil Aviation Authority proposals made by the British Airline Pilots Association on (a) flight and duty times, (b) split duty, (c) time zone crossing, (d) rest requirement, (e) augment crew and (f) standby. [27330]

Mr. Norris: The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for flight and duty time limitation schemes, including technical assessment of the joint aviation authorities' proposals. The Department has not responded in detail to the British Airline Pilots Association's specific objections as these are a matter for the authority. However, the authority has assured my noble Friend the Minister for Aviation that the JAA proposals, if introduced, would provide an equivalent level of protection against the onset of fatigue to the current United Kingdom requirements.

Road Registration Act 1984

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the orders made under section 20 of the Road Regulation Act 1984 or its predecessor sections since 1965. [28220]

Mr. Norris: No such orders have been made.

Railways (Staffing)

Ms Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many stations within (a) the Tilbury and Southend region, (b) the south-eastern operating region, (c) the Gatwick express region, (d) the Network South Central region, (e) the south west train operating region, (f) the Thameslink operating region, (g) the Anglia operating region, (h) the Great Eastern operating region, (i) the West Anglia and Great Northern operating region and (j) the North London Railways operating region are unstaffed after 6 pm and at weekends; and if he will provide equivalent figures for 1979; [28011]

(2) how many stations within the Thames train operating region unstaffed after 6 pm and at weekends; and if he will provide equivalent figures for 1979. [28016]

Mr. Watts: The information requested is a matter for British Rail. I understand that it does not hold this information centrally. It is therefore not readily available.

Yachtsmen

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has commissioned in the last three years into the effect on the behaviour of yachtsmen of (a) seasickness remedies, (b) alcohol, (c) wave motion. [27536]

Mr. Norris: None.

Intoxicated Helmsmen

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest estimate of the total number of (a) registered and (b) unregistered boats and small craft in the United Kingdom; and what percentage of them have been found to be under the command of an intoxicated helmsman in each of the last three years. [27535]

Mr. Norris: There are approximately 75,000 yachts and small craft on the United Kingdom shipping register; statistics are not held on the number of unregistered vessels. No records are kept on the percentage of these vessels that have been found under the command of intoxicated helmsmen.

Flight Data Recorders

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation as a matter of urgency to ensure that all aircraft equipped to carry fare paying passengers are fitted with flight data recorders irrespective of the number of fare-paying passengers; and if he will make a statement. [27401]

Mr. Norris: The joint aviation authorities are responsible for setting the criteria for the fitting of flight data recorders. The joint aviation requirement on commercial air transportation adopted on 1 April specifies that all new aircraft with more than nine passenger seats be equipped with flight data recorders. This is in line with existing United Kingdom legislation.

The Civil Aviation Authority does not believe that the fitting of flight data recorders to smaller aircraft would increase aviation safety in the UK.

Waste, Ports

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the waste reception facilities available at each United Kingdom port and the amount of waste collected by each port for the last five years. [26111]

Mr. Norris: The Marine Safety Agency has recently conducted a questionnaire survey of the provision of waste reception facilities. Copies have been placed in the House Library. Information on the amount of waste collected by ports for the last five years is not available.

DEFENCE

Joint Headquarters, Northwood

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the (a) role, (b) establishment and (c) cost of set-up of the new joint military operations headquarters at Northwood; and if he will make a statement. [27394]

Mr. Soames: The establishment of the new permanent joint headquarters will significantly enhance the United Kingdom's ability to plan and conduct joint operations. Its role will be to draw together contingency planning, co-ordinate joint operational activities, joint training and exercises, and act as a focus for joint doctrine. In so doing, it will eradicate the disadvantages inherent in the current system of creating an ad hoc JHQ. Detailed work on the establishment continues, but it is expected to be around 330 permanent staff, including watchkeepers to allow the HQ to function on a 24-hour basis. The initial costs of setting up the JHQ are estimated at some £12,000,000, and the running costs, including manpower, at some £15,000,000 per annum. Annual running costs are expected to be offset by compensating reductions in manpower and other costs elsewhere in the Department.

Military Base Inspections

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inspections of military bases in the United Kingdom were made under the terms of the intermediate nuclear forces treaty in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995 to-date; and what was the result of each inspection. [28271]

Mr. Soames: None.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many inspections of overseas United Kingdom forces' military bases under the terms of the intermediate nuclear forces treaty were made in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995 to date; and what was the result of each inspection. [28270]

Mr. Soames: None. The United Kingdom is not a state party to the intermediate range nuclear forces treaty and therefore our military bases are not subject to inspection under the treaty.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information Her Majesty's Government possess on the number of nuclear weapons currently deployed in non-nuclear weapons states by each of the five countries defined as nuclear weapons powers by the non-proliferation treaty. [27650]

Mr. Soames: Under NATO nuclear burden sharing arrangements, US and United Kingdom nuclear weapons may be deployed in some other alliance countries. We do not comment on the details of current weapon deployments within the alliance. Russia still has nuclear weapons on the territories of Ukraine and Belarus.

Nimrod

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when and where the last major servicing of the recently crashed Nimrod was carried out; and if this was the responsibility of a civilian contractor. [27909]

Mr. Soames: The Nimrod which ditched into the Moray firth on 16 May was on a routine test flight having just completed a major servicing at RAF Kinloss. As I made clear in my answer of 25 May to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), Official Report, column 659, the servicing was carried out by RAF personnel.

Defence Animal Centre

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Defence Animal Centre in 1995–96. [29065]

Mr. Soames: The key targets for the Defence Animal Centre in 1995–96 are as follows.

1. Review and where necessary establish service level agreements (SLA), or the appropriate equivalent, with customers.

2. Meet at least 95 per cent. of SLA targets.

3. Implement an interim output costing system.

4. Reduce the net full cost, as shown in the accruals account, by 2.5 per cent.

6. Through the MOD competing for quality programme, identify and realise the full value for money potential in the DAC.

Defence Postal and Courier Agency

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the key targets for the Defence Postal and Courier Agency for 1995–96. [29265]

Mr. Soames: The chief executive of the Defence Postal and Courier Services Agency has been set the following key targets for 1995–96:

1. Achieve BS EN 9002 for BFPO London.

2. Increase efficiency by 0.5 per cent. against the 1994–95 target by input or output means.

3. Both postal and courier Services to maintain present levels of service whilst implementing Defence Costs Study No 10 recommendations.

Queen Victoria School

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Queen Victoria school in 1995–96. [29241]

Mr. Soames: The key targets for the Queen Victoria school in 1995–96 are as follows:

Academic Curriculum

To achieve at least three standard grade passes at credit and general levels for 90 per cent. of S4 pupils. To achieve at least five standard grades—1 to 3—for 60 per cent. of S4 pupils. To achieve three higher passes at A to C grades for 60 per cent. of S5/S6 leavers. To achieve 90 per cent. successful completion of SCOTVEC modules started on or before 9 January 1996. To continue with the phased implementation of 5 to 14 national programme, in line with SOED recommendations; initially in English language, maths and environmental studies. Included in this will be the corresponding recording, reporting and assessment procedures in these areas. In addition, to trial team teaching of science in P7 using senior and junior school staff. To review and where appropriate update curricular guidance for S4/S5 as detailed by the Scottish Consultative Council on Curriculum January 1990.

Pastoral

To continue to monitor the effectiveness of the school pastoral policy and organisation document and, specifically, to produce a school policy on anti-bullying by 31 March 1996. To introduce improved career guidance provision.

Parents' Charter
To improve communication with parents and their involvement in the school by examining the requirement, in consultation with parents, for a parents' association.

Extra-Curricular Provision
To maintain and enrich the extensive extra-curricular activities, physical, cultural, social and academic.

Staffing
To continue with teacher appraisal and development by completing an agreed person job description with all teaching staff by 31 March 1996.

Marketing
To maintain the improved marketing procedures adopted in 1994–95. To review and improve the prospectus, especially with a view to girls' entry.

Admission of Girls
To continue with the planning and work services programme, appropriate to the admission of girls for both sessions 1996–97 and 1997–98.

Management
To review and improve joining instructions to the school both primary and secondary. To follow the SOED's guidelines for school development plans—Scotland 19 January 1994—and, having linked in with the central region phase 2 schools, have a school development plan ready for January 1996. To carry out a study of the current accounting systems and reduce the number of accounting procedures necessary.

Finance
To maintain standards within the budget allocated. To generate non-public income to the school of 1 per cent. of the school cash budget.

Equal Opportunities
To ensure that the School conforms to the Adjutant General's equal opportunities action plan.

Attack Helicopters

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy that, in his consideration of bids for the procurement of attack helicopters for the British Army, he will take into account the capacity to fly operationally from the Royal Navy's aircraft carriers and assault ships. [28356]

Mr. Freeman: The capability for contenders in the attack helicopter competition to operate in support of amphibious operations from Her Majesty's ships was a feature of the invitation to tender. The resulting bid data are being considered as part of the overall technical assessment.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military threats the attack helicopter is being procured to combat. [28332]

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale (Mr. Jopling) on 31 January, Official Report, column 560.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Ministers, former Ministers or civil servants in his Department have sought independent legal advice in assisting their response to draft extracts from Sir Richard Scott's report; in each case from whom the advice has been sought; and what limit has been placed on payment for such advice from public funds. [28388]

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Sir Richard Scott has requested that all those in receipt of extracts from his draft report should hold this material in confidence. The Government are not aware of the identity of all the recipients and, in accordance with the vice-chancellor's request, would not consider it right to disclose the identity of those recipients of whom it is aware.

Apart from legal advice from departmental lawyers, legal services have been provided to witnesses to the inquiry by the Treasury Solicitor's Department and by external lawyers. In each case their costs are subject to the approval of the legal advisers to the Departments who are responsible for payment.

Naval Support Command

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for the restructuring of the Naval Support Command and the location of its headquarters. [29264]

Mr. Soames: To enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of our support for the fleet, we are proposing to restructure the Naval Support Command with effect from 1 October 1995. The current responsibilities for the upkeep of ships and their systems would be brought together under one director general, DG Ships, when the two separate posts of Director General Fleet Support (Ships) and (Equipment and Systems) would lapse. Secondly, all NSC naval base and logistic support matters would progressively become the responsibility of a single director general, Director General Naval Bases and Supply (DGNBS); the post of Director General Supplies and Transport (Naval) would lapse. No major changes are planned to the other elements of the Naval Support Command Headquarters.

I am pleased to be able to announce proposals for the location of the NSC headquarters. The NSC HQ, apart from DG Ships, but including DGNBS, is planned to concentrate progressively at the Ensleigh site in Bath. The new DG Ships organisation would be collocated with the Procurement Executive at Abbey Wood over the next few years, with the aim of transferring some 1,700 posts to Abbey Wood by the end of 1998, and a total of 2,100 by the end of 2000. At Abbey Wood, space in the buildings already being constructed would be used, augmented by the construction of an additional office building.

These proposals provide the NSC HQ, apart from DG Ships, with suitable accommodation at Ensleigh, Bath; enable DG Ships to be collocated in modern, flexible office accommodation, alongside the PE with significant and important business benefits to both organisations; make effective use of available space at Abbey Wood; minimize the requirements for up-front capital investment; and enable the NSC to vacate a range of sites.

As a result of these proposals, significant numbers of MOD staff would remain in Bath; in addition to the 1,200 NSC staff planned for Ensleigh, there are about 1,000 other MOD staff based in Bath who are not affected by this proposal or the PE's move to Abbey Wood.

I fully appreciate the impact that the closure of Defence sites can have on the local community, and we would investigate any possible alternative MOD use for Foxhill, and other MOD sites being given up. If none is found, we would work closely with the local authorities concerned and the regional government offices to establish how the sites could best be redeveloped, within the guidelines under which MOD is required to dispose of surplus property, taking account of local social, economic and employment considerations.

These proposals would remove the uncertainty for NSC staff who are expecting to collocate in the Bath/Bristol area and who are currently situated at Eaglescliffe, Portsmouth, Gosport, Weymouth, Portland and London and on several sites in the Bath area. I am nevertheless aware that their implementation would cause disruption for many staff. The moves would, however, take place over a period of some years. We would of course make every effort to minimise disruption by careful planning and by giving as much notice and advance information to staff as possible.

These proposals are subject to detailed consultation in the usual way. A consultation document is being issued today.

Low Flying

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was paid in compensation for livestock-related losses to farmers in Wales caused by low-flying military aircraft during 1994. [27672]

Mr. Soames: The total compensation paid, as a result of military aircraft activity, in respect of livestock losses in Wales during 1994, amounts to £72,964.51.

Departmental Land

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95, the occasions on which his Department has sought prior approval for the sale of assets in accordance with the Treasury guidelines on the disposal of surplus Government land; and if he will make a statement. [28393]

Mr. Soames: In the years in question prior Treasury approval for the sale of surplus land belonging to my Department in the United Kingdom was sought in relation to the following sites: 1992–93 land at Dean Row road, Wilmslow; 1993–94—central vehicle depot, Hilton and Ordnance Survey depot, Ruddington; 1994–95—the Queen Elizabeth military hospital, Greenwich.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, what clause in the sale contract allowing his Department to obtain a share of any future development gain were included in the sale of (a) RAF base Chessington, Surrey to a consortium involving Bryant Homes and Sir Alfred McAlpine, (b) Willems Park, Aldershot to Tesco plc, (c) Bramley, Hampshire, to Wimpey and (d) RNAD Milford Haven to Waterfront Development, Pembroke. [28395]

Mr. Soames: The contract for the sale of Royal Naval armament depot, Milford Haven does not include a clawback arrangement. Each of the other contracts referred to required the purchaser to pay a lump sum for the property at the time of purchase together with one or more further payments in the event that planning permission was secured which would increase the value of the site. The specific details in each case are commercial in confidence between my Department and the purchaser.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28510]

Mr. Hague: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Poverty

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to issue a precise definition, measurement, criteria and indicators of absolute poverty, as required by the agreement contained in article 26d at the world summit for social development in Copenhagen in March. [26759]

Mr. Burt: The agreement reached at the UN world summit for social development recognises that indicators of poverty and vulnerability should be developed in the light of national circumstances. However, the characteristics of absolute poverty outlined in paragraph 19 of the programme of action are not typical of individuals in a well developed industrialised country such as the United Kingdom. I do not therefore propose to take action in pursuit of paragraph 26d, beyond the coverage of existing regular statistics and surveys.

Expenditure

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the expenditure on cash benefits for the long term sick and disabled for each year from 1969–70 to 1979–80. [28209]

Mr. Hague: Such information as is available is given in the table. Comparable information is not available for earlier years.

Expenditure on long term sick and disabled

	£ million
1973–74	569
1974–75	713
1975–76	982
1976–77	1,251
1977–78	1,509
1978–79	1,771
1979–80	2,081

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is (a) the number of prisoners approached by the Child Support Agency with a view to assessing them for maintenance and (b) the number of prisoners assessed by the Child Support Agency for maintenance since the launch of the Child Support Agency; and if he will provide the figures in both categories broken down on a month by month basis. [27999]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 13 June 1995:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about prisoners contacted and assessed by the Child Support Agency for child maintenance.

The information you require is not available as the Agency does not collate separate information on absent parents (AP) while they are in prison.

The Agency uses the same process for establishing a maintenance liability for APs who are in prison as for any other AP. Should an AP be committed to prison during the assessment process, or after the maintenance liability has been established, the Agency will take into account the change in circumstances in the normal way.

EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has for an appeals process in respect of companies denied training accreditation by TECs. [26839]

Mr. Paice: We have no such plans.

Disabled People

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures his Department is taking to encourage more disabled people to pursue careers in engineering-based and technology-based industries. [26816]

Miss Widdecombe: The careers service provides advice and guidance for young people on careers in all sectors of the economy including engineering and technology-based industries. People with disabilities have access to careers service advice until they are settled in their career intention.

The Department also has a wide range of services and employment and training programmes, which are accessed through the Employment Service, to assist disabled people to obtain and retain employment and to pursue their chosen career. This includes careers in engineering and technology-based industries.

The Government have also introduced a Disability Discrimination Bill which will make it unlawful for an employer to treat a disabled person less favourably because of his or her disability, without justifiable reason.

Industrial Accidents

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many accidents involving fatality or resulting in injury were recorded in the first three months of 1995; and what is the rate of injury recorded in relationship to shifts or hours worked. [27910]

Mr. Oppenheim: The data for the first three months of 1995 are not yet available. Provisional figures for the year 1994–95 will be published in the annual report of the Health and Safety Commission in the autumn.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Applications, Westminster

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue an article 14 direction to prevent Westminster city council from issuing any planning consents for the buildings at 20A–32 Baker street, London, W1, until the police have had time to consider conducting an investigation into material submitted to the Crown Prosecution Service by Councillor Peter Bradley. [27775]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State has issued an article 14 direction to enable him to consider whether or not he should direct under section 77 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 that the outstanding planning applications should be referred to him for his determination.

Thorne and Hatfield Moors

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what area in hectares of Thorne and Hatfield moors sites of special scientific interest is (a) currently notified as being a site of special scientific interest, (b) subject to planning permission for the extraction of peat and (c) currently being proposed by the Government for inclusion in the special area of conservation under the EU habitats and species directive. [28127]

Sir Paul Beresford: The areas involved are (a) 3,319.3 hectares; (b) 2,437.5 hectares; and (c) an area of Thorne moor of 1,019 hectares about which the Government have consulted.

National Parks

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much each council receives in England in standard spending assessment for national parks; and which councils have national parks in their areas. [28078]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Local authorities' contributions to expenditure on national parks are included within a large group of local authority services known as "all other services", for which the national total standard spending assessment is £7,426.1 million in 1995–96. The SSAs do not distinguish portion which can be attributed to national parks. The portion of the "approved expenditure" of national parks in 1995–96 which is expected to be contributed by local authorities is some £5.5 million.

The following authorities have national parks within their areas:

Authorities	National parks
Devon county council	Dartmoor Exmoor
Somerset county council	Exmoor
Cumbria county council	Lake District Yorkshire Dales
Northumberland county council	Northumberland
North Yorkshire county council	North York Moors Yorkshire Dales
Cleveland county council	North York Moors

Old Denaby Wetland Site

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce his decision in respect of Doncaster metropolitan borough council's application for a compulsory purchase order to preserve the wetland site at Old Denaby; and if he will make a statement. [28266]

Sir Paul Beresford: Doncaster metropolitan borough council has not yet made a compulsory purchase order for the preservation of this wetland site. If it does make an order, it will be submitted to the Secretary of State for confirmation and, if opposed, may then be the subject of a public local inquiry.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how a many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28513]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Surplus Land

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95, the occasions on which his Department has sought prior approval for the sale of assets in accordance with the Treasury guidelines on the disposal of surplus Government land; and if he will make a statement. [28392]

Sir Paul Beresford: Under the rules governing the disposal of land and buildings, Treasury approval is required where:

(a) A Department wishes to dispose of property for less than the best price which can be obtained in the market.

(b) Because there are or are likely to be unusual delays in resolving uncertainties about the planning position a Department proposes to dispose of property considered to have development potential before planning consent has been obtained.

(c) A Department wishes to dispose of a property to a selected purchaser by private treaty in circumstances where the professional advice is that this method of sale might not have an advantage over the sale by tender or auction.

(d) Where the disposal falls outside the limits delegated by the Treasury.

None of the disposals effected by my Department over the period 1992 to 1995 fell into these categories. There were, however, five cases where, although formal planning decisions had been obtained or the planning position thoroughly researched, it was considered that the purchaser might be able to resell at some future date for a higher figure; hence, to be absolutely sure that the Exchequer interest was protected, clawback clauses were imposed.

Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what performance targets he has set the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre executive agency for 1995–96. [29267]

Sir Paul Beresford: The agency's principal target for 1995–96 is to achieve a net surplus of £3,000. Following several years of progressive reduction in the centre's operating deficit, it is possible this year for the first time to target a surplus. This is exclusive of rent of £6.4 million.

The agency's other key targets are:

(a) to increase total revenue from £5.5 million to £5.8 million;

(b) to reduce debt outstanding from clients for over 60 days to no more than £154,000.

A market test is currently in progress to determine whether there is any advantage to be obtained in contracting out the managing of the centre to a private sector company.

Homelessness

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of households living in temporary accommodation. [27963]

Mr. Robert B. Jones [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Information on the numbers of households which have applied for permanent rehousing under the homelessness legislation and were in temporary accommodation is given in the quarterly information bulletin "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985, England".

The figures cover both households which have been accepted and are waiting for permanent accommodation, and those where inquiries into eligibility are still being carried out.

Copies of the bulletins, the latest of which relates to the fourth quarter of 1994, are in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Local Authority Social Services

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list, for each available year since 1970, the number of cases of assistance by local authority social service departments, showing separately for each year (a) the number of telephone installations, (b) telephone adaptations, (c) telephone rentals paid, (d) installations of other communications equipment, (e) television installations, (f) payment of television licences or rentals, (g) the number of radio sets provided, (h) the number of personal aids provided, (i) the number of adaptations to property and (j) the number of holidays provided. [28200]

Mr. Moss: In Northern Ireland, social services are provided by the four health and social services boards. The information requested is not available before 1979. Available information for each health and social services board is as follows:

Long-term Sick and Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the expenditure on cash benefits for the long-term sick and disabled for each year from 1969–70 to 1979–80. [28201]

Mr. Moss: Social security expenditure on the long-term sick and disabled in the years 1973–74 to 1979–80 is given. This information is not available for earlier years.

Year	£ million
1973–74	23.4
1974–75	32.6
1975–76	43.0
1976–77	52.9
1977–78	63.9
1978–79	74.9

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the expenditure on personal social services for disabled people in each year since 1970. [28202]

Mr. Moss: In 1992–93 the format of the accounts of the health and social services boards was changed to accommodate health service reforms. The information requested is available from an analysis of these accounts, and the estimated personal social services expenditure on physically and sensorily disabled people was £9.2 million in 1992–93, and £11.3 million in 1993–94. Information on expenditure on the 'equivalent services prior to 1992–93 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Performance

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance indicators and performance targets there are for measuring the performance of his Department in (a) answering letters from members of the public and (b) answering telephone calls from members of the public; how performance is monitored; and what are the latest figures for performance measured against the target set. [26233]

Sir John Wheeler: Details of targets and performance regarding correspondence with Ministers is set out in the Official Report, 18 April 1995, columns 21-24. In addition, under the code of practice on open government, the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments endeavour to respond to requests for information within 20 working days. Details of departmental performance for such requests is detailed in the "Open Government Code of Practice on Access to Government Information 1994 Report", a copy of which has been placed in the Library. The Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments, usually at local management level, are responsible for setting their own targets for handling other correspondence and answering telephone queries. The information regarding targets and related performance which is available within Departments is detailed. Where specific targets have not been set, managers have a responsibility to ensure that all public inquiries are dealt with as quickly as possible and telephone calls are dealt with promptly.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

Department Economic Development (DED)

Officials endeavour to reply to letters within 15 working days of receipt. Although quantitative measures of DED's performance would incur disproportionate costs, there is no evidence to suggest that this standard is not regularly met.

Two of the targets in the Training and Employment Agency customers charter detail that:

> Customers' letters will be responded to within five working days; where an acknowledgement is issued a full reply should be sent within 10 working days.
> Telephones will be answered within 20 seconds, if the person the customer wants is unavailable the call will be returned within one working day.
> The latest figures for performance against target indicate that:
> 90 per cent. of letters responded to within five working days; of those not responded to within five working days, 85 per cent. were responded to within 10 working days.
> 97 per cent. of telephone calls answered within 20 seconds; where a member of staff was not available 90 per cent. of calls were returned within one day.

Department Environment (DOE)

DOE does not have uniform performance targets for handling correspondence and telephone calls. Divisions, services and agencies are encouraged to set their own targets and to publish them in charter statements, as appropriate. Individual targets set for answering correspondence range from five to 15 working days, while telephone queries are normally dealt with on the same day.

Performance monitoring and measurement is carried out by local management and information is not held centrally.

Northern Ireland Office (NIO)

The NIO has no specific targets however, letters from the public are generally answered within a 28-day deadline.

The Compensation Agency aims to reply to at least 95 per cent. of letters within 14 days of receipt, and respond to telephone inquiries on the same day or at most within 24 hours. Performance against these targets is monitored by random sampling and the statistics for 1994–95 indicate that the targets are being achieved.

Department Finance and Personnel (DFP)

DFP does not have uniform performance targets for handling correspondence. Divisions and agencies are encouraged to set their own targets as appropriate. For example, the Civil Service Commission undertakes to respond to all requests for application forms within two working days and to acknowledge receipt of all completed forms within the same timescale.

The Valuation and Lands Agency undertakes to reply to 90 per cent. of enquiries, other than net annual valuations, within 10 days. Current performance is measured at 93 per cent.

With regards to telephone calls the target for switchboard operators to answer calls is 12 seconds. Current performance over the last 12 months is measured at nine seconds.

Department Agriculture (DANI)

Targets for measuring performance of DANI for answering letters and telephone calls are set out in its charter statement "Our Service Standards" published in February 1995, a copy of which will be placed in the Library. Systems are being put in place to monitor performance.

Targets are also set out in the codes of practice governing the legislation enforcement activities of the agri-food development service, the fisheries inspectorate and the veterinary service.

Latest performance figures for these three areas are measured at 96.68 per cent., 100 per cent. and not yet available respectively.

Department Health and Social Services (DHSS)

This Department does not set performance targets for handling correspondence or telephone calls as members of the public do not normally communicate directly with the Department.

In its customer charter, the Social Security Agency aims to respond to all letters of complaint from the public within seven days. There are no specific targets for responding to general letters or telephone calls.

In the NI Child Support Agency's charter the target for answering letters from members of the public is 10 working days and 80 per cent. of telephone calls within 20 seconds. For the year ended March 1995, 42 per cent. of letters checked on a random sample basis received a reply within 10 days and 98 per cent. of telephone calls were answered within 20 seconds.

Department Education (DENI)

DENI has no performance indicators or targets for answering letters and telephone calls from members of the public.

Complaints

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what policy and procedure exist for dealing with complaints against his Department by members of the public; when his Department last updated its policy; what time limit and target for dealing with such complaints his Department has; and what follow-up procedure exists where complainants are not satisfied with his Department's response to a complaint. [26217]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is as follows:

Department Economic Development (DED)

The detailed procedures governing the handling of complaints varies between the constituent parts of DED, but these are handled promptly at a senior level within each of the organisation. Depending upon the nature of the complaint, it may go to the head of the organisation.

Department Environment (DOE)

DOE does not have a uniform departmental policy and procedure for dealing with complaints from the public. Each division and agency may establish its own policy and procedure, review it as necessary and set appropriate time limits and targets. Complaints are normally handled by the appropriate level of management with a final right to complain to the head of division, service or agency.

Department Agriculture (DANI)

DANI's policy and procedures for dealing with complaints from the public are set out in its charter statement "Our Service Standards" and the appropriate code of practice governing the legislation enforcement activities of the agri-food development service, the fisheries inspectorate and the veterinary service. The Charter Statement was published in February 1995 and the three enforcement codes of practice were published in February 1994. Copies of all of the documents are available in the Library.

Department Finance and Personnel (DFP)

If a member of the public has a complaint the matter will, in the first instance, be dealt with by the appropriate officer. If the complainant is still not satisfied he or she should write to the Permanent Secretary of the Department who will appoint an independent official in DFP to investigate the complaints and respond to the complainant as expeditiously as possible. In the charter statements the Valuation and Land Agency and the Government purchasing service for Northern Ireland have specified that complaints will be answered within 10 days and 20 days respectively.

DFP last updated its policy in April 1994.

Department Education (DENI)

DENI does not have a formal complaints policy or formal procedures for dealing with complaints against it from members of the public. Time limits and targets have not been set.

Department Health and Social Services (DHSS)

DHSS does not have a corporate policy and procedures for dealing with complaints as members of the public do not normally communicate directly with the Department.

The policy and procedures of the Social Security Agency for dealing with complaints are set out in its customer charter, published July 1992. Copies of the charter are available in the Library.
The agency has recently reviewed its complaints procedures in line with the principles and checklist established for complaints systems by the citizen's charter (Northern Ireland) complaints review group. A programme of initiatives to strengthen the current procedures will be undertaken during 1995–96.

The Northern Ireland Child Support Agency's policy and procedures for dealing with complaints have been in place since the Agency began operating in April 1993. These are well publicised in the agency's charter and business plan both of which are available in the Library. The complaints policy and procedures are currently under review.

The health and personal social services' charter for patients and clients published March 1992 sets out the procedures for dealing with complaints.

Northern Ireland Office

The Northern Ireland Office has no procedures in place for handling complaints from members of the public.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service have a comprehensive complaints and grievance policy for staff and prisoners. Any complaints raised by members of the public are dealt with as they arise by agency management with responsibility for the area of concern. If a complaint is registered by a member of the public in a prison establishment, the governor will respond where the object of complaint is within his area of responsibility or refer to Prison Service headquarters where it is outside his remit.

Complaints to the Compensation Agency may be about the outcome of the applicant's claim or the delivery of service. Any applicant who is dissatisfied with a decision not to pay compensation or with the amount of compensation offered has a statutory right of appeal to the courts. Anyone wishing to make a complaint about the delivery of service may write to the chief executive. The target, which is reviewed annually, is to reply to letters to the chief executive within seven days, or in exceptional circumstances when an interim reply is necessary, within 10 days. The agency undertakes in its charter standard statement to put things right as quickly as possible if there has been a lapse in the standard of service and to give an explanation and an apology to the complainant.

For all NI Departments and the Northern Ireland Office.

Any member of the public who is dissatisfied with the way in which a complaint has been dealt with by the Northern Ireland Departments or the Northern Ireland Office may ask a Member of Parliament to submit their complaint to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration for investigation and review.

Rates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dwellings in each council district in Northern Ireland have a net annual valuation of under £60; and, of these, how many are occupied by (a) tenants, (b) owners and how many are vacant. [28196]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Rate Collection Agency under its chief executive, Mr. D. W. Gallagher. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. W. Gallagher to Mr. William Ross, dated 12 June 1995:

You asked the Secretary of State how many dwellings in each council district in Northern Ireland have a net annual valuation of under £60 and, of these, how many are occupied by (a) tenants, (b) owners and (c) are vacant.

The information is as set out in the attached table. Since details of tenure are not held for all properties it is impossible to identify how many properties are occupied by tenants. The table relates to the position in February 1995. More up-to-date figures are not available.

If I can be of any further assistance please do not hesitate to contact me.

A: The information is as set out in the table. Since details of tenure are not held for all properties it is impossible to identify how many properties are occupied by tenants. The table relates to the position in February 1995. More up-to-date figures are not available.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EU Treaty Report

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what parliamentary procedure will apply to the report of the Council of Foreign Ministers on the functioning of the treaty on European Union, adopted on 10 April 1995 (Cm 2866) and if it will be undertaken before 1 July. [27761]

Mr. David Davis: The report has been deposited for parliamentary scrutiny with an explanatory memorandum.

Council of Ministers (Vetoes)

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the statement by the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis) in European Standing Committee on 24 May, Official Report, column 13, if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on not giving up the United Kingdom's veto; and which vetoes in the Council of Ministers are regarded as not negotiable at the forthcoming intergovernmental conference. [27482]

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minster has made it clear that he will oppose further extension of qualified majority voting.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the preparatory ministerial meeting on the intergovernmental conference to review the Maastricht treaty held in Messina on 2 and 3 June; and if he will place in the Library the submissions made by the United Kingdom to the meeting. [27648]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon (Mr. Howarth) on 8 June, Official Report, columns 287–88.

Bosnia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts are being made by Her Majesty's Government and its partners in UNPROFOR to bring about the demilitarisation of the safe havens in Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement. [28370]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The matter of the safe areas, including their future demilitarisation, is being addressed by the Security Council in its consideration of the latest report on UNPROFOR from the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Ministers, former Ministers or civil servants in his Department have sought independent legal advice in assisting their response to draft extracts from Sir Richard Scott's report; in each case from whom the advice has been sought; and what limit has been placed on payment for such advice from public funds. [28389]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Sir Richard Scott has requested that all those in receipt of extracts from his draft report should hold this material in confidence. We are not aware of the identity of all the recipients and, in accordance with the vice-chancellor's request, would not consider it right to disclose the identity of those recipients of whom it is aware.

Apart from legal advice from departmental lawyers, legal services have been provided to witnesses to the inquiry by the Treasury Solicitor's department and by external lawyers. In each case their costs are subject to the approval of the legal advisers to the Departments who are responsible for payment.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Financial Losses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners what representations the Church Commissioners have received about the need for a full investigation of the losses incurred by their companies and subsidiaries. [27843]

Mr. Alison: The Social Security Select Committee, in its Second Report, Session 1994–95, comments that the growth of the Commissioners' subsidiary companies needs further investigation and we have received a small number of other representations about the use of subsidiary companies. These representations appear to be based on the misconception that subsidiaries were created in order to conceal losses from readers of the Commissioners' unconsolidated accounts. That is quite untrue.

The Commissioners' accounts—whether unconsolidated or, as now, consolidated—have always reflected profits and losses on all their investments, including those held by subsidiaries. I am glad of the opportunity to make that clear and I am arranging for a copy of a detailed letter to the chairman of the Social Security Select Committee clarifying the role of the Commissioners' subsidiaries to be sent to the hon. Member and to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Reports and Accounts

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners if the Church Commissioners will publish the reports and accounts of their companies and subsidiaries. [27842]

Mr. Alison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 5 December 1994, Official Report, column 41. The accounts of all the Commissioners' subsidiary undertakings are incorporated in the Commissioners' consolidated accounts, published with the annual report and accounts.

The accounts of the UK subsidiary companies are filed at Companies House, where they are available for inspection by members of the public. The Social Security Select Committee has been supplied with a full set of subsidiaries' accounts for the years 1984–1993. I am arranging for a similar set, together with the 1994 accounts, to be placed in the House of Commons Library. Copies are also available for inspection by prior appointment at the Commissioners' offices.

Pensions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners (1) if the Commissioners are planning to transfer responsibility to dioceses of all the pension commitments currently met by the Commissioners for (a) bishops, (b) dignitaries, (c) clergy (d) lay workers, (e) staff at Church house and No. 1 Millbank and (f) others. [27436]

(2) on what grounds the Commissioners have decided that future pension liabilities should be transferred to dioceses.

Mr. Alison: Jointly with the Pensions Board and the Central Board of Finance, the Church Commissioners will be submitting a report to the General Synod which proposes that dioceses through funds raised from parishes, raise pension contributions for the future service of parochial clergy and licensed layworkers. The financial impact on parishes will be cushioned through transitional provisions funded by the Commissioners.

This proposal reflects actuarial advice that unless the cost of clergy pensions is shared, the Commissioners' investment income will ultimately be absorbed by the cost of pensions, leaving nothing for their other responsibilities and trusts such as the support of needier parishes and dioceses.

The Commissioners will be responsible for the past service liability of clergy and licensed layworkers, including pensions currently in payment, and for the past and future service liability of dignitaries whose stipends are wholly funded by the Commissioners and of staff employed by the Commissioners.

HEALTH

Extra-statutory Payments

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) of 22 May, Official Report, column 409, what provision she has made for notification of the Comptroller and Auditor General of the £165 million of extra-statutory payments. [26596]

Mr. Malone: The payments will be identified in the individual accounts of family health services authorities for 1994–95 and a note will be included in the national summarised accounts for 1993–94. These accounts are audited by the National Audit Office.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Hertsmere (Mr. Clappison) of 22 May, Official Report, column 409, what was the level of extra-statutory payments relevant to each financial year from 1990–91 to 1994–95; on what date the legal advice was received; what is the date of the most recent guidance note from the NHS executive placed in the Library; and if she make a statement. [26595]

Mr. Malone: The level of expenditure by general practitioner fundholders on management allowances between 1990–91 to 1993–94 was:

1990–91: £6 million
1991–92: £14.1 million
1992–93: £29.5 million
1993–94: £49.5 million

Expenditure figures for 1994–95 have not yet been finalised, but the total sum allocated to family health services authorities amounted to £66 million.

Queries were first raised about the basis of management allowances in the course of routine departmental business in 1991 and 1992, but the implication of the extra-statutory nature of the payments appears not to have been fully recognised until the NHS executive's fundamental review of the fundholding scheme during 1994. The review concluded in December 1994 and health service guideline (94)56, dated 30 December 1994, set out how management allowances would be calculated during 1995–96. Regulations were made in March 1995 to provide statutory authority for payments from 1 April 1995.

Dental Services

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the percentage of people aged 10 to 18 years with permanent teeth which are actively decayed, filled or missing due to decay. [27199]

Mr. Malone: The table shows the percentage of children in England aged from 10 to 15 years with permanent teeth which are actively decayed, filled or missing due to decay. Figures for 10 to 18-year-olds are not available. The age group covered by the adult dental health survey is 16 to 24. The results of the 1993 child dental health survey, however, shows substantial improvements, since previous studies in 1983 and 1973, in the number of children who are caries free. For further explanation, I refer the hon. Member to the following Office of Population Censuses and Surveys publications—"Adult Dental Survey", 1988, and "Children's Dental Health in the United Kingdom", 1993. These publications are available in the Library.

Cancer

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what counselling services are provided under the NHS for patients with cancer; and what is the cost to her Department of those services. [28010]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the annual cost to her Department of specialist cancer services for teenage patients; [28008]

(2) how many health authorities in the United Kingdom provide specialist facilities for teenage cancer patients; [28013]

(3) how many health authorities in the United Kingdom provide specialist counselling for teenage cancer patients. [28012]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. However, the document "A Policy Framework for Commissioning Cancer Services" recommends that health authorities should look for opportunities for developing the treatment of adolescents with cancer, who present special medical and psychological problems and require specialised care in the cancer centre.

We have also agreed section 64 funding for 1995–96 to support the work of the teenage Cancer Trust a charity committed to raising funds to establish teenage cancer units for the treatment of adolescents suffering from cancer.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of patients with cancer treated under the NHS are teenagers. [28009]

Mr. Sackville: For hospital in-patients in the national health service in 1993–94 in England, teenage cases—13 to 19-year-olds—were 1.7 per cent. of all finished consultant episodes with a main diagnosis of cancer. Information on NHS out-patient clinic cases is not available.

Hospital Building Projects

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the major hospital building projects in the London borough of Croydon completed since 1978–79 or now under construction or planned giving in each case the completion date and the amount of public money spent, expressed both in cash terms and in terms of today's prices. [28003]

Mr. Sackville: Information on National Health Service building projects costing over £1 million in the London borough of Croydon is shown in the table.

Surplus Land

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95, the occasions on which her Department has sought prior Treasury approval for the sale of assets in accordance with the Treasury guidelines on the disposal of surplus Government land; and if she will make a statement. [28391]

Mr. Sackville: Records indicate that prior Treasury approval for the sale of assets has only once been sought between April 1992 and March 1995, which was in connection with the sale of Tadworth court to the Children's Trust.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 35, if she will list the procedures adopted by her Department to ensure that in appropriate circumstances a clawback provision is inserted in a rules contract allowing a health authority to obtain a share of any increase in development use; and if she will make a statement. [28461]

Mr. Sackville: The Department circulates procedures regarding land and property transactions through the estatecode series, copies of which are available in the Library. Responsibility for properly managing property transactions rests with individual health authorities.

Edgware General Hospital

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her oral statement of 10 May, Official Report, column 785, how many meetings she has had with the Department of Transport to discuss how transport can be improved between Edgware general hospital and other hospitals; and what are the results of those meetings; [28396]

Mr. Sackville: A meeting between officials took place on 23 May and discussions continue.

Occupational Health Staff

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical and nursing staff worked in occupational health within the national health service for the last three years for which figures are available; and what were the grades of these employees. [28460]

Mr. Malone: The information is shown in the tables.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by her Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if she will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28523]

Mr. Sackville: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Local Authority Social Services

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, for each available year since 1970, the number of cases of assistance by local authority social services departments, showing separately for each year (a) the number of telephone installations, (b) telephone adaptations, (c) telephone rentals paid, (d) installations of other communications equipment, (e) television installations, (f) payment of television licences or rentals, (g) the number of radio sets provided, (h) the number of personal aids provided, (i) the number of adaptations to property and (j) the number of holidays provided. [28208]

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is available for the years 1973 to 1987 and was published in "Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the expenditure on personal social services for disabled people in each year since 1970. [28210]

Mr. Bowis: The information identified as relating to disabled persons is shown in the table. In addition, other areas of social services spending not specifically identified as being for disabled persons will benefit them as well as other client groups.

Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide an estimate of the number of people who have been assisted under the provisions of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 (a) in the latest available year and (b) since its enactment. [28207]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Health does not have the information on which to base such an estimate.

Fluoridation

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department will research the practicality of introducing a fluoride sensitivity test; and if she will make a statement. [28466]

Mr. Malone: Validated methods already exist for the investigation of suspected hypersensitivity. Fluoride is a normal component of food, and there is no evidence of allergy of intolerance to fluoride as used in the fluoridation of community water supplies.

NHS Staff Wages

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average wage increase and what perks have been provided to (a) unit executives and (b) general and senior managers in the health service in each of the last four years. [26284]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 25 May 1995]: Information on the movements in average earnings of these groups of health service staff is not available centrally. For those staff employed on the national terms and conditions for general and senior managers, basic salaries were increased by 6 per cent. in 1991, 3.9 per cent. in 1992, 1.5 per cent. in 1993 and 2.2 per cent. in 1994, with increases effective from 1 September in those years. National health service trusts are free to engage staff on such terms and conditions as they see fit.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Duffs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he proposes to review and deal with problems of coastal erosion; and if he will make a statement. [28786]

Mr. Jack: In 1993 the Ministry, in conjunction with the Welsh Office, published the Government's strategy for flood and coastal defence in England and Wales. The strategy sets out a comprehensive policy framework for the Ministry, the Welsh Office and flood and coastal defence authorities to work within while carrying out their responsibilities for flood and coastal defence. To assist authorities, the Ministry and Welsh Office have also produced guidance booklets on project appraisal, environmental best practice and the preparation of shoreline management plans. Copies of all these publications have been placed in the Library of the House.

The Ministry and the Welsh Office have encouraged the formation of coastal groups to consider coastal defence in a strategic manner. Those groups are carrying forward the preparation of shoreline management plans.

In 1994 the Ministry published a comprehensive survey of the state of coast protection work in England. The survey results were sent to the local coast protection authorities in England for them to consider the condition of existing defences and the potential need for defences in their area for unprotected lengths of coastline that are eroding significantly.

The Ministry continues to grant aid capital works proposed by coast protection authorities provided that they are technically sound, economically worthwhile and environmentally acceptable.

Whaling

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the statistics on which calculations in support of whaling were based; and if he will oppose both scientific whaling and whaling carried out on the grounds that the present levels of population justify this activity. [27911]

Mr. Jack: As the Government have frequently stated, the United Kingdom will not even contemplate voting to lift the current moratorium on commercial whaling until stocks are shown to be at healthy levels, fully effective procedures for managing whale stocks are in place which include ways of ensuring that the rules are observed, and methods used to take whales are humane. Management procedures would also need to include rules for conducting surveys and for verifying abundance estimates to ensure that estimates of whale numbers were reliable. As indicated in the reply to the hon. Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight) on 6 June, Official Report, columns 4-6, this is not always the case with existing estimates. The reply in question also made clear the United Kingdom's opposition to scientific whaling.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will establish an investigation within his Department in regard to the leak of part of the draft of Lord Justice Scott's report which was sent to him. [27652]

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 12 June, Official Report, column 374.

Infant Nutrition

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated expenditure for 1995 for producing information on infant and young child feeding (a) for families and (b) for those involved in the field of infant and young child nutrition. [27927]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave him on 7 June 1995, Official Report, columns 211–12, which indicates that my Department is currently developing a healthy eating booklet in the "Foodsense" series aimed at the mothers of toddlers. My Department is not currently planning further material specifically on infant and young child feeding.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the application of article 9.1 of EC directive 91/321/EEC on material produced by manufacturers and distributors of infant formula; [27985]

(2) if the word "objective" in article 9.1 of EC directive 91/321/EEC excludes material produced by those with a financial interest in infant feeding. [27924]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

EC directive 91/321/EEC has been implemented in the United Kingdom by the Infant Formula and Follow-on Formula Regulations 1995. A working group set up by the Department of Health is formulating guidance covering the content, planning and design of material described in article 9.1 to help make sure that, regardless of its source, such material contains objective and consistent information.

Food Labelling

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to label (a) genetically modified food, (b) meat treated with hormones and (c) the country of origin for meat and meat products and if he will make a statement. [26660]

Mrs. Browning: A draft regulation on novel foods and novel food ingredients, currently before the Council of Ministers in Brussels, would, if adopted, require the labelling of genetically modified food in certain circumstances.

The Government have accepted the advice of the Food Advisory Committee that there should be no additional labelling requirements for meat derived from animals treated with hormones.

Under EC labelling rules, the place of origin or provenance of a food must be given on food labels in cases where failure to give such particulars might mislead the consumer to a material degree. Furthermore, there is no legal impediment to giving this information voluntarily, provided it is true and non-misleading. I know of no proposals in the EU to alter this situation.

Farmers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if EU proposals for early retirement schemes for farmers apply to pig farmers; and if he will make a statement. [25743]

Mr. Jack: Council regulation No. 2079/92 provides for early retirement schemes for farmers but does not differentiate between types of farming. The regulation does not require member states to set up early retirement schemes and because the terms are not appropriate to the conditions of agriculture in the Untied Kingdom we have not done so.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Desertification

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list current programmes which assist in combating desertification and the spending on these programmes in each of the last three years. [28015]

Mr. Baldry: We do not have this information readily available partly because of the difficulty of clearly defining such programmes. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Jakarta

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 10 January, Official Report, column 14, to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes), what was the date of the fire at the central radio studios in Jakarta; and what radio stations broadcast from those studios. [28329]

Mr. Baldry: The fire at the central radio studios in Jakarta occurred in July 1985.

The state radio network, Radio Republic Indonesia, broadcasts from the studios re-equipped under the aid and trade provision project. A typical day's programmes consists of national news broadcasts, educational and cultural programmes and local events. These programmes are broadcast nationally on short and medium wave, and on FM in the Jakarta area.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Indonesian electricity authority has now awarded the equipment supply contract for the Samarinda power station and the contract for the associated transmission line referred to in his answer to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) of 7 February 1994, Official Report, column 68; what are the names of the British and Indonesian companies involved; what will be the generating capacity of the power station; what will be the geographical area within east Kalissantan to be served by the power station; and what proportion of the power generated will be for domestic consumption and what proportion will be for commercial consumption. [27913]

Mr. Baldry: A contract was awarded by the Indonesian Electricity Authority in March 1995 to Parsons Turbine Generators Ltd. for the supply of power station equipment. In May 1995 PLN awarded a contract for the associated transmission line to a consortium comprising of PT Pauwels Arya Sada Contracting and Clough Smith Ltd.

When fully operational the generating capacity of the plant will be approximately 60 mW. Power will be supplied to the Samarinda and Balikpapan districts. The March 1989 feasibility study forecast that 14 per cent. of the energy generated would be for residential consumption, with the remainder going to commercial and industrial users.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 704, to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor), regarding the Indonesian tropical forest management project: sub 1, what are the locations of the main lowland Dipterocarp forests affected by the project; if he will name the senior policy makers advised under the project; what are their positions within the Ministry of Forestry or provincial forestry services; and who the Government engaged to provide advice under the project. [27831]

Mr. Baldry: The main lowland Dipterocarp forests affected are in Kalimantan and Sumatera. The senior policy makers involved with the project in the Ministry of Forestry are: the Minister of Forestry (Ir Djamaludin Soeryohadikosumo); the Minister's Policy Advisers (Ir Triyono, Ir Roedjai, Ir Ari Soedarsono, Ir Armana Darsidi, Dr. Soekardjo); the Director-General of Forest Utilisation (Ir Titus Sarijanto); and the Secretary-General (Ir Oetomos). We have engaged LTS International Ltd. to provide advice.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 704, to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) regarding the Indonesian tropical forest management project: sub 3, who is being engaged by the Government to carry out the project. [28732]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry of Forestry is implementing the project. We have engaged LTS International Ltd. to provide advice.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 704, to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) regarding the Indonesian tropical management project: sub 5, who the Government engaged to carry out the project. [27834]

Mr. Baldry: The project is being implemented by the directorate general of forest protection and nature conservation. We have engaged LTS International Ltd. with the Asian Wetland Bureau to provide advice.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 704, to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) regarding the implementation of conservation programme-Irian Jaya, joint funding scheme, if he will name the British non-government organisations involved in the programme. [27835]

Mr. Baldry: The NGO was the World Wide Fund for Nature.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 704, to the hon. Member for Eccles, (Miss Lestor) regarding the Indonesian tropical forest management project: sub 2, what provinces in Indonesia are covered by the project; and who is being engaged by the Indonesian Government to carry out the project. [27836]

Mr. Baldry: Central Kalimantan, Jambi and Riau provinces are covered by sub-project 2 (provincial management).

The project is being implemented by the Provincial Forest Services, guided by the Ministry of Forestry regional offices in each province. We have engaged LTS International Ltd. to provide advice.

Mrs Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 704, to the hon. Member for Eccles, (Miss Lestor) regarding the radio communications system for the Ministry of Forestry in Indonesia, if he will list the nine provinces in which integrated radio communications networks and associated facilities are being installed. [27837]

Mr. Baldry: The integrated radio communications network and associated facilities were installed at the Ministry of Forestry's headquarters in Jakarta and in the following provinces:

The four Kalimantan provinces known as Selatan, Tangah, Barat and Timur, and:

North Sumatera

South Sumatera

Riau, Sumatera

North Sulawesi

South Sulawesi

Mrs Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 11 May, Official Report, column 584, if he will give the exact date on which full and formal appraisal documents were submitted by the Overseas Development Administration and the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of the aid and trade provision support for the offshore supply vessels project; and by whom the appraisals were undertaken. [28191]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Department of Trade and Industry's appraisal document was completed in May 1984 and that for the Overseas Development Administration in June 1984. Each appraisal was conducted by officials of the relevant department. The ODA obtained additional advice from technical staff of the Crown Agents for overseas Governments and Administrations and from staff of the British Council on the training aspects.

WALES

Housing

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dwellings were built by Welsh local authorities in each of the last five years. [28447]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information on the number of local authority dwellings completed from 1990 up to 1993 has been published in table 2.3 of "Welsh Housing Statistics", No. 14 1994, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. In 1994, the number of new dwellings completed by local authorities in Wales was 227.

Homelessness

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Welsh households are classified as homeless. [28445]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest figure available is 2,131—for the quarter ending December 1994—and this represents a decrease of 13 per cent. on the same quarter in 1993.

Source: local authority returns

Welsh Industrial Development Advisory Board

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the members of the Welsh Industrial Advisory Development Board, giving the date their appointment commenced and their length of tenure. [28244]

Mr. Redwood: Information on all appointments made by me is available in the Library of the House.

Population

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the Welsh population is (a) under the age of 16 years and (b) 65 years of age or more. [28441]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The 1993 mid-year estimate for Wales shows that the percentages of the population aged (a) under 16 years was 20.7 per cent., and (b) 65 years or more was 17.3 per cent.

Coastal Erosion

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to review and deal with problems of coastal erosion in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26787]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In 1993, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, in conjunction with the Welsh Office, published the Government's strategy for flood and coastal defence in England and Wales. The strategy set out a comprehensive policy framework for the Ministry, the Welsh Office and coastal defence authorities to work within while carrying out their responsibilities for flood and costal defence. To assist authorities, the Ministry and Welsh Office have also produced guidance booklets on project appraisal, environmental best practice and the preparation of shoreline management plans. Copies of all these publications have been placed in the Library of the House.

The Welsh Office and the Ministry have encouraged the formation of coastal groups to consider coastal defence in a strategic manner. Those groups are carrying forward the preparation of shoreline management plans. In conjunction with the preparation of these plans, the Welsh Office is updating its 1982 survey of coast protection in Wales, which will provide a comprehensive view of the state of the coastline, the condition of existing defences and the potential need for defences in areas where there is a coastal erosion.

The Welsh Office continues to grant aid capital works proposed by coast protection authorities provided they are technically sound, economically worthwhile and environmentally acceptable.

Foreign Languages

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 255, if he will provide a list of languages other than English (a) which he understands and (b) in which he signs letters. [27912]

Mr. Redwood: Spanish and French.

Asthma

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the expenditure on general practitioner prescribed anti-asthma medication and preparations in each family health services authority area in Wales, for the last three years for which figures are available; and what was the expenditure per head. [27838]

Mr. Redwood: The information is as follows:

Family health services authority	Expenditure per head £			Total expenditure £ million
	1992	1993	1994
Clwyd	6.66	7.84	8.90	2.763
Gwynedd	7.14	8.43	9.76	1.710
Powys	7.00	6.34	8.72	0.834
Dyfed	8.15	9.27	10.50	2.860
West Glamorgan	8.19	9.57	10.51	3.039
South Glamorgan	7.65	8.60	8.56	3.138
Mid Glamorgan	8.68	9.89	11.36	4.711
Gwent	6.80	7.88	8.88	3.058

The figures show expenditure on bronchodilators, inhaled corticosteroids, cromoglycate and related therapy. Some of these preparations are prescribed for indications other than asthma.

Information concerning total expenditure for 1993 and 1994 was given in my reply to the hon. Member of 7 June, Official Report, column 257.

Local Authority Social Services

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, for each available year since 1970, the number of cases of assistance by local authority social services departments, showing separately for each year (a) the number of telephone installations, (b) telephone adaptions, (c) telephone rentals paid, (d) installations of other communications equipment, (e) television installations, (f) payment of television licenses or rentals, (g) the number of radio sets provided, (h) the number of other personal aids provided, (i) the number of adaptions to property and (j) the number of holidays provided. [28205]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is available from 1975 and is given in the following table.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the expenditure on personal social services for disabled people in each year since 1970. [28206]

Mr. Richards: The available information is given in the following table. Information was not collected on the same basis prior to 1987–88.

Gross local authority expenditure on personal social services for physically and/or sensorily disabled adults[1]

	£000s
1987–88	5,257
1988–89	5,301
1989–90	6,286
1990–91	7,087
1991–92	6,276
1992–93	6,574
1993–94	10,381

Note:

[1]Includes expenditure on homes, including those for the blind and deaf, day and occupational centres, adaptations to homes and disability equipment. Excludes expenditure on the elderly. Gross expenditure equals expenditure on employees, running expenses and joint arrangements less local income other than sales, fees and charges.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

China

17. Mr. Dykes: To ask the president of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his recent trade mission to the People's Republic of China; and if he will list the increase in United Kingdom export orders arising from the mission. [26820]

Mr. Heseltine: The mission to China was an outstanding commercial success. It was the latest trade mission to leave the United Kingdom. The 130 companies which participated had a combined turnover well in excess of £75 billion.

My discussions with senior Chinese leaders confirmed the enormous potential for British business in China.

Companies signed over £1 billion of business in the lead up to and during the mission. I have arranged for a detailed list to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

National Lottery

22. Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with Post Office Counters Ltd. about safeguards to protect those Post Office employees who object on religious grounds to selling national lottery tickets or scratch cards; and if he will make a statement. [26827]

Mr. Page: The relationship between the Post Office and its employees is a matter for the board.

Domestic Gas Supplies

23. Mr Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what requirements he will place on the supplies of gas to domestic premises under the terms of the Gas Bill to ensure the maintenance of service standards formerly established by British Gas. [26828]

Mr. Eggar: The Gas Bill provides the legislative framework for the introduction of competition to the supply of gas to domestic consumers. In a competitive market, standards of services will be a matter for competition between suppliers. Customers will be able to choose the supplier who offers the service they require.

However, all gas suppliers will be required to provide special services to older and disabled customers. These will be the same as, and in some areas extend, the current requirements placed on British Gas. Suppliers will also be required to follow procedures to help customers who have genuine difficulties paying their bills. The proposed provisions are set out in the draft "Standard Conditions of the Gas Suppliers' Licence", published on 20 March, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

The level and extent of British Gas's current 39 regulated service standards, which are linked to the price formula, will be considered when that formula is reviewed by Ofgas, with effect from 1997.

Electricity Generation

24. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he intends taking to develop further competition in electricity generation. [26830]

Mr. Eggar: This is primarily a matter for the independent regulator—the Director General of Electricity Supply—who is responsible for overseeing the operation of the electricity market.

Lloyd's

25. Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the chief executive of Lloyd's about future prospects for Lloyd's; and if he will make a statement. [26831]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I have regular meetings with the chairman of Lloyd's to discuss developments in the Lloyd's market. I am aware of Lloyd's proposals for restructuring the market. My Department will examine the regulatory issues arising from the proposals, including the authorisation of the proposed Equitas company, over the coming months. Subject to the regulatory requirements being satisfied, I believe that the plan provides the prospect of a comprehensive solution to many of the problems faced by Lloyd's in the interests of both policyholders and members of Lloyd's.

Regional Assistance

26. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the regional aids and subsidies his Department is able to award without the permission of the Commission of the European Union. [26832]

Mr. Eggar: The only regional aid for which DTI is wholly responsible is regional selective assistance. The terms and operation of this have been approved by the Commission, leaving the Department to use its discretion to ensure that support is targeted at the selected areas and to the maximum advantage to the United Kingdom. Only cases in certain sensitive sectors, such as motor vehicles or synthetic fibres, require individual approval.

Industrial Performance

27. Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the average rate of return produced by British industry. [26833]

Mr. Eggar: In 1993, the last year for which figures are available, the net rate of return on capital employed by industrial and commercial companies was 8.4 per cent. higher than at the comparable point in the two previous recoveries.

Science and Technology

28. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster about the recommendations of the second report of the Select Committee on Science and Technology of Session 1994–95, "Forward Look Science and Technology"; and if he will make a statement. [26834]

Mr. Heseltine: The Government published a full response to the recommendations of the Science and Technology Select Committee on the "Forward Look", in March 1995. In preparing the Government response, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster had discussions with other Departments, including DTI, concerning the recommendations in their relevant areas of responsibility.

Aerospace Industry

29. Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the importance of the aerospace industry to the United Kingdom manufacturing sector. [26835]

Mr. Heseltine: The aerospace industry accounted for 4 per cent. of United Kingdom manufacturing turnover in 1992. My Department has commissioned two studies on the diffusion of aerospace technology and skills to other sectors. Copies of these reports will be placed in the Libraries of the House. In addition officials are studying the profitability of the United Kingdom aerospace industry.

Manufacturing Industry

30. Sir David Knox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he next expects to meet the President of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss manufacturing industry. [26836]

Mr. Heseltine: I am meeting the President of the Confederation of British Industry on 21 June to discuss a range of issues. In 1995 the CBI expects manufacturing output to grow by more than 4 per cent. and manufacturing investment to grow by more than 10.5 per cent. Recent CBI surveys show export orders growing faster than ever before and export optimism at its highest level for a generation.

Inward Investment

31. Dr. Spink : To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of current levels of inward investment. [26837]

Mr. Eggar: Balance of payments data show that between 1986 and 1993, the last year for which figures are available, inward direct investment into the United Kingdom rose from £52 billion to nearly £131 billion. We now have about a third of the stock of direct inward investment in the EU. Our share of the stock of US investment in the EU was nearly 43 per cent. in 1993 and our share of the cumulative flows of Japanese investment into the EU was nearly 41 per cent.

The UK is now the preferred location in Europe for inward investment and I am determined that it should remain so.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on inward investment and on the consultation which he undertakes with industry prior to taking decisions to award investment grants. [26884]

Mr. Eggar: The Government continue to attach great importance to the attraction of inward investment. Investment grants are available for projects in the assisted areas under the regional selective assistance scheme. No decision is taken to offer RSA grant without fully considering the potential impact of the project on existing businesses in the sector concerned.

Rural Economy

32. Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contributions his Department are making to the proposals in the forthcoming White Paper on the rural economy. [26838]

Mr. Heseltine: Officials in my Department are in close contact with the White Paper team and have been working with them to ensure that the interests of businesses in rural areas are fully represented.

North American Free Trade Area

33. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to expand bilateral trade with members of the north American free trade area; and if he will make a statement. [26840]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The United Kingdom Government maintain a vigorous trade promotion programme with respect to members of NAFTA. With the European Commission and the US Administration and others we are looking at various ways of further liberalising trade both across the north Atlantic and more generally to act as pathfinders within the World Trade Organisation.

Overseas Trade (Commission)

34. Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what rules his Department require should govern commissions on trade overseas. [26841]

Mr. Ian Taylor: None. Commissions are a matter for the companies concerned within the appropriate legal system.

Utility Customer Service Committees

35. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure that utility customer service committees represent the views of local consumers. [26842]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Responsibility for the effective representation of consumers of the electricity and water industries rests with the Director General of Electricity Supply and the Director General of Water Services through appointments to the electricity consumers' committees and the water customer services committees.

Space Industry

Mr. Brandeth: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the results of the recent study into the United Kingdom space industry. [29066]

Mr. Taylor: The major findings of the study undertaken on behalf of the British National Space Centre showed that in 1993–94 total industry turnover was estimated at £710 million. This compared to £530 million in 1991–92. United Kingdom space-related employment stood at 6,360 compared to 6,140 in 1991–92. Over the last five years the UK space industry has shown growth in sales of 9 per cent. per year. A number of sub-sectors have shown annual growth rates over 10 per cent. and the emerging earth observation data value-added sub-sector has shown growth rates of 34 per cent. of turnover and 37 per cent. in work force.

Investment

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals his Department has to curb short-termism as regards industrial investment. [26829]

Mr. Heseltine: A stable macroeconomic environment based on low inflation and improved relations between providers of finance and industry are the best ways to promote long-term investment.

Nuclear Industry

Mr. Colvin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade at what rate funding for renewables under the non-fossil fuel obligation will continue when the nuclear industry is privatised. [27002]

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future availability of the non-fossil fuel levy to support renewable energy technology. [27134]

Mr. Eggar: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Simpson) on 8 June 1995, Official Report, columns 268-69.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment his Department has made of the costs of the decommissioning of nuclear power stations. [27133]

Mr. Eggar: The costs of decommissioning nuclear power stations are a matter for their operators.

Overseas Relocations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what new proposals he has to reduce the numbers of British firms relocating overseas. [26821]

Mr. Eggar: None. Decisions on where to invest are a commercial matter for the companies concerned. The United Kingdom remains an attractive location for investment, for both British and foreign firms.

Human and Animal Tissue Protocol

Mr. Morley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Government will take action to implement the recommendations of the Nuffield Council on Bioethics report on human tissue regarding the adoption of a protocol to the European patent convention to set out the criteria to be used by national courts when applying the immorality exclusion to patents in the area of human and animal tissue. [28457]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The suggestion in the Nuffield Council on Bioethics report for a protocol to the European patent convention on the interpretation of the morality exclusion is interesting. However, as the report recognises, reaching agreement among all member states on such a protocol could be very time consuming. The European Commission is reflecting on how to deal with the rejection of the proposed EC directive on the legal protection of biotechnological inventions by the European Parliament and it is expected that they will come forward with a new proposal in the near future. In the light of this, a separate initiative among contracting states of the convention would not be appropriate at the present time.

Genetic Material

Mr. Morley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many patents have been issued in the United Kingdom by the Patent Office and how many by the European Patent Office valid in the United Kingdom incorporating genetic material of plant origin or derivation. [28456]

Mr. Ian Taylor: A search of electronic databases using classification terms shows that some 250 patent applications published by the European Patent Office and the United Kingdom Patent Office relate to genetic material of plant origin or derivation. Each application would have to be checked individually to ascertain whether it has resulted in a patent valid in the United Kingdom, which would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Morley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many patents have been issued in the United Kingdom by the Patent Office and how many by the European Patent Office valid in the United Kingdom incorporating genetic material of human origin or derivation. [28455]

Mr. Ian Taylor: A search of electronic databases using classification terms and key words show that some 1,540 patent applications published by the European Patent Office and the United Kingdom Patent Office relate to genetic material of human origin or derivation. Each application would have to be checked individually to ascertain whether it has resulted in a patent valid in the United Kingdom, which would involve disproportionate cost.

Newspapers

Sir David Steel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to instruct the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to commence an inquiry into the principle of carriage charges for newspapers. [28169]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: This is a matter for the Director General of Fair Trading who, under the competition legislation, is responsible for keeping markets under review, and has independent powers to make a reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Patent Office

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what detailed criteria and what organisation will be used in bench marking activities when comparing sections in the Patent Office for contractorisation. [28068]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In areas identified as candidates for contractorisation, bids for managing contracted-out services will be evaluated against benchmarks for the forecast cost and quality of service from in-house provision. Detailed criteria will depend on the activity under consideration and will be decided upon when specifications are drawn up.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the activities under consideration for contracting out in the Patent Office would require an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. [28072]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Current expectations are that the activities which will be considered for contracting out would not require an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who will be responsible for preparing management or staff bids, for the Patent Office contractorisation; and what will be done to train and prepare staff for this role. [28070]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Under contracting out, staff are free at their own initiative to mount a bid alongside the private sector, but if successful would cease to be civil servants. Preparation and organisation of such bids would be a matter for the staff themselves. The Patent Office would make reasonable time available within working hours but would not lend more active support. All bids will be compared against a benchmark of the service remaining in the civil service which incorporates identified future efficiency savings and quality of service indicators. Only if the bidders demonstrate better value for money to the taxpayer will the work be moved outside the public sector.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the sections under consideration in the Patent Office for contractorisation, and the number of staff involved. [28069]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Patent Office is being encouraged to contract out activities wherever this is compatible with its statutory role and good value for money. Whether any particular activity is considered as a candidate for contractorisation will depend on operational requirements, which are being assessed.

In the case of marketing and the London Front Office, which might in principle be contractorised subject to value for money criteria, current activities are carried out by some 35 staff.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to ensure that jobs affected by contractorisation of the Patent Office will remain in south Wales. [28074]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The location of jobs relating to contracted out services will be a matter for the contractor.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the time-scale involved for contractorisation of Patent Office functions. [28071]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The time-scale for contractorisation of Patent Office functions will depend on operational requirements which are currently being assessed by officials.

Fire Safety

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the results of the inter-departmental review of fire safety legislation will be published. [27959]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answer 13 June 1995]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) on 24 May 1995, Official Report, column 643.

AST Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set up an inquiry into the collapse of the AST Group and its acquisition of the assets of the ASTRA Training Company plc in October 1993, and the transfer of those assets into Firlands Training Ltd in March 1995. [28309]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [holding answer 13 June 1995]: I understand that none f the companies mentioned is subject to a winding-up order. Until a company is in compulsory liquidation the Official Receiver cannot exercise his statutory powers of investigation into its affairs.

Under section 7 of the Company Directors Disqualification Act, 1986 the voluntary liquidator has a duty to report any matters of conduct on the part of the directors which he considers makes them unfit to take part in the management of limited companies. In these cases the liquidator has not yet reported, which he is required to do within six months of the liquidation. I can give an assurance that those reports, together with other relevant information will be carefully considered to see whether proceedings should be brought against any individuals concerned in the liquidation of companies within the AST Group.

In addition the Secretary of State has discretionary powers of investigation into a company where there are grounds to suspect fraud, misfeasance or serious misconduct. Officials within the investigation division of my Department will consider whether the information provided constitutes the "good reason" required before I can exercise my discretionary powers to authorise an investigation.

CS Gas

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, columns 776–77, if no licences have been granted for the export to Indonesia of CS gas cartridges, CS gas grenades or other crowd control technologies since 1 January 1985. [27792]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 17 June 1995]: I have nothing further to add to the statement of 30 March 1995.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date he or other Ministers or former Ministers in his Department received extracts for comment from Sir Richard Scott's draft report; on what date comments were submitted to Sir Richard; and what requests have been made for an extension of the period within which comments should have been made. [27552]

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses. In the case of draft extracts in particular, the inquiry has asked that these be treated in strictest confidence.

SCOTLAND

Sandeels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what account he took, in arranging the initiative to manage the Shetland sandeel fishery, of the announcement on 16 May by the Environment Secretary that measures be taken to control the wider North sea industrial fishery as a priority for the North sea ministerial conference. [27122]

Sir Hector Monro: The decision to re-open the Shetland sandeel fishery predated the announcement on 16 May by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. The Government had already taken the view that there was no relevant correlation between the large-scale Danish fishery in the North sea, which accounts for between 1 million and 2 million tonnes of sandeel per annum, and the very much smaller UK fishery at Shetland which will probably account for less than 3,000 tonnes of sandeel this year.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the annual cost of public funds has been in terms of research, monitoring and supervision, for the management of the Shetland sandeel fishery. [27120]

Sir Hector Monro: Between 1990–91 and 1995–96, the average annual cost to public funds for research, monitoring and supervision connected with the sandeel fisheries has been £117,000. This covers the sampling of landings, research vessel surveys, and stock assessment work, but excludes academic research contracts jointly funded with other bodies. A breakdown for the Shetland sandeel fishery in particular is not available. However, a reasonable estimate is about 80 per cent. of the total, or £93,000 per annum.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what consideration the Government gave when allowing sandeel fishing in Mousa Sound, Shetland, to its inclusion in the list of proposed special areas of conservation because of its importance for common seals; [27110]

(2) within what distance of special protection areas for sea birds in Shetland sandeel fishing is permitted; [27111]

(3) what action the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department has taken to establish areas closed to sandeel fishing around Shetland's internationally important seabird colonies. [27123]

Sir Hector Monro: The Government gave due consideration to their obligations under the European Community directives on the conservation of wild birds and on the conservation of natural habitats and wild flora and fauna before deciding to re-open the Shetland sandeel fishery. In terms of these directives, member states must take appropriate steps to ensure that there is no deterioration of the habitat types or significant disturbance to the species for which areas are designated as European sites. We were satisfied, on the evidence received, that the limited fishery would not have any of these impacts, whether on sea birds or on the common seal at Mousa Sound. No closed areas have therefore been introduced.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what steps the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department takes to ensure that the management of fisheries does not conflict with the Government's international commitments to the conservation of flora and fauna; [27114]

(2) what action the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department will take if monitoring Shetland's seabird population demonstrates low survival of chicks or shortages of food. [27116]

Sir Hector Monro: As set out in the United Kingdom's sustainable development strategy, the Government are committed to promoting fisheries policies which take proper account of the environmental impact of fishing. We therefore take due account of relevant international commitments, and retain statutory powers to act where appropriate, as under the Inshore Fishing (Scotland) Act 1984 and the Sea Fish (Conservation) Act 1967. These Acts provide the power, if necessary, to close or otherwise regulate the Shetland sandeel fishery. Any such statutory arrangements would then be enforced in the normal manner through the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) where fishing for sandeels has been taking place around Shetland since the fishery was re-opened; [27117]

(2) how many boats have been licensed to fish for sandeels (a) around Shetland and (b) on the west coast of Scotland in 1995. [27118]

Sir Hector Monro: Eight vessels have been licensed to fish at Shetland, and four on the west coast of Scotland. The former have concentrated their fishing around the north and north-west of the island of Mousa.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the role of the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department in negotiating an integrated package of management instruments for the Shetland sandeel fishery; and what considerations underlie the extent to which the management option of closed areas is delegated to voluntary agreement between Scottish Natural Heritage on the one hand and the Shetland Fishermen's Association on the other; [27115]

(2) what evidence he has that the recently re-opened Shetland sandeel fishery is sustainable; [27109]

(3) what advice Scottish Natural Heritage has given him on the closure of areas to sandeel fishing around seabird colonies in Shetland. [27112]

Sir Hector Monro: Following public consultation, the Government have established a framework of rigorous management controls to ensure that the Shetland sandeel fishery operates in a sustainable manner. We have set a total allowable catch of 3,000 tonnes. This represents less than 10 per cent. of the spawning stock biomass, is well within the safe biological limits for such species, and is less than the loss by natural predation. In addition, we have restricted access to small, licensed boats, have limited the season, and have stipulated a single landing point in Lerwick to aid enforcement. In view of this tight framework, we concluded that there was no need for statutory closed areas and have therefore provided for these as an optional management regime. As the Secretary of State's statutory adviser on nature conservation matters, Scottish Natural Heritage is an appropriate focal point for such voluntary liaison with local interests, in this instance the Shetland Fishermen's Association. Although it would have preferred formal closed areas, SNH welcomed our precautionary approach and expressed themselves willing to work closely with those concerned.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions sample trawls were taken to assess the state of the 1995 Shetland sandeel stock. [27113]

Sir Hector Monro: The Shetland sandeel stock assessment for the 1995 season was undertaken in August 1994 and involved a total of 48 sample trawls.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the value of the Shetland sandeel fishery in 1995. [27119]

Sir Hector Monro: At current market prices, the total allowable sandeel catch of 3,000 tonnes would fetch about £138,000. This excludes the added value derived from the associated processing and marketing. These benefits will accrue mainly to the local economy in Shetland itself.

Accident Statistics

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the accident statistics for each stretch of the A76 on comparable basis with the A77, A74 and A96 over the past four years. [27376]

The accident rates shown in all the tables are expressed in numbers of personal injury accidents per million vehicle kilometres travelled. The traffic flows are estimated from sample counts taken at specific sites and updated annually using national growth factors.

Cancer

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each geographical unit within Argyll and Clyde health board the number and percentage of (a) all cancers, for male and female, (b) breast cancer, female (c) colo-rectal cancer, male and female and (d) prostate cancer, male, registered within the period 1984 to 1989 inclusive and surviving for at least five years; and how many individuals in each category were registered only on death. [27577]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the tables.

Table 1: Total numbers of cancers registered and numbers registered from death certificates only by site of cancer, geographical area of residence at time of diagnosis and sex, Argyll and Clyde health board, 1984–89

Disabled Living Centres

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all disabled living centres in Scotland; and how much his Department contributes to each of their budgets. [27767]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are six disabled living centres in Scotland, situated in Aberdeen, Edinburgh, Grangemouth, Inverness, Paisley and St. Andrews. As DLCs are locally based, they are eligible to seek financial support from local statutory agencies. I understand that all six DLCs are funded by either local authorities or health boards.

Prisoners (Suicide)

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the numbers of prisoners in Scotland committing acts of suicide and self-harm in each year since 1988. [27675]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Michael Connarty, dated 14 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question relating to the number of prisoners in Scotland committing acts of suicide and self-harm in each year since 1988.

Information and statistics on the number of prisoners who commit acts of self-harm are not available. The table below shows the number of prisoners who have committed suicide, whilst in custody, each year since 1988.

Year	Number
1988	7
1989	6
1990	3
1991	4
1992	9
1993	5
1994	15

A further death in custody in 1994 is subject to the findings of a Fatal Accident Inquiry, which is due to be held later this month.

A1 Steering Group

Mr. John Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many times the A1 steering group has met during the last two years; what were the dates of the meetings; what were the principal items on the agenda; and if he will make a statement on the future of the A1 steering group and his Department's representation on it. [27584]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The A1 steering group has met formally twice in the last two years on 22 February 1994 and 9 March 1995. The agenda covered road safety, traffic growth, progress with the promotion of road improvements, accident investigation and prevention measures and route management. The Government consider that the A1 steering group provides a useful forum and propose to continue to sponsor annual meetings.

Meat Hygiene Inspectors

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many meat hygiene inspectors were employed by Scottish local authorities prior to the establishment of the Meat Hygiene Service. [28293]

Sir Hector Monro: A total of 125 meat hygiene inspectors were employed by Scottish local authorities prior to 1 April 1995 when the Meat Hygiene Service came into being.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many inspectors are employed in Scotland following the establishment of the Meat Hygiene Service. [28292]

Sir Hector Monro: Currently 112 meat hygiene inspectors are employed in Scotland by the Meat Hygiene Service.

School Meals

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the percentage and number of children receiving (a) free school meals and (b) parentally paid for school meals for the last 10 years. [28440]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested for education authority schools is as follows:

	Free meals		Paid meals
Year	Number of pupils taking meals	Percentage of all pupils present	Number of pupils taking meals	Percentage of all pupils present
1985	136,669	18.2	182,255	24.2

Local Authority Social Services

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will, list for each available year since 1970, the number of cases of assistance by local authority social services departments, showing separately for each year (a) the number of telephone installations, (b) telephone adaptions, (c) telephone rentals paid, (d) installations of other communications equipment, (e) television installations, (f) payment of television licences or rentals, (g) the number of radio sets provided, (h) the number of other personal aids provided, (i) the number of adaptions to property and (j) the number of holidays provided.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The table gives the number of cases of assistance between 1979 and 1993. Complete data prior to 1979 are not available. The categories match as closely as possible to those requested.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the expenditure on personal social services for disabled people in each year since 1970. [28204]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information from 1980 to 1993 is available and is listed in the table. Figures are at cash value.

Identifiable Gross Expenditure by local authorities on personal social services for disabled people: 1980–1993

1992–93	51,778
1991–92	43,059

1980–81	4,408
1979–80	3,203

GP Fundholders

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the payment of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders. [29147]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Payments of management allowances are made to fundholding practices to reimburse the additional costs incurred in directly managing National Health Service resources on behalf of their patients. Sections 87A to 87C of the National Health Service (Scotland) Act 1978 enable fundholders to receive an allotted sum determined in such manner and by reference to such factors as the Secretary of State may direct. Payments to fundholders for the sole purpose of management expenses should have been specified within the fundholding regulations. Amending regulations will be laid before Parliament shortly. Extra-statutory management allowance payments made in the period 1990–91 to 1994–95, estimated at around £9 million, and any subsequent payments made from 1 April 1995 until the statutory position is regularised have now been authorised.

Railway Restructuring, Strathclyde

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision he is making for the additional costs being incurred by Strathclyde regional council and Strathclyde passenger transport executive as a result of the restructuring of the railways. [29148]

Mr. Lang: A special grant report has been laid before the House today for the payment of grant in 1995–96 to Strathclyde regional council. The purpose of the grant is to provide support to SRC for the additional costs falling to be met by it in the financial year 1995–96 for the railway passenger services provided by British Rail to Strathclyde passenger transport executive arising from the restructuring of railways in Great Britain in accordance with the Railways Act 1993.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Upper Limb Disorders

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many civil servants have taken legal action against each Department and agency as a result of work-related upper limb disorders for each year since 1990. [28117]

Mr. Horam: This information is not held centrally.

Charters (Compensation)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much the state has paid each year in compensation under the terms of each charter since their inception; how many claims for compensation have been made; and how many have resulted in a payment being made. [27560]

Mr. Horam: Information concerning compensation paid under the terms of each charter is not held centrally. However, Departments have provided the following figures:

Table 1: Passenger's Charter

Year	Season ticket discounts	Compensation	Total
1992–93	85	1,850	1,900
1993–94	2,400	2,300	4,700
1994–95	200	3,300	3,500

No figure is available for the number of claims.

Season ticket discounts are made where train operating units have failed to meet its punctuality and reliability targets over a given period of time. Compensation is given as a result of claims concerning single journeys.

Table 2: London Underground Customer's Charter

Year	Claims made	Compensation paid £000
August 1992 to March 1993	23,763	56
1993–94	142,071	329
1994–95	252,692	553

Table 3: Taxpayer's Charter

Year	Claims	Amout paid £000
1991–92	286	339
1992–93	743	389
1993–94	800	418
1994–95	1,107	407

Inland Revenue does not centrally collect statistics on the total number of claims made; the figures given are for claims which resulted in payment. The Inland Revenue also gives other forms of financial redress for its mistakes or delays in handling taxpayers' affairs, by, for example deciding not to collect tax or interest which would otherwise be properly due under tax law.

Table 4: Northern Ireland Rail Passenger's Charter

Year	Number of claims	Amount paid £000

1 January 1994–31 December 1994	728	2.0
1 January 1995–31 March 1995	418	1.4
Totals	1,437	4.8

Table 5: Northern Ireland Bus Passenger's Charter

Year of charter	Number of incidents	Amount £000	Complimentary ticket value £000
1 April 1992–31 March 1993	320	0.3	0.3
1 April 1993–31 March 1994	340	0.5	0.4
1 April 1994–1 March 1995	432	0.6	0.5
1 April 1995–9 June 1995	77	0.3	0.3
Totals	1,169	1.7	1.5

Table 6: The Traveller's Charter

Year	Number of cases	Compensation paid £000
January 1992–March 1992	37	2.7
April 1992–March 1993	86	6.4
April 1993–March 1994	96	11.4
April 1994–March 1995	91	5.1
April 1995–May 1995	15	1.0

In addition, Departments have a number of arrangements for paying compensation which are not directly linked to charters. These include the Department of Social Security's special payments arrangements set up in 1977. Figures are not yet available for 1994–95. However, in 1993–94, the Benefits Agency paid £3,143,491 in 7,631 compensation cases under these arrangements; the Contributions Agency paid out a total of £5,644 for seven cases.

DEFENCE

Service Personnel (Deaths)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel have been killed while training or engaged on non-combat duties in the last 10 years. [28225]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is as follows:

1985: 208
1986: 178
1987: 191
1988: 207
1989: 255
1990: 218
1991: 191
1992: 167
1993: 169
1994: 152

Skilled Tradesmen

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking to ensure that skilled tradesmen in the armed forces have the opportunity to extend or maintain their skills by involvement in depot or major servicing and engineering where these are carried out by civilian businesses. [27915]

Mr. Soames: The armed forces continue to train and practise their tradesmen in the full range of skills required to support the operational task and deliver military capability. Where it is deemed essential that a number of these tradesmen attain and maintain depot level skills following the transfer of such work to the private sector, either an element of the work will be retained in service or appropriate contractual arrangements will be put in place with industry to second service personnel to enable them to receive the required skill enhancements.

RAF Newton

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future of RAF Newton. [29412]

Mr. Soames: As part of the wider changes to RAF ground training, a consultative document was issued on 28 March 1995 recommending the relocation of headquarters air cadets from RAF Newton to RAF Cranwell, its merger with headquarters university air squadrons and the reduction of RAF Newton to an enclave. My Department has consulted thoroughly with trade unions and relevant local authorities, and full and careful consideration has been given to all the representations received.

Following this work, I am satisfied that no issues have been raised which will call into question the viability of the proposals, which will achieve significant annual running costs savings. I have therefore decided that the proposals should now be implemented.

Third-generation Anti-tank Guided Weapons System

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total Government expenditure on the TRIGAT long range anti-tank weapon. [28858]

Mr. Freeman: The total amount spent by the Ministry of Defence to 31 May 1995 on the TRIGAT long-range anti-tank programme is £210 million, at 1995–96 prices. This includes a proportion of the costs of the feasibility and project definition phases, which were combined for the long-range and medium-range TRIGAT programmes, as well as the costs of the current development programme.

Defence Systems

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the Patriot missile defence system. [28857]

Mr. Freeman: The Patriot missile defence system is one of the options being considered as part of the pre-feasibility study which I announced to the House on 18 October 1994, Official Report, column 239, to provide advice on systems, capabilities, time scales, costs and technical risk.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the medium extended air defence system; and if he will make a statement. [28844]

Mr. Freeman: The medium extended air defence system is one of the options being considered as part of the pre-feasibility study which I announced to the House on 18 October 1994, Official Report, column 239, to provide advice on systems, capabilities, time scales, costs and technical risk.

Eurofighter 2000

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what recent discussions he has had with his German counterpart concerning Eurofighter 2000; [28842]

(2) what assessment his Department has made of political developments in Germany concerning the Eurofighter 2000; and if he will make a statement. [28843]

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. and learned Friend met his German opposite number on 28 May for discussions on a number of topics, including Eurofighter 2000. I am confident that Germany remains committed to the development of the Eurofighter 2000 aircraft.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28653]

Mr. Freeman: An Act of Parliament is presumed not to bind the Crown unless the contrary intention is clearly stated, or there is a necessary implication that the Crown is to be bound. Crown immunity is being progressively reduced, as legislative opportunities arise. However, even in circumstances where the Crown is not bound by legislation, it is Government policy that it should comply as though the requirements apply to it, wherever appropriate.

To list all areas in which Crown immunity may apply would involve disproportionate cost.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civil servants in his Department are currently working on matters related to the Scott inquiry; if a dedicated unit has been established; and what is the estimated cost to date of civil servants dealing with matters relating to the Scott inquiry. [28865]

Mr. Freeman: A Scott inquiry unit was established in the MOD in December 1992. There are currently two civil servants working in the unit. The approximate direct cost of the unit to date, including the cost of the provision of papers, is estimated to be £190,000.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what legal advice he has sought from solicitors or barristers in respect of draft conclusions reached by the Scott inquiry; what is the estimated cost of such legal expenses to public funds, and if he will make a statement. [28896]

Mr. Freeman: The Government do not consider it right to publish the nature or cost of any advice which may have been given to individual witnesses to the Scott inquiry.

This is a matter of confidence between them and any legal advisers they may have retained.

Chinook Crash

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the findings of the inquiry into the Chinook crash on 2 June 1994.

Mr. Rifkind: I express to the widows and family members of those who died the Government's deep regret and condolences in their loss.

I have this afternoon placed in the Libraries of both Houses a summary of findings of the inquiry into this tragic crash which claimed the lives of 29 people. After an exhaustive inquiry into all the circumstances, the possibilities of major technical or structural failure, hostile action or electromagnetic interference with navigation equipment were eliminated as possible causes. On all the evidence, it was concluded that the cause of the accident was that the two pilots had wrongly continued to fly towards the Mull of Kintyre below a safe altitude in unsuitable weather conditions. This constituted a failure in their duty and regrettably, therefore, it was concluded that both pilots had been negligent.

I confirm that the MOD will pay compensation to the next of kin where this is due. Legal advice is that in the particular circumstances of this accident the Government's legal liability to the passengers on board is limited by the terms of the Carriage by Air Acts (Application of Provisions) Order 1967 which derives from the relevant international conventions. The Government have, however, previously made clear their view that the limit of 100,000 special drawing rights—approximately £100,000—arising from these conventions is out of date. Accordingly the MOD will consider claims, in this case, above 100,000 SDR. In so doing, they will take account of the discussions already in progress within the civil airline industry about the right limit for airlines' liability. These discussions will inform, but not necessarily determine, the Government's decision on whether the Chinook passenger claims should be subject to an upper limit on compensation and, if so, at what higher figure.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is his Department's definition of an air transport undertaking. [28869]

(2) if the Chinook helicopter involved in the crash in the Mull of Kintyre in June 1994 was partaking in an air transport undertaking; and if he will make a statement. [28868]

Mr. Soames: The Chinook was on an air transport task from RAF Aldergrove to Fort George barracks, Inverness. The Ministry of Defence's understanding of an air transport undertaking is the movement by air of personnel and cargo within and between theatres of operation. The compensation rights of the families concerned, however, are not dependent on how the Ministry of Defence chooses to describe any aspect of this tragic accident.

Inhumane Weapons Review Conference

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his aims at the United Nations inhumane weapons review conference in September. [28230]

Mr. Freeman: At the UN weaponry convention review conference in September and October of this year, the UK's main aim will be to work towards strengthening protocol II of the convention to impose stricter controls on the use of land-mines. Specific measures which we will be pursuing include: an extension of the scope of the protocol to cover non-international armed conflicts; new provisions on self-destruct mechanisms in anti-personnel mines, detectable mines, and the marking and mapping of minefields; provisions on the transfer of anti-personnel mines; and an effective verification mechanism.

Compensation Claims

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 June, Official Report, column 192, if he will list the dates, units involved, and the injuries leading to the cases of compensation claims made against his Department in the last five years arising from the negligent discharge of weapons. [28867]

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28520]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28497]

Mr. Baldry: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard after the Minister's reply.

Bosnia

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to which areas in Bosnia it is (a) possible or (b) not possible to post items from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [26885]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Due to operational difficulties caused by the conflict in Bosnia-Herzegovina, the Post Office is unable to accept items of mail for onward delivery to any part of that country.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many civil servants in his Department are currently working on matters related to the Scott inquiry; if a dedicated unit has been established; and what is the estimated cost to date of civil servants dealing with matters relating to the Scott inquiry. [28863]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Three civil servants in the FCO are working full time on matters related to the Scott inquiry. Other FCO officials are involved, but not on a full-time basis.

A dedicated unit was established in December 1992, and continues to exist.

The estimated cost to date of the unit dealing full time with the Scott inquiry is £164,027. It is not possible to quantify a figure for the other officials.

Locate in Scotland, North America

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidelines he has issued to United Kingdom diplomatic and consular staff concerning the activities and work of Locate in Scotland in north America; what communication there has been with the United States Government following the public comments of the United Kingdom consul general in San Francisco on the work of Locate in Scotland and other inward investment agencies; what clarification the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has issued on the role of the United Kingdom inward investment agencies following those comments; and what discussions have been held as a consequence regarding a new policy towards United Kingdom inward investment agencies. [28700]

Mr. Goodlad: All overseas commercial posts have guidelines on co-operation with Locate in Scotland as well as the equivalent organisations for Wales and Northern Ireland. Together with the Invest in Britain Bureau and English regional agencies, these organisations are members of the Committee on Overseas Promotion, which co-ordinates the promotion of inward investment into the United Kingdom.

No clarification of those guidelines, nor a change of policy, is necessary. The question of a communication with the United States Administration does not arise.

Sex Tourism

Ms Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with the Government of (a) the Phillippines and (b) Thailand concerning possible measures to arrest the growth of sex tourism in those countries. [28840]

Mr. Goodlad: We regularly take opportunities to raise the issue of sex tourism with the Governments of the Phillippines and Thailand. I discussed child prostitution legislation with the Thai Government during my visit to Thailand in May.

We also regularly discuss practical forms of co-operation between our law enforcement authorities within the framework of Interpol.

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Indonesian police officers have received training under the UK military training and assistance scheme. [28906]

Mr. David Davis: The details of training given under the United Kingdom military training assistance scheme are confidential between Governments.

Committee of the Regions

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the names, together with the previous and present jobs, of the Committee of the Regions set up under the provisions of the treaty of Maastricht. [28702]

Mr. David Davis: Biographies of all members of the Committee of the Regions may be obtained from the CoR press office, Rue Ravenstein 2, 1000 Bruxelles, Belgium.

Nigeria

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the further measures which he proposes to take to demonstrate his concern about the abuse of democracy in Nigeria.

Mr. Baldry: We deplore the fact that there has been no progress towards democracy in Nigeria in the two years since the annulment of the presidential elections. We look to the regime to use the occasion of the presentation of the report of the national constitutional conference due on 27 June to initiate a credible timetable for a return to civilian democratic rule. We shall continue to keep our policy under review, together with our EU, Commonwealth and other partners.

PRIME MINISTER

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister what communications he has received from Lord Justice Scott over the evidence he gave to the inquiry into arms for Iraq; on what dates the communications were sent to him; and what were the dates of his replies. [28860]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Members for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) and for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 12 June 1995, Official Report, column 373.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Prime Minister how many civil servants in his Department are currently working on matters related to the Scott inquiry; if a dedicated unit has been established; and what is the estimated cost to date of civil servants dealing with matters relating to the Scott inquiry. [28862]

The Prime Minister: Within the Cabinet Office, the number of civil servants working exclusively on matters relating to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry is five, all of whom are members of a dedicated unit. The cost of the unit since December 1992 has been approximately £400,000.

Former Prime Ministers (Payments)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister what payments are available to former Prime Ministers; which of these cease immediately upon their death; which are phased out or continued for a fixed or indefinite period to allow their bereaved spouses to deal with duties following their death; and if he will make a statement. [28535]

The Prime Minister: Under the provisions of the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991, former Prime Ministers are entitled to receive payment from the Consolidated Fund of half of the salary payable in respect of the office of the Prime Minister at the time of leaving office. This Act also increased the pensions of then former Prime Ministers to an amount equal to the new pension entitlement of the office of that time. Payments cease on death, subject to arrangements for spouses and children based largely on the parliamentary pension scheme.

On 1 April 1991, an allowance was introduced to assist former Prime Ministers with the continuing heavy burden of office and secretarial costs arising from their special position in public life. The allowance is similar in purpose and amount to the parliamentary office costs allowance but is paid in respect of public and not parliamentary duties. It ceases immediately on death, but a sum equal to one third of the annual amount is made available to the executors of the will to assist with the costs of winding up any office organisation.

Terrorist Prisoners

Dr. Spink: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy that no terrorist prisoners will be given special treatment in respect of early release; and if he will make a statement. [28629]

The Prime Minister: The Government have already stated that prisoners convicted of terrorist offences are not political prisoners and must expect to serve their sentences in accordance with the law.

Royal Family (Official Engagements)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the official engagements programmes of members of the royal family who receive funds from the civil list. [28611]

The Prime Minister: No.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister what advice is issued to Ministers by him and/or the Cabinet Office in respect of answering written questions tabled by right hon. and hon. Members which directly relate, appear to relate or which could be construed to relate, to their declared financial interests; and if he will make a statement. [28565]

The Prime Minister: I have no reason to believe that guidance is necessary on this matter.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 8 June, Official Report, column 271, regarding parliamentary questions, if he will list the dates on which his answers were subsequently clarified by means of written questions. [28852]

The Prime Minister: This is a matter of public record.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Amway

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many meetings he has had with representatives of Amway in the last three months. [28320]

Mr. Heseltine: None.

Nigeria (Military Equipment)

Mr. Bennett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the non-lethal equipment which has been supplied to Nigeria by United Kingdom companies since December 1993; who was the United Kingdom supplier company of that equipment; what was the value of that equipment in current prices; what was the date an export licence was granted for that equipment; and under which military list specification the licence was granted. [26556]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I can add nothing to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) on 10 May, Official Report, columns 517–18. It has been the policy of successive Administrations not to disclose particulars of defence trade with other countries or details of export licences or applications for export licences.

West African Countries (Defence Trade)

Mr. Bennett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade to which west African countries goods defined as ML 6 in group 1 of part III of schedule 1 of SI 1992 No. 3092 and group 1 of part III of schedule 1 of SI 1994 No. 1191 have been exported since December 1993. [26555]

Mr. Ian Taylor: It has been the policy of successive Administrations not to disclose particulars of defence trade with other countries.

Electronic Batons

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the companies to which export licences were granted for the export of electronic batons in 1992. [27660]

Mr. Ian Taylor: No licences were granted for these goods in 1992.

Water Rates

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will refer to the Office of Fair Trading the practice of water utilities demanding payment of water rates in advance of water being delivered. [28712]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I have drawn the right hon. Gentleman's question to the attention of the Director General of Water Services, who is responsible for regulating the commercial activities of the water utilities in England and Wales.

Consumers in Europe Group

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the grant for the consumers in Europe group in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [28306]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The consumers in Europe group is funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via its grant in aid to the National Consumer Council. The grant allocation to the CEG in each of the last five years was:

Year	£
1990–91	156,466
1991–92	157,874
1992–93	175,749
1993–94	197,921
1994–95	'180,731

NCC annual reports—' taken from NCC management accounts for 1994–95.

Ms Clare Spottiswoode

Mr. McNamara: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current civil service grade and salary of Ms Clare Spottiswoode, the Ofgas regulator. [27664]

Mr. Heseltine: Ms Clare Spottiswoode is not a civil servant. Her salary as Director General of Gas Supply was determined under the provisions of the Gas Act 1986.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when he intends to announce his decision as to the proposed new salary of Mrs. Clare Spottiswoode, the Ofgas regulator; [27665]

(2) what (a) executive directorships, (b) potential executive directorships and (c) other financial interests the Ofgas regulator, Ms Clare Spottiswoode, has asked to be taken into consideration in making her application for a salary review. [27666]

Mr. Heseltine: Details of the revised remuneration package agreed with the Director General of Gas Supply, Ms Spottiswoode, were given in the answer to my hon. Friend the member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 13 June 1995, Official Report, columns 451-52.

At present, Ms Spottiswoode does not hold any non-executive directorships.

Private Mines

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list all private mining companies which have received grant assistance for investment with permission granted by the European Union Energy Commission under decision No. 2064/86/ECSC; and on what dates the grants were paid; [28855]

(2) on what date grant disbursement was made to United Kingdom private mines listed in the European Union press release on 13 December 1994

Mr. Page: Having consulted my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales, I confirm that all the private mining companies which have been authorised to receive investment aid under decision No. 2064/86/ECSC are given in the European Commission's press release dated 13 December 1994.

Payments against the offers of grant are released by instalments depending upon the capital investment made and jobs created.

Post Office (Crime Statistics)

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many (a) assaults on postal delivery workers and (b) thefts involving the Royal Mail took place in the SE3, SE7, SE10, SE13 and SE18 postal districts in each of the last five years. [27005]

Mr. Page: In the interests of staff and mail security, it is Post Office policy not to disclose such information.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for South Hams, dated 27 February, about the inspection of radio equipment by British Telecom engineers; and what are the reasons for the time taken to reply. [27077]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Department has no record of having received my hon. Friend's letter. I suggest that he writes to me again and I will ensure that the matter he raises is looked into as speedily as possible.

Compliance Cost Assessment

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) which organisations and companies his Department has consulted with regard to directive 76/768/EEC, as amended by the sixth amendment 93/35/EEC; what was the nature of the consultation; and what discussions have taken place on the cost to the industry of implementing the directive as amended, and the effect it will have on jobs and profitability of the companies involved; [28547]

(2) if he will ensure that the draft regulations to implement in the United Kingdom directive 76/768/EEC, amended by a sixth amendment, directive 93/35/EEC, do not impose obligations not required by the directive; and when he hopes to publish the draft regulation on the cost of enforcement and the result of the compliance cost assessment investigations. [28533]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Preliminary consultations on the implementation of directive 93/35/EEC have taken place with industry, trade associations, Government Departments and animal welfare groups. Full consultation on draft regulations to implement the directive, together with a compliance cost assessment is planned for the autumn. It is not my intention to impose any obligations on companies beyond those introduced by the directive.

Export Credits

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the economic impact of the increased level of resources which he has made available for export credits. [27050]

Mr. Needham: Since 1992, the ECGD has issued around £11 billion of guarantees for project and capital goods exports. This compares with around £6 billion of guarantees issued in the previous three years.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Listed Buildings, Yorkshire

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many textile mills in Yorkshire are currently being considered for listing; and if he will name them. [27390]

Mr. Dorrell: There are currently no proposals before me concerning the listing of textile mills in Yorkshire. English Heritage is, however, undertaking a national thematic study of textile mills. It has recently published the results of the study for the Greater Manchester area for public consultation and work is well under way in respect of mills in Yorkshire.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many textile mills in Yorkshire are listed buildings; and if he will list them. [27391]

Mr. Dorrell: Until the statutory lists are computerised next year, a comprehensive list of textile mills in Yorkshire which are listed as being of special architectural or historic interest is not readily available. However, I have today placed in the Library a copy of a list of 106 mills and associated buildings in the country which are listed.

Brodsworth Hall, Yorkshire

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list those who have been officially invited to attend the opening of Brodsworth hall, near Doncaster in July. [28279]

Mr. Dorrell: Brodsworth hall, South Yorkshire, is to be opened formally on Wednesday 5 July following five years' extensive restoration. I have today placed in the Library a copy of the list of those who have been invited to the official opening.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will give the net value and percentage of the civil legal aid budget spent on (a) personal injury claims, (b) multi-party actions and (c) industrial injury claims for each year since 1991. [27988]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Information on the cost of multi-party actions is not recorded separately and is, therefore, not available. The net cost and proportion of civil legal spent on personal injury claims and accidents at work in respect of all cases closed in each year since 1990–91 was as follows:

All cases	143.5	198.3	273.5	363.8
All personal injury cases	8.6	13.9	22.3	38.0
Accidents at work	2.9	3.9	5.4	6.6
Percentages
Percentage of personal injury/all	6	7	8	10
Percentage of accidents at work/all	2	2	2	2

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will refer legal aid claims for mucous membrane disease to the multi-party actions committee; and if he will make a statement. [27987]

Mr. John M. Taylor: It is the responsibility of Legal Aid Board to decide whether a case is suitable for referral to the board's multi-party actions committee. The board has decided that this case is not suitable.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he last met the Legal Aid Board to discuss multi-party action. [27989]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am in frequent contact with the board about various matters, including multi-party actions.

Primary Legislation (Availability)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of primary legislation is readily available (a) to hon. Members and (b) to the general public in its current amended form. [27658]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Approximately one third of primary legislation is available to hon. Members and to the general public in its current amended form.

Court Service

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if he will examine the reply from the courts agency to the letter from the right hon. Member for Worthing regarding the Court Service; and if he will investigate why a copy of the court judgment has still not been produced. [28711]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer, and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply directly to the right hon. Member.

Letter from M. D. Heubner to Sir Terrence Higgins MP, dated 14 June 1995:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your question about the reasons why a copy of a court judgment has not yet been produced.

Judgment in the case of Fake-v-Jarvis will be delivered by the Registrar in the Court of Appeal (Civil Division) on Monday 19 June 1995.

The Registrar very much regrets the delay which is due to a very heavy workload. As I explained when I wrote to you on 22 May I am currently considering ways in which the pressure on the Registrar can be alleviated.

Local Courts Charter

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) how many copies of the publication "Looking at Local Court's Charter" were produced; [27431]

(2) what was the cost to public funds of the publication "Looking at a Local Court's Charter". [27430]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The publication was developed by a group of senior managers in the Magistrates' Courts Service and 750 copies were produced at a cost of £11,241. Most have been distributed to the 105 magistrates' courts committees, who are responsible locally for the management of magistrates courts. The remainder is held by the Central Council for Magistrates' Court Committees against any further requests for copies.

Civil Justice System

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when Lord Woolf's report on the civil justice system will be published. [29407]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Lord Woolf's interim report on his access to justice inquiry will be published tomorrow, and copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

Rent Levels

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by region the average rent levels for local authority dwellings for each local authority in 1995–96; what were the increases on 1994–95 levels and the average figures for each region; and what was the average rent level for local authority dwellings for the whole of England for 1995–96 and the increase on the 1994–95 average level. [27011]

Mr. Curry: I have today placed in the Library a table showing provisional 1995–96 average weekly rents for each housing authority in England and averages for all regions and for England, together with the increases these represent on 1994–95 average rents.

Sea Bathing (Hazard Notices)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will bring forward proposals to improve hazard warning arrangements at privately owned bathing beaches and adjacent waters in England and Wales; [27255]

(2) If he will bring forward proposals to improve hazard warning arrangements for bathers in waters close to shore where trawling with nets is known to occur. [27526]

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 6 June 1995]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has no powers to deal with these matters. Local authorities can, subject to the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department make byelaws regulating boating activities within 1,000 m of the high water mark. Within the areas, for which they are responsible, harbour authorities can regulate navigation. Commercial fishing activities are regulated in England and Wales by local sea fisheries committees. Subject to the general law on liability, sea bathing is undertaken at the bather's own risk.

Special Areas of Conservation

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the list of possible special areas of conservation for (a) rivers, (b) active raised bogs, (c) intertidal areas straddling the land sea divide, (d) otter, lutra lutra, (e) great crested newt, (f) fan moss and (h) oligotropic waters in medio European and perialpine areas with amphibious vegetation will be published for consultation. [28451]

Mr. Atkins: Additional SSSI notification work is required before we can consult on riverine possible special areas of conservation, further active raised bog and blanket bog sites and some intertidal areas. Additional scientific and survey work is currently in progress to identify suitable sites for the otter, great crested newt, freshwater pearl mussel and fen moss. The nature conservation agencies are also considering whether more sites are required to represent oligotrpic waters in medio European and perialpine areas with amphibious vegetation in addition to those on which we have already consulted. I hope that a further consultation exercise will take place later this year.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans there are for Orton Brick pit site in Peterborough to be proposed for submission as a special area of conservation under the EU habitats and species directive. [28450]

Mr. Atkins: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said in his reply to the hon. Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson) on 31 March 1995, Official Report, columns 834–35, the nature conservation agencies are in the process of carrying out further survey work before recommending possible special areas of conservation for the great crested newt to Government.

National Rivers Authority (Powers)

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if all powers, including reserve powers, currently available to the National Rivers Authority, will be transferred fully to the Environment Agency. [28250]

Mr. Atkins: The Environment Agency, which will be established by the Environment Bill currently progressing through our House, will carry out all of the current functions of the National Rivers Authority, together with the functions of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and local waste regulation authorities. The powers available to the NRA will transfer to the agency subject to certain changes to reflect the broader functions of the agency, and to facilitate its effective operation through rationalisation of similar provisions between the existing regimes.

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the powers available to the National Rivers Authority under schedule 25 of the Water Resources Act 1991, to make bylaws on navigation without navigation authorities, will be transferred fully to the Environment Agency. [28249]

Mr. Atkins: Schedule 18 of the Environment Bill, which is currently before our House, transfers to the Environment Agency the byelaw-making powers of the NRA under schedule 25 of the Water Resources Act 1991 without change.

Genetically Engineered Crops

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies are available to him on the environmental impact of genetically engineered crops designed to be resistant to herbicides; and what evidence there is of potential prejudice to the environment arising from their use. [28454]

Sir Paul Beresford: Under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992, the release or marketing of genetically modified organisms, including GM crops resistant to herbicides, is subject to prior consent. Advice is given on applications for consent by an independent committee of experts, the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment, which brings scientific knowledge to the Secretary of State on the impact of GM crops.

Information is also available from research programmes on the release of GM crops carried out by the Department of the Environment, the Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food and the Scottish Office of Agriculture and Fisheries Department.

Current scientific information and our experience to date has not given cause for concern in terms of adverse effects on the environment from the release of GM crop plants resistant to herbicides. We will continue to use such information and the advice of ACRE in the review of applications to release GM organisms, including herbicide resistant crops, in order to assess their environmental impact.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he proposes to issue under part II of the Environment Bill [Lords] in respect of contaminated land as to (a) the extent of clean-up required, (b) who will set the standards, (c) determining who owns what, (d) determining who cleans up what and (e) determining who pays for what; and if he will make a statement. [28243]

Mr. Atkins: Clause 54 of the present draft of the Environment Bill which amends the Environmental Protection Act 1990 gives powers to the Secretary of State to issue guidance related to contaminated land as follows:

(References are to draft sections of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 as introduced in the House of Commons and amended in Committee).

S.78A(2) Guidance on the manner of determining whether land is "contaminated land" within the meaning of the Act.

S.78A(8) Guidance on what harm is significant and whether pollution of controlled waters is being or is likely to be caused.

S.78B(2) Guidance on the inspection of an area and on the identification of contaminated land and special sites.

S.78D(6) Guidance on remediation—what is to be done, standards of remediation, "reasonableness" in relation to cost and seriousness.

S.78E(4) Guidance on determining the "appropriate person" on whom to serve a remediation notice where there are two or more persons potentially liable.

S.78J(2) Guidance on the recovery of remediation costs and on hardship in this context.

S.78K(4) Guidance to the Agency on inspection of special sites and termination of special site status.

S.78NN Guidance on the exercise of the Agency's powers and duties.

A draft of the guidance on the definition and identification of contaminated land has already been issued. That guidance will be revised in the light of comments received and along with the rest of the guidance listed above will be subject to wide formal consultation as required by clause 54 in creating draft section 78R of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. In addition, section 78N provides for site-specific guidance from the appropriate agency.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will refer back the case for unitary status for South Hams to the Local Government Commission, following the referendum on the future of the district. [28545]

Mr. Curry: We are considering which districts should be reviewed afresh by the Local Government Commission and will announce our decision shortly.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of parliamentary questions which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28493]

Sir Paul Beresford: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard after the Minister's reply.

Housing and Homelessness

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the number of his Department's homelessness acceptances and (b) the number of houses in multiple occupation in each local authority area in England, in the most recent year for which figures are available. [28666]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: A table is in the Library giving the numbers reported by local authorities in England of homeless households for which they accepted responsibility to secure permanent accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act in 1994.

Information on the numbers of houses in multiple occupation in each local authority is not available.

Objective 1 Status, Merseyside

Mr. Waring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the increase in employment on Merseyside to date as a result of its objective 1 status within the European Union. [28701]

Sir Paul Beresford: It is too early to tell. We are only just starting to receive grant claims from those carrying out capital projects. Monitoring and evaluation systems to inform the objective 1 partnership are being designed and put in place to provide information on outputs, including jobs.

Government Offices for the Regions

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the indicative allocations to Government offices for the regions in respect of the second round of the single regeneration budget challenge fund. [29083]

Mr. Curry: The indicative allocations to Government offices for the regions for the first two years of round 2 of the challenge fund are shown in the table, expressed in terms of bands. These figures relate to the current total provision of £240 million for 1996–97 and 1997–98—that is, for £40 million in 1996–97 and £200 million in 1997–98. The sums available to support approved round 2 schemes in later years are subject to annual public expenditure decisions. The final allocations will depend upon Minister's decisions on the bids submitted for support in response to the bidding guidance issued on 12 April 1995, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Region	£ million
London	60–65
South East	12–15
Eastern	3–5
South West	6–8
East Midlands	9–12
West Midlands	20–24
Merseyside	14-17
North West	28–32
Yorks and Humberside	30–34
North East	28–32

Property Services Agency

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out, on the latest available figures, by company (a) the money received from the sale of the Property Services Agency and (b) the cost of redundancy and early retirement following the sale of the agency. [28394]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 14 June 1995]: Six Property Services Agency businesses were sold. The information requested is as follows:

(a) Money received from the sale[1]

£ million

Building Management businesses (BM)	(i) From purchases (including some phased payments)	(ii) From recovery of trade debts[3]
PSA Projects	[2]–49.6	55.0
SE/S and W	10.4	69.4
Scotland	3.5	11.2
Manchester	–11.5	17.9
North East	8.0	13.7

[1] The Building Management businesses were sold on the basis of a net value of £2. Following post sale completion audits, the cash assets in the businesses were subject to adjustment to achieve this. Adjusting payments made by Government:
PSA Projects: (not yet agreed)
BM SE/S and W: £5.9 million
BM Scotland: £0.7 million
BM Manchester: £3.6 million
BM North East: £2.8 million

[2] This reflects an additional payment made on the first anniversary of the sale to compensate the purchaser for a shortfall in the transferred staff numbers.

[3] The assets represented by the debts owed to the businesses were not sold to the purchasers of the businesses but were released by the Department separately.

(b) Redundancy costs incurred by Government to date within the agreed limits of its liability under the severance sharing schemes agreed to sale

£ million

Building Management businesses (BM)	(i) Costs in making seconded civil servants redundant at the end of their secondments	(ii) Contributions made to the privatised companies' costs in making transferred employees redundant
PSA Projects	34.7	2.9
South East	24.7	0.4
S and W	23.9	0
Scotland	13.2	0.3
Manchester	17.4	1.2
North East	25.1	0.8

International Bodies (Meetings)

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will report on the outcome of the meetings of the Commission on Sustainable Development in April this year and of the governing council of the United Nations Environment Programme in May. [29351]

Mr. Gummer: I attended the high level segments of both meetings. The Commission on Sustainable Development reached agreement on the establishment of an intergovernmental panel on the protection and sustainable management of the world's forests. The CSD also provided ample evidence of the efforts being made across the world at national and local levels to implement agenda 21. A number of countries, including the United Kingdom, made presentations of their experience in developing a national strategy for sustainable development. Copies of the United Kingdom's report to the CSD were presented and copies have been placed in the Library.

The governing council of the United Nations Environment Programme approved a refocused work programme and agreed to continue its mandate as the world's environment voice. The United Kingdom was instrumental in setting in train a review of UNEP's governing structure. The executive director has been given the responsibility to produce options for reform to be considered at the next governing council in 1997. The United Kingdom also took the initiative in sponsoring a decision which invites UNEP to introduce green housekeeping measures and to urge the remainder of the United Nations system to follow its example.

TRANSPORT

Executive Agencies

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library (a) copies of report produced as part of the prior options reviews of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, the Driving Standards Agency and the Vehicle Certification Agency evaluating the performance of each agency during its first few years and (b) copies of the agencies' revised framework documents. [29349]

Mr. Norris: Copies of these documents have now been placed in the Library.

Efficiency Scrutiny

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an announcement about the report of the efficiency scrutiny of the Department of Transport's traffic area network. [29350]

Mr. Norris: The report of the efficiency scrutiny will be presented on 16 June. I will place a copy in the Library of the House.

Traffic Congestion, Newbury

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the cost to the economy of traffic congestion in Newbury. [27051]

Mr. Watts: None.

Rolling Stock

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the safety and structural integrity of the older rolling stock used on lines with third rail electrification following recent railway accidents in the south-east. [28321]

Mr. Watts: There is no question of older rolling stock being inherently unsafe. Part I of the report of the inquiry into the recent accident near Cowden, Kent, published last week, recommended a programme of research into the practicability of improving the crashworthiness of certain designs of rolling stock. British Rail is considering this recommendation and will respond to the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current position on the replacement of rolling stock on Network SouthEast. [28449]

Mr. Watts: Following the series of Networker and Networker Turbo orders of recent years, 164 Networker Express vehicles are currently under construction by ABB for replacement of rolling stock in the former NSE area. I understand that, in response to BR's recent invitation to tender for further replacement vehicles, non-compliant responses were received. The three passenger rolling stock leasing companies, which are to be sold later this year, will seek commercial opportunities for the further replacement of stock as it becomes life-expired.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy) of 23 March, Official Report, columns 318-19, if he has yet received from the franchising director the proposed criteria for determining appropriate service specifications for loss-making services; and if he will arrange for their publication in due course. [28836]

Mr. Watts: The franchising director is developing these criteria. When they have been approved by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Catamarans

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the evacuation procedures for ro-ro ferries and high-speed catamaran passenger craft using British ports. [28709]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the evacuation procedures for ro-ro ferries and high speed catamaran passenger craft using British ports.

Evacuation procedures are, in principle, the same for all passenger ships. They commence with the general emergency alarm signal whereupon passengers and crew follow emergency instructions. For passengers these will include assembly at the muster stations and thereafter, if it is decided to abandon ship, further direction to the survival craft, wearing lifejackets. Thereafter, they will embark into survival craft—lifeboats and liferafts—in accordance with instructions.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers can be carried by the largest high-speed catamaran passenger craft operating from a United Kingdom port. [28708]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Marine Safety Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the passenger capacity of the largest high speed catamaran operating from a United Kingdom port.

The CONDOR II operates between Weymouth and the Channel Islands and can carry 674 passengers.

Lorry Ban, London

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what evaluation he has undertaken of the likely effects on (a) night-time noise levels and (b) levels of particulate matter in the ambient air of his

Department's proposals to abolish the London night-time and weekend lorry ban. [28667]

Mr. Norris: The clear intention of our proposals to enhance the London lorry ban is to improve noise and emission levels. The extent of any improvement has not been formally assessed.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28645]

Mr. Norris: The Department and its executive agencies act on behalf of the Crown, and are therefore not bound except where there are statutory provision to this effect or necessary implication. Non-departmental public bodies for which I have responsibilities are not part of the Crown and do not benefit from Crown immunity.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it.

Mr. Norris: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28495]

Mr. Norris: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Motorway Barriers

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what study his Department has made into the rival merits of steel and concrete as barriers in motorways; and if he will make a statement. [28295]

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked its chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Sir Anthony Grant, dated 15 June 1995:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question, asking the Secretary of State for Transport what study his Department has made into the rival merits of steel and concrete as barriers on motorways.

All steel safety fences and concrete safety barriers deployed on our network fully meet the performance requirements for vehicle restraints which are set down in the Manual for Contract Documents for Highway Works (MCHW). The criteria for their use are contained in Departmental Standards TD 19/85 and TD 32/93.

A suitable design for concrete barriers which meets the performance requirements for high-speed motorways and trunk roads was not developed until 1989. There has not yet been sufficient length laid nor has sufficient time elapsed to enable a comprehensive appraisal to be made of their performance in service compared with steel. However, more concrete barriers are planned to be installed and we will continue to monitor their performance in service.

Coastguard Service

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if incident reports of emergencies aboard North sea oil rigs have been marked not for public reference by (a) the Coastguard Agency or (b) his Department; [27891]

(2) how many staff are employed at the auxiliary coastguard station in the Outer Skerries and how many of these staff are fully trained in cliff-rescue; [27879]

(3) what assessment he had made of the improvements to safety which would be afforded by a dedicated operator covering the 2182 frequency if incidents involving man overboard are classified as a mayday situation; and if he will make a statement; [27889]

(4) how the coastguard emergency trailer operated by the auxiliary coastguard station in the Outer Skerries is moved; and if the private vehicles owned by auxiliary coastguards are insured for moving the trailer; [27881]

(5) if, during the incident off St. Kilda involving the vessel Aeolus there was an immediate scramble of search and rescue units; if the policy being advocated by Falmouth marine rescue co-ordination centre in respect of the number of hits validated was actioned; what delay occurred to the search and rescue response; if the mayday was received on the VHF distress frequency; and at what time the lifeboat was launched; [27885]

(6) if he will list the incidents requiring coastguard assistance involving oil rigs in the North sea for each of the last five years; [27890]

(7) what estimate he has made of how long it would take (a) to get a helicopter to the scene of the incident, (b) a lifeboat to get to the scene of the incident and be able to carry out a rescue and (c) for a qualified sector officer to arrive, following a vessel running around in the Outer Skerries; and what is the contingency plan when the helicopter cannot launch due to the severity of the weather; [27878]

(8) whether the mayday message apparently received by a North sea oil rig in respect of the "Heather Bloom" incident off Shetland was passed on to the coastguard; and if he will make a statement; [27888]

(9) how long it would take to muster a cliff rescue team for an incident that occurred in the Outer Skerries; [27880]

Mr. Norris: These are operational matters for the Coastguard Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Ms Joan Walley, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions as these questions deal with operational matters, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

PQ 1929/94/95 HM Coastguard's situation reports are official working messages to bodies dealing with maritime emergencies. They are normally copied to Lloyds casualty information service. It is usual practice for these messages to be headed "for information not for publication" if the subject is an offshore installation. This is to avoid causing unnecessary anxiety to the relatives of those working offshore.

PQ 1933/94/95 Two Auxiliary Coastguards form a Coastguard Initial Response Unit on the Outer Skerries. Neither are trained in cliff rescue since there are no cliffs as such on the islands.

PQ 1936/94/95 HM Coastguard instigate the same immediate and full search and rescue response when a person is reported overboard regardless of whether the word "Mayday" or other radio proword such as "Panpan" (the urgency signal) are used.

From 1 July 1995, HM Coastguard will take over direct responsibility for the 2182khz distress watch from British Telecom Maritime Services (BT MRS). The Distress Watch will be maintained at ten designated Rescue Centres. In addition, a further ten Rescue Centres will carry out a similar watch, with instructions to respond to distress, urgency or safety calls if no response is heard from one of the designated rescue centres. These watch arrangements will be at least as effective as those currently provided by BT MRS.

PQ 1938/94/95 There is no Coastguard emergency trailer in the Out Skerries.

PO 1941/94/95 Attempts to contact vessels in the area and to scramble the Coastguard helicopter were made immediately. No vessels responded initially, and the appalling weather conditions delayed the helicopter's take-off.

The policy advocated by Falmouth MRCC was not actioned.

No Mayday was received on the VHF distress frequency. No lifeboat was launched: it would have been inappropriate to do so. The nearest lifeboat would have taken over four hours to arrive on scene.

PQ 1944/94/95 HM Coastguard was involved in providing assistance to offshore oil installations as follows:

Year	Number of incidents
1990	57
1991	54
1992	62
1993	71
1994	66
1995 up to 22 May	32

Details of these incidents could only be listed at disproportionate cost.

PQ 1951/94/95 The Sumburgh Coastguard helicopter will arrive within a maximum of 35 minutes by day and 65 minutes by night. The Lerwick RNLI lifeboat would take about 80 minutes to arrive. A Coastguard Sector Officer would not normally be required at the scene of an offshore incident. If a Coastguard officer were to attend they would be transported by helicopter or lifeboat: timings would depend on the circumstances.

In the event that the Sumburgh-based Coastguard helicopter could not get airborne due to exceptionally severe weather conditions other search and rescue units would be tasked. RNLI Lifeboats are based at Lerwick and Aith in Shetland; other helicopters are available at RAF Lossiemouth, and in the Brent Field.

PQ 1953/94/95 The distress message was passed to HM Coastguard in the normal manner, but with a 55 minute delay—not in any way attributable to HM Coastguard. Immediately upon receipt of the distress message Aberdeen Coastguard commenced search and rescue action. Five members of the HEATHER BLOOM'S crew were rescued from liferafts, but the vessel's skipper was tragically lost.

PQ 1954/94/95 On the infrequent occasions that a back up response team might be required this would take forty minutes by day and eighty five minutes at night.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the distress frequency on 2182 kHz; and if he will make a statement; [28126]

(2) what were the staffing levels of coastguard services and the total budget given to coastguard services for rescue services, including equipment allowances in each year since 1979; and what was the cost in each year per person assisted; [28125]

(3) how many incidents at sea were reported; and how many people were rescued by coastguard services in each year since 1986. [28124]

Mr. Norris: These are operational matters for the Coastguard Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Ms Joan Walley, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions as these questions deal with operational matters, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

PQ 1979/94/95

Calender year	Total number of incidents	Total number assisted rescued
1986	5,300	8,960
1987	5,563	8,867
1988	6,261	11,132
1989	6,835	11,466
1990	7,076	13,474
1991	7,212	13,048
1992	8,533	14,628
1993	9,592	17,106
1994	10,409	16,627

"Assisted" here means those persons remaining on board a vessel until the end of the incident. Those taken off the vessel or recovered from the sea by SAR services are "rescued". The figures quoted also include the number of incidents reported and the number of persons rescued on the shoreline for which Coastguard also has responsibility.

PO 1982/94/95

The distress watch on 2182khz is at present carried out by British Telecom Maritime Radio Service (BT MRS) under contract to the Coastguard Agency. The watch is carried out entirely satisfactorily. From 1 July the watch will be taken over by HM Coastguard. An independent technical assessment of the Medium Frequency equipment HMCG will use for the 2182khz distress watch was carried out by GEC Marconi. This assessment found that HMCG could provide a service at least as good as that provided by BT MRS. Some modifications to the existing equipment to improve coverage are currently being undertaken by HMCG. I am satisfied that the high standard of distress watchkeeping in the UK will be maintained.

PQ 1981/94/95

The information requested for the staffing levels of coastguard services is only readily available from 1983 and is detailed below:

Year	HMCG uniformed staff
1983	543
1984	544
1985	533
1986	523
1987	523
1988	510

Year	HMCG uniformed staff
1989	489
1990	469
1991	484
1992	485
1993	482
1994	477
1995	460

The information requested for Her Majesty's Coastguard budgets is available for 1990–91 onwards from our own records. A search of records held by the Department of Transport indicates that the budget figures for earlier years are not readily available.

Year	Total HMCG budget £000
1990–91	29,874
1991–92	33,778
1992–93	37,864
1993–94	38,951
1994–95	38,328
1995–96	40,086

Year	£ cost per person assisted/rescued
1990–91	2,235
1991–92	2,513
1992–93	2,483
1993–94	2,293
1994–95	2,400

These figures are calculated on a notional basis by dividing the number of persons assisted/rescued by the total costs of HMCG; they do not include those of the other rescue services such as the RNLI and MoD.

Ferries

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many similar exercises have taken place following the FEREX 86 ferry exercise; how many passengers were involved in each exercise and what proportion of them were able-bodied; how long it took for all passengers to reach the lifeboats in each exercise; and how long it took for each evacuation to be completed; [28707]

(2) how many passengers were evacuated in the ferry exercise FEREX 86; how many of these were able-bodied and how long it took (a) for all the passengers to reach the lifeboats and (b) for the evacuation to be completed. [28710]

Mr. Norris: These are operational matters for the Coastguard Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 15 June 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions as these deal with operational matters, for which I have responsibility as Chief Executive.

PQ 2007/94/95 98 passengers were evacuated in the ferry exercise FEREX 86. All of the passengers were able-bodied.

The controlled evacuation, testing a variety of exercise scenarios, took two hours to disembark the 98 passengers as each lifeboat and helicopter carried out detailed tasks in slow time in order to allow careful evaluation of the problems associated with the evacuation.

Had the Master of "THE VIKING" been required to implement full evacuation procedures in a real emergency the evacuation could have been carried out in a shorter time.

PQ 2014/94/95 From records that are readily available the following ferry evacuation exercises have taken place since FEREX 86 (details of exercises from November 1992 were provided in reply to PQ 1811/94/95:

FERREVAC
SEALINK EXERCISE
MANCHEX 88
COMMON AIM 2
SEAVAC
LYONESSE 91
MANCHEX 91
CELTIC LIFT
POLACAP
SOLFIREX

Information on these exercises is not available in the form requested.

British Rail Rolling Stock

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of British Rail rolling stock was (a) less than five years old, (b) between six and 10 years old, (c) between 11 and 20 years old, (d) between 21 and 30 years old and (e) over 30 years old as of 1 January.

Mr. Watts: Information in the form requested is not readily available.

British Rail Shares

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is his estimate of the loss of revenue to the Exchequer resulting from the special tax rules contained in paragraph 11, schedule 24 to the Finance Act 1994, as applied to the transfer of shares from the British Railways Board to a private franchise; [28668]

(2) what is his estimate of the loss of revenue to the Exchequer resulting from the special tax rules contained in paragraph 8, schedule 24 to the Finance Act 1994, as applied to the transfer of shares from the British Railways Board capital gains tax group to a private franchise; [28669]

(3) what is his estimate of the loss of revenue to the Exchequer resulting from the decision to exempt the transfer of shares from the British Railways Board to a private franchise from value added tax. [28670]

Mr. Watts: None.

Shipping Companies

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the shipping companies in receipt of financial assistance from the Government. [27863]

Mr. Norris: This information is available only at disproportionate cost.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Central Office of Information

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what targets have been set for the Central Office of Information in 1995–96. [29536]

Mr. Horam: The Central Office of Information has five key targets for the 1995–96 financial year. They are:

(i) to break even in modified historical cost terms after recovering all costs, including interest on borrowings;

(ii) to achieve a 3 per cent. reduction in unit cost of output in real terms, while maintaining suitable levels of quality;

(iii) to equal or better the proportion of work delivered in accordance with client specification during 1994–95;

(iv) to equal or better the proportion of work delivered on time during 1994–95; and

(v) to achieve an average score of 7.9 out of 10 for the COI customer satisfaction index.

Standards in Public Life

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish the Government's detailed response to the recommendations of the Nolan Committee on Standards in Public Life to which he referred in his oral answer of 12 June, Official Report, column 495. [29156]

Mr. David Hunt: Before the summer recess, as I told the House on 18 May, Official Report, column 493.

Investment in Science

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what response the Government intend to make to the fourth report of the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee, "HL 36 Session 1993/4, on international investment in United Kingdom science". [29159]

Mr. David Hunt: The Government response to the House of Lords Select Committee's report is published today. Copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses. The Government are most grateful to the Committee for its thoughtful and detailed report.

HEALTH

Health Visitors

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitors there were in England and Wales for each of the last three years; and what is her estimate of the number for the current year. [27331]

Mr. Sackville: The latest available information relating to England is shown in the table.

Health visitors in England as at 30 September of each year

	Number of health visitors
1991	10,380
1992	10,250
1993	10,190

Note: Figures are whole-time equivalents rounded to the nearest ten.
Source: Non-Medical Workforce Census.

Figures do not include health visitors who work as practice nurses.

Information relating to Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Influenza Vaccination

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for each family health services authority area what is the percentage of the elderly in receipt of influenza vaccination each year for the last five years. [27922]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she is taking to ensure that general practitioners promote the highest possible take-up of influenza vaccination by elderly patients on their lists; and what target she has set for influenza vaccination coverage for this group of patients. [27923]

Mr. Sackville: The chief medical officer will be reminding general practitioners in the next edition of "CMO's Update", which is circulated to all doctors, of the groups of patients for whom annual influenza immunisation is recommended and that now is the time to start planning, if they have not already done so. Further information will be issued in September.

Influenza immunisation is recommended for those of any age who are at especial risk by virtue of underlying disease such as chronic heart or lung disease, and for those in residential accommodation. The aim is to increase uptake year by year, but no specific target for influenza vaccine coverage has been set.

Blood Transfusion Services

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those blood transfusion services that have undertaken studies into the option of privatisation; what has been the result of their surveys; and if she will make a statement. [28258]

Mr. Sackville: The National Blood Authority, which is responsible for our blood services, has no plans to investigate the possibility of privatising any of its centres.

NHS Authorities and Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons candidates for the post of (a) chairman, (b) non-executive director and (c) other management positions of health authorities and trusts are not obliged to disclose personal histories of (i) bankruptcy and (ii) criminal behaviour. [28255]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave him on 26 April, Official Report column 552, and on 2 May, Official Report column 173. Candidates for appointment to national health service authority or trust boards are under an obligation to disclose information that might affect their eligibility for appointment, including any relating to bankruptcy and/or a criminal record.

Temazepam

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to implement the recommendations in the report of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, 1991, in respect of the control of the use of temazepam. [28282]

Mr. Bowis: The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs made recommendations to Ministers regarding temazepam in July 1993 and I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council gave my hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie) on 10 May, column 756.

Children in Care

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children are currently in care because of the imprisonment of one or both of their parents. [28226]

Mr. Bowis: The most recent information available centrally relates to 31 March 1994, when it is estimated that 380 children were looked after by local authorities in England because one or both parents were in prison—on remand or sentenced.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a list of all contracts for non-clinical services worth £100,000 or more that have been awarded by national health service trusts under the compulsory competitive tendering process. [28999]

Mr. Sackville: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prescriptions

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many prescriptions were issued in 1993 and 1994 for each of the top 100 items; [28908]

(2) if she will publish the list of the top 100 prescription items as sent to the Chester and Ellesmere Port community health council and the provisional 1994 data in the same form. [28909]

Mr. Malone: Information on dispensing volumes and costs for individual preparations is not made public for reasons of commercial confidentiality. Data are shared within the national health service and with clinical and scientific researchers on the understanding that they will not put information into the public domain which breaches the confidentiality guidelines in anyway.

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the increase in the total net ingredient cost for the top 100 prescription items; and if she will make a statement. [28910]

Mr. Malone: The total net ingredient cost of the 100 prescriptions with the largest number of prescription items in 1993 was £909 million, and of the 100 preparations with the largest numbers of items in 1994, based on provisional figures, was £941 million. The preparations which comprise the top 100 vary from year to year.

Ovarian Cancer

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to set up regular screening for women at high risk of ovarian cancer. [28639]

Mr. Sackville: We have no immediate plans. A research programme at the Royal Hospitals national health service trust is currently being evaluated in a randomised trial involving 120,000 women which incorporates tumour markers as a primary screen followed by ultrasonography as a secondary test in women with abnormal tumour marker results. Another study is using ultrasound as a primary screening test. Any screening test must have high sensitivity and specificity and we welcome well designed trials of new and existing screening techniques which will help us decide upon appropriate national policies. When an effective test is available, we will consider the establishment of a national screening programme.

Private Sector Employees

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private sector employees have been seconded to work in (a) the NHS executive, (b) regional offices, (c) her Department and (d) elsewhere in the NHS. [28642]

Mr. Sackville: There are no private sector employees seconded to work in the national health service executive or regional offices. We do, however, have one such secondee elsewhere in the Department of Health. Statistics on private sector employees seconded to work elsewhere in the NHS are not available centrally.

Children Act 1989

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each year since the implementation of the Children Act 1989 the number of child abuse investigations undertaken in total and the outcomes broken down into (a) court action under provisions of the Act, (b) entries on an at risk register, (c) informal supervision and (d) no further action. [28894]

Mr. Bowis: Information collected centrally relates only to those child abuse investigations that result in an initial stage child protection conference. Figures on children placed on registers—and associated legal status including court orders for those on registers at 31 March—and on those subject to initial stage conferences which did not lead to registration are published annually in "Children and young people on child protection registers, year ending 31 March 19XX, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Adoption

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the adoptions in 1993 were adoptions by step-parents. [27845]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The question concerns specific operational matter in which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mrs. Helen Jackson, dated 14 June 1995:

PQ: 95/592 Step Parent Adoptions

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your question about the number of step-parent adoptions in 1993.

Of the 6,812 adoption orders made in 1993 in the magistrates courts, the county courts and the High Court, 3,202 (47%) were in favour of the step-parents.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications to adopt were made in 1993 in total; and how many of these were applications by step-parents. [27846]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mrs. Helen Jackson, dated 14 June 1995:

PQ: 95/591 ADOPTION APPLICATIONS

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your question about the number of adoption applications made in 1993.

The total number of adoption applications in the magistrates courts, the county courts and the High Court in 1993 was 7,813. Of these, 4,095 (52%) were made by step-parents.

TREASURY

Exchange Rates

13. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact of changes in the pound/ecu exchange rate on payment into (a) the EU budget and (b) the European development fund budget since 1992. [27045]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Broadly speaking, exchange rate movements increased our payments into the Community budget in 1993 but reduced them in 1994. The effect in the present year is expected to be small.

The impact of changes in exchange rates on our payments into the European development fund depends on the timing of these payments.

Single European Currency

14. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions have been held about the implications of a single European currency for title in respect of foreign and gold reserves of individual EU member states; and if he will make a statement. [27046]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The treaty on European Union requires member states joining the monetary union to transfer part of their reserves to the European central bank, receiving in exchange an equivalent claim on the ECB. The precise arrangements for the ownership of foreign exchange reserves in stage three of economic and monetary union are among the many technical issues that will have to be decided during stage two.

Value Added Tax

15. Mr. Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to simplify VAT legislation. [27047]

Mr. Heathcoat Amory: I announced earlier today that Customs and Excise has set up a special team, as part of the Government's wider deregulation drive, to review its current legislation with a view to rationalising and simplifying it over the next three years.

Personal Taxation

16. Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his plans for reform of personal taxation. [27048]

20. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his plans for the reform of personal taxation. [27055]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his plans for reform of personal taxation, and if he will make a statement. [27300]

Sir George Young: The Government remain committed to low rates of personal tax and will cut taxes again when economic conditions are right and public finances can afford it.

Devaluation

17. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what percentage the pound has devalued since April 1992; and what assessment he has made of the adverse effects of the devaluation. [27049]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Sterling is currently 16 per cent. lower on a trade-weighted basis than it was in April 1992. Over the same period, the economy has grown by over 8 per cent. in real terms. But inflation has averaged just 3 per cent. This enviable combination of strong growth and low inflation is a result of the Government's sound monetary and prudent fiscal policies.

Investment

18. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much investment by the machinery and equipment industries has changed within the past 12 months. [27052]

Mr. Aitken: Investment by machinery and equipment industries rose by almost 19 per cent. in real terms in the year to the first quarter of 1995.

Personal Equity Plans

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the new regulations extending personal equity plans to corporate bonds will be introduced. [29408]

Sir George Young: The regulations extending PEPs to certain corporate bonds, preference shares and convertibles have been laid before Parliament today and will come into force on 6 July. [29408]

Share Option Schemes

19. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the value for money provided by share option schemes for (a) the individuals, (b) the companies concerned and (c) the United Kingdom.

Sir George Young: The assessment of the value for money provided by share option schemes is best made by companies and their shareholders.

Economic and Finance Council

21. Mr. Enright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has held in ECOFIN on European monetary union. [27056]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: EU economic and finance Ministers discussed various aspects of the technical preparatory work for stage three of economic and monetary union at their informal meeting in Versailles on 8 April. The European Commission's Green Paper on the transition to a single currency was discussed over lunch at ECOFIN on 22 May.

Government Borrowing

22. Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the guidelines for Government borrowing. [27057]

Mr. Aitken: The guidelines for Government borrowing were set out in the debt management report published by HM Treasury on 30 March 1995, which included the gilt funding remit issued to the Bank of England for 1995–96, and in the remit to the department of national savings for 1995–96, announced on 31 March 1995, Official Report at column 866.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the general Government borrowing requirement defined so as to exclude revenues from sales of land and buildings and privatisation receipts, as a percentage of gross domestic product for each year since 1979 until 1997–98. [28159]

Mr. Aitken: The table sets out the information requested:

General government borrowing requirement (GGBR) excluding privatisation proceeds and net sales of land and buildings, as a percentage of gross domestic product (GDP)

Percentage of GDP	GGBR	GGBR ex privatisation proceeds	GGBR ex privatisation proceeds and net sales of buildings[1 2]
1979–80	5	5	5½
1980–81	5¾	5¾	6
1981–82	3¼	3¼	4
1982–83	3½	3½	4¼
1983–84	3¼	3¼	3¾
1984–85	2¾	3½	4
1985–86	2	2¾	3½
1986–87	1¼	2½	3
1987–88	-½	¾	1½
1988–89	-2½	-1	0
1989–90	-1¼	-½	½
1990–91	0	¾	1½
1991–92	2½	3¾	4
1992–93	6¼	7½	7¾
1993–94	7¼	8¼	8½
1994–95	5½	6½	—
1995–96	3½	3½	—
1996–97	2	2½	—
1997–98	1	1¼	—

[1] Outturn data for general government sales of land and buildings in 1994–95 is not currently available.

[2] Forecasts for sales of land and buildings by local authorities are not available.

Housing Market

24. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further fiscal or other measures he plans to introduce to stimulate the housing market. [27059]

Sir George Young: We fully recognise the importance of encouraging a stable and health housing market. The best help that any Government can give the housing market is to deliver sustainable economic growth, based on low inflation and sound public finances. The Government are doing precisely that. Furthermore, the combined effect of changes in interest rates and mortgage interest relief since October 1990 has been to make the average mortgage holder £130 a month better off.

Bank of England

25. Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his relations with the Governor of the Bank of England. [27060]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Governor and I are both committed to achieving permanently low inflation.

Inflation

26. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out his strategy for maintaining low inflation over the next three years. [27061]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I will continue to set interest rates in order to ensure that inflation remains permanently low.

Executive Pay

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about pay levels and share options for executives within privatised industry. [27058]

Sir George Young: Remuneration is a matter for companies and their shareholders. The Greenbury committee is reviewing best practice for companies and we will consider the need for any Government measures, if appropriate, in the light of its conclusions.

Monetary Union

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he was previously aware of the letters circulated by the inquiry on Britain and the single currency, a copy of which has been sent to him, advising that Lord Kingsdown had been invited by him to chair the inquiry; and if he will make a statement; [28348]

(2) on what basis persons were selected by the Kingsdown committee on a single currency to give evidence; and if he was consulted by the committee on its stated desire to aim to produce a report which would have public appeal. [28349]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 13 June 1995]: The Action Centre for Europe's main activity is to commission and publish original papers by independent academic and other experts on key topics relating to the European Union, with a view to stimulating public discussion. ACE set up a working group on the implications of monetary union for Britain and the Kingsdown report, published on 8 June, records its findings. As a member of ACE I suggested to Lord

Kingsdown that as a former Governor of the Bank of England he would be well placed to chair an ACE working group. I was in no way involved in the drafting of the report, which reflects solely the views of the authors.

Self-employment

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the main groups of workers which, according to statute law, are treated for tax purposes as self-employed but for national insurance purposes as employed; [28333]

(2) in what circumstances a taxpayer may assume that a determination by the Inland Revenue that, according to case law, a person is self-employed may be taken as applicable to tax liability and national insurance contributions. [28341]

Sir George Young: There is no statutory definition of self-employment. Both the Inland Revenue and the Department of Social Security use criteria derived from the case law of the courts. They operate a common approach to employment status. This means that where one department has made a written decision following a full investigation of the circumstances, this will normally be accepted by the other department provided all the relevant facts have been accurately and clearly disclosed and the circumstances remain the same.

The exceptions are as follows:

(i) Section 314 Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 deems that certain divers are treated as self employed for tax purposes. The normal case law approach applies for National Insurance.

(ii) The Social Security (Categorisation of Earners) Regulations provide that particular groups of workers should be treated as employees whilst the Inland Revenue follow the normal case law approach. In these cases it may mean that the national insurance treatment differs from the tax treatment. The following groups of workers are affected:

Office Cleaners

Ministers of Religion

Part time or visiting lecturers, teachers or instructors

Persons employed by their spouse

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the differences between Inland Revenue leaflet IR56/N139 and previous leaflets since 1979 as they relate to the criteria for determining whether a person is employed or self-employed. [28340]

Sir George Young: Leaflet IR56/N139 has been updated on a number of occasions since its introduction in 1985. The latest version was published on 31 May 1995 and contains additional criteria relating to short-term engagements in the light of recent case law

Public Sector Borrowing

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the impact on his forecasts of the public sector borrowing requirement in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98 of a 0.25 per cent. annual reduction in the Treasury forecast of the rate of growth of United Kingdom gross domestic product for the aforementioned years. [28157]

Mr. Aitken [holding answer 14 June 1995]: Tables 4.10 and 4.11 in the 1995–96 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" illustrate the sensitivity of projections for the public sector borrowing requirement to alternative growth paths.

Retirements and Redundancies

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff of (a) the Treasury and (b) agencies for which the Treasury is responsible (i) took early retirement, (ii) took voluntary redundancy, (iii) took compulsory redundancy and (iv) were retired on medical grounds in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and what are the projected figures for 1995–96. [25418]

Mr. Nelson: The information for the Treasury is as follows:

	Voluntary redundancy		Other early retirement	Compulsory redundancy	Medical
	Early retirement	Severance
1993–94	5	2	11	2	3
1994–95	6	10	11	0	11
1995–96	[1]14	[1]3	[1]1	[1]0	[1]1

[1] Figures for 1995–96 are those known at 1 May 1995. The Treasury is not responsible for any agencies.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the annual cost to the Department of staff leaving under redundancy or early retirement schemes to incorporate (i) added years lump sum payment (ii) redundancy payments (iii) pension payments including enhancements and (iv) any other special arrangements for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, and projected for (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [25637]

Mr. Nelson: Staff leaving the Treasury under redundancy or early retirement schemes are eligible for compensation payments under the principal civil service pensions scheme. The scheme distinguishes between early retirement, with immediate payments of pensions benefits, and early severance, with immediate payment of lump sum compensation and pension benefits preserved for payment at age 60. Individual payments are age, salary and service related.

The cost to the Department of staff leaving under these schemes are a mixture of benefits payable immediately, which may include compensation lump sum and/or pension, plus cost arising over a longer term—for example, the annual compensation to staff under the age of 60. The table separately identifies these immediate and longer-term costs, so far as they can be determined.

	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
Immediate costs
Lump sum compensation	130,302	432,195	827,534
Enhancement to lump sum	49,983	64,050	235,266
Longer term costs
Enhancement to pension[1]	16,659	21,346	78,420
Cost of paying pension per-age 60	729,789	949,143	2,933,485

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Indonesia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the nature of the work involved in the steel bridging (phase 1) aid and trade provision project in Indonesia; what equipment and materials were supplied under the project; what is the location of the bridging; which Indonesian companies were involved; and what date the project was completed. [28298]

Mr. Baldry: Phase 1 of the steel bridging project was undertaken to help meet Indonesia's requirements for steel bridging on major roads.

The equipment and materials supplied under the project consisted of 397 spans of 30.5m Bailey bridging, 80 tool kits, 397 sets of spare components, 30 sets of jacking equipment and 30 sets of erection equipment.

The bridging is located in the following provinces: Irja, Maluku, Sulsel, Sulteng, Sultera, Sulut, DKL, Jakarta, Jabar, Jateng, Sumut, Sumbar, Sultra, Riau, Jatim, Aceh, Bengkulu, Kalbar, Kalsel, Kalteng, Kaltim and Sumsel.

The roads and highways department of the Ministry of Public Works BINA MARGA—was responsible for project implementation.

The project was completed in July 1988.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 1 March, Official Report, column 574, on what date the case for the shortwave radio transmitters project in Indonesia was submitted by the Department of Trade and Industry to the sub-committee for aid and trade; on what date the project was approved by the sub-committee for aid and trade; and on what date the project was approved by the Minister for Overseas Development. [28330]

Mr. Baldry: The project was submitted to the sub-committee for aid and trade in November 1990. It was approved in the same month by both the SCAT and my right hon. and noble Friend, the Minister for Overseas Development.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the nature of the work involved in the steel bridging (phase 2) aid and trade provision project in Indonesia; what equipment and materials were supplied under the project; what is the location of the bridging; which Indonesian companies were involved; and on what date the project was completed. [28299]

Mr. Baldry: Phase II of the steel bridging project supplied demountable steel bridging for an on-going bridge repair programme. Approximately 5,000m of steel bridging and spares were supplied.

The bridging is located in the following provinces: South Sulawesi, North Sulawesi, Central Sulawesi, East Kalimantan, West Kalimantan, Central Kalimantan, South Kalimantan, North Sumatera, South Sumatera, West Sumatera, Bengkulu, Riau, West Java, Irian Jaya and Maluku.

The roads and highways department of the Ministry of Public Works—BINA MARGA—was responsible for project implementation.

The project was completed in April 1992.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, column 704, to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor), regarding the Indonesian tropical forest management project: sub 4, how many persons were trained at each of the training centres listed in his answer; what private sector bodies submitted personnel for training under the project; and who the Government engaged to carry out the training. [27833]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 14 June 1995]: Sub-project 4 (training) trains teachers who work at regional centres. One hundred and seventy five teachers have received basic instruction in methodology and curriculum development in Indonesia while a further 37 have received advanced training in the UK.

Member companies of APHI—Indonesia Association Forest Business—also sent personnel for training under the project.

The training of teachers is undertaken by LTS International Ltd in association with the University of Wolverhampton.

Sarawak

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what help he gives to schemes developing the use of rattan in Sarawak. [26335]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 13 June 1995]: Under the aid programme, we are helping the Government of Malaysia to develop a better understanding of the use of rattan in two main ways. Our support for the Forestry Research Institute of Malaysia includes research on the mapping and conservation of rattan. Under the UK/Malaysia memorandum of understanding on forestry, we are helping to establish forest management systems that include rattan and other non-timber forest products.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Homelessness

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons presented themselves as homeless to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each district council area in each of the last five years. [28217]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive whose chief executive has advised me that the figures are as shown in the table.

Persons presenting as homeless to Northern Ireland Housing Executive Council for Catholic Maintained Schools

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the total cost to public funds in each of the past three years of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools; and what proposals he has to reduce this cost. [28219]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

1992–93: £922,906

1993–94: £1,110,986

1994–95: £1,260,932

I am satisfied that the council's allocation are essential to enable it to carry out its responsibilities and I do not have any proposals at present to reduce its level of funding.

Mental Patients

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to bring Northern Ireland legislation on the compulsory detention of mental patients into line with that in Great Britain following the Brian Doherty case; and if he will make a statement. [28221]

Mr. Moss: There are no plans at present to amend the Northern Ireland legislation relating to the compulsory detention of mentally disordered people. The Western health and social services board has set up an independent inquiry into the Brian Doherty case and its report will be studied closely to see what action may be necessary to prevent similar recurrences.

HIV

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on programmes in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years aimed at preventing the spread of HIV; what proportion of these amounts was aimed specifically at homosexuals, bisexuals and lesbians; what plans he has to review the overall budget in the light of the increase in foreign tourism to Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [28223]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the form requested. Measures to prevent HIV/AIDS are undertaken as part of a wider effort to promote sexual health.

Expenditure by the Health Promotion Agency for Northern Ireland on the promotion of sexual health and the prevention of HIV/AIDS, and grants from the Department of Health and Social Services to voluntary agencies working in this area, were as follows in each of the past five years.

1990–91: £140,703

1991–92: £175,786

1992–93: £242,100

1993–94: £313,095

1994–95: £279,752

The Department of Health and Social Services published its strategy on HIV and AIDS in 1994. The strategy will be kept under review in the light of changing circumstances.

Primary School Closures

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the decision first was taken to close Clare and Ballydougan primary schools and to replace Bleary primary school. [28366]

Mr. Ancram: A scheme to close Ballydougan primary school was approved in April 1966 and the school closed in August 1966. A scheme to close Clare primary school was approved in December 1970 and the school closed in April 1971. A proposal to provide a new replacement school for Bleary primary school was approved by my Department in November 1982.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the proposal that a new Bleary primary school to cater for those previously served by Clare and Ballydougan primary schools ceased to be classed as a rationalisation scheme. [28367]

Mr. Ancram: The capital scheme for the replacement of Bleary primary school has never been classified as a rationalisation scheme within my Department's school capital planning arrangements which were introduced in 1991.

School Meals

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number and percentage of children receiving (a) free school meals and (b) parentally paid-for school meals in each of the last 10 years. [28378]

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Year	Pupils taking meals	Pupils receiving free meals (percentage of pupil meals)	Pupils paying for meals (percentage of pupil meals)
1984–85	161,096	93,974 (58)	67,122 (42)
1985–86	160,435	94,891 (59)	65,544 (41)
1986–87	164,756	98,233 (60)	66,523 (40)
1987–88	165,387	100,144 (61)	65,243 (39)
1988–89	153,638	73,458 (48)	80,180 (52)
1989–90	155,769	74,416 (48)	81,353 (52)

Year	Pupils taking meals	Pupils receiving free meals (percentage of pupil meals)	Pupils paying for meals (percentage of pupil meals)
1990–91	164,194	77,005 (47)	87,189 (53)
1991–92	167,582	80,882 (48)	86,700 (52)
1992–93	178,271	83,761 (47)	94,510 (53)
1993–94	181,116	85,327 (47)	95,789 (53)

Information Services

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all the gifts declared by (a) the head of information services at the Northern Ireland Office and (b) all other press officers at the Northern Ireland Office. [28368]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is as follows:

(a) A Panasonic RF B65D portable radio presented in July 1993 by Downtown Radio to the director. It is for official use within the information service and is held on the inventory of office equipment.

(b) None.

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what request has been made by the head of information services, Northern Ireland Office, for the monitoring of journalists' telephones. [28369]

Sir John Wheeler: None.

EDUCATION

Education Assistance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total current annual cost to public funds of the various Government schemes for sending children to private or independent schools. [27054]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department's expenditure on the assisted places scheme and the music and ballet schools scheme—which provide means-tested fee remission for certain pupils attending participating independent schools—in England in the financial year 1994–95 was £101.5 million and £6.8 million respectively. Outturn capital and recurrent expenditure in the same year on the 15 city technology colleges—which are also independent schools—was £50.1 million. These figures do not include the purchase of places by local authorities, whether for pupils generally or for those with special educational needs, in independent schools or in nursery establishments. Questions about comparable provision elsewhere in the United Kingdom, or for the children of service men and diplomatic staff, are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State responsible for those areas.

Minority Languages (GCSE)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps she is taking to ensure that examining boards continue to offer minority languages at GCSE level, with particular reference to eastern European languages. [28478]

Mr. Forth: GCSEs in modern foreign languages for courses starting in September 1996 will be subject to regulations and subject criteria published by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority in March 1995 and designed to align the GCSE with the requirements of the national curriculum.

The Government have been mindful of the implications of the new GCSE criteria for the availability of syllabuses in the less-commonly studied languages, including those from Eastern Europe. The Secretary of State therefore agreed in principle that special arrangements could be made in certain cases, to give the examining groups scope to continue to offer a suitably wide range of language syllabuses.

The SCAA is discussing with the examining groups the detailed arrangements that could be made for individual languages. The decision on what syllabuses to offer is ultimately one for each examining group. An announcement will be made shortly about the range of languages to be offered at GCSE.

Christian Primary School, Croxteth

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State if she will make a statement on the current situation in respect of the proposals to provide a Christian primary school on the Croxteth county park estate in Liverpool. [28704]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend hopes to be able to announce a decision on these proposals in the near future.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list the fees charged by each independent school for post-16 years education under the assisted places scheme in 1994–95; and what were the comparable figures for LEA schools, grant-maintained schools and Further Education Funding Council-funded colleges. [28706]

Mr. Robin Squire: Tuition fees for sixth-form pupils supported by the Department's assisted places scheme in each participating school in the academic year 1994–95 are shown a table drawn from the Department's records, a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Comparable unit costs are not separately available for pupils aged 16 to 19 in local education authority maintained schools, grant-maintained schools or Further Education Funding Council-funded institutions.

Advisory Group on School Improvement

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what will be the membership of the new advisory group on school improvement; and if she will make a statement. [29477]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 25 May a wide-ranging programme designed to raise standards in all our schools. The programme brings together the work of Government Departments and other agencies of central and local government, and also the resources of universities and schools. I will chair an advisory group which will carry this work forward. Its membership will be as follows:

Mr. Sandy Adamson—Director of Planning at the Funding Agency for Schools

Professor Michael Barber—Professor of Education, Keele University

Ms Julie Barton—Headteacher, Cambridge Special School, Hammersmith

Mrs. Patricia Clarke—Headteacher, Avondale Park Primary School, Kensington

Mrs. Pat Collarbone—Headteacher, Haggerston School, Hackney

Mrs. Heather Du Quesnay—Director of Education, Hertfordshire

Mr. Jim Rose—Director of Inspection, Office for Standards in Education.

Mr. Brian Stevens—Director of External Relations at the British Bankers' Association.

Ms Frankie Sulke—Head of Policy, Teacher Training Agency

The group will assist in co-ordinating the work of the different agencies, and advise the Secretary of State on possible further action to improve schools. The members are appointed for one year, at which point the Secretary of State will review progress made.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by her or her ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28487]

Mr. Boswell: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for all matters concerning their agencies. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard after the Minister's reply.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by her Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally and (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered now due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if she will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28506]

Mr. Boswell: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Teacher Training

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total cost and the average cost per student of the BEd/BAQTS in (a) year one, (b) year two, (c) year three and (d) year four on courses in England and Wales. [27994]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Teacher Training Agency has notified institutions in England of allocations totalling £104.9 million for the provision of courses of undergraduate initial teacher training in the 1995–96 academic year. This represents an average allocation of £2,610 for each full-time undergraduate place the institutions are contracted to provide. In addition, institutions receive course fees, covered for most students by mandatory awards. In 1995–96, classroom-based undergraduate courses will attract a fee of £750 and laboratory-based courses £1,600. Total fee income for undergraduate courses of initial teacher training is estimated to be £45.5 million, an average fee of £1,140. Courses are funded on the same basis for each year of study.

These figures do not include the costs of student support.

Questions about the funding of initial teacher training in Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total cost and the average cost per student of the PGCE courses in England and Wales. [27995]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 12 June 1995]: The Teacher Training Agency has notified institutions in England of allocations totalling £48.6 million for the provision of courses of full-time postgraduate initial teacher training in the 1995–96 academic year. This represents an average allocation of £2,850 for each full-time postgraduate place the institutions are contracted to provide. In addition, institutions receive course fees, covered for most students by mandatory awards. In 1995–96, postgraduate courses will attract a fee of £1,600. Total fee income for postgraduate courses of initial teacher training is estimated to be £27.2 million, an average fee of £1,600.

These figures do not include the costs of student support.

Questions about the funding of initial teacher training in Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how many civil servants in his Department are currently working on matters related to the Scott inquiry; if a dedicated unit has been established; and what is the estimated cost to date of civil servants dealing with matters relating to the Scott inquiry. [28864]

The Attorney-General: Work on matters related to the Scott inquiry is undertaken by staff in my Department as part of their normal duties and it is not, therefore, possible to estimate the overall cost. The costs of staff in the Treasury Solicitor's Department providing legal services to client departments in connection with the inquiry are included in charges invoiced to departments. No dedicated units have been established in my Department.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Attorney-General what legal advice he has sought from solicitors or barristers in respect of draft conclusions reached by the Scott inquiry; what is the estimated cost of such legal expenses to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [28897]

The Attorney-General: The Government do not consider it right to publish the nature or cost of any advice which may have been given to individual witnesses to the Scott inquiry. This is a matter of confidence between them and any legal advisers they may have retained.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28643]

The Attorney-General: The reference to Crown immunity in the question is understood to refer to legislation which does not apply to the Crown. There are no areas covered by such legislation for which I have responsibility.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Pets

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice was given by Her Majesty's Government during the consideration of policy relating to the Council of Europe proposals in regard to pet animals; and what is official policy on this matter. [27916]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The United Kingdom is not a party to the Council of Europe convention for the protection of pet animals, and no decisions have been taken on whether it would be right to accede to the convention. In deciding this issue, the Government will take full account, among other considerations, of the potential consequences of the resolutions agreed at the recent multilateral consultation of parties to the convention.

Nuclear Bunkers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by location the nuclear bunkers that are still waiting to be disposed of; what is the estimated value of each bunker; and if he will list the money raised for each nuclear bunker that has been disposed of. [28264]

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Regional government headquarters still to be disposed of and their values, assessed by the appropriate district valuer's office, are as follows:

	Assessed value £
Shipton, North Yorkshire	50,000 to 200,000
Bedford	270,000
Ashdown Forest, East Sussex	200,000
Soar, Devon	40,000
Chilmark, Wiltshire	District valuer's report awaited
Bridgend, South Wales	District valuer's report awaited

Sites at the following locations have been sold on the open market for the prices indicated:

Lincoln	57,000
Loughborough	150,000
Norwich	165,000
Brentwood, Essex	151,001
Wrexham, North Wales	42,000
Preston	110,010
Nantwich, Cheshire	151,000

A site in Staffordshire and a property in Basingstoke were returned to the Ministry of Defence and to Property Holdings respectively, at no cost. A property at Rugby has been auctioned by the Ministry of Defence for £250,584 and the sale of a property at Hexham, Northumbria, for £1,200,000 has been agreed but not yet completed.

Rape

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of rape were (a) reported to the police, (b) reached court and (c) resulted in a guilty verdict in (i) 1985 and (ii) 1993. [28247]

Mr. Maclean: The available information shows that in England and Wales some 1.842 rape offences were recorded by the police in 1985, and there were 844 prosecutions and 430 convictions for rape offences in that year. The corresponding figures for 1993 are 4,589 offences, 1,704 prosecutions and 465 convictions. Information for Scotland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Police Complaints

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to repeal section 98 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984; and if he will make a statement on his assessment of the impact of section 98 on the building of public confidence in the Police Complaints Authority. [28331]

Mr. Maclean: The Government have already announced their intention to amend section 98, when a suitable legislative opportunity arises, to allow the Police Complaints Authority discretion to publish such information as is reasonably necessary to inform the public of the outcome of investigations, without derogation from the principle of confidentiality between the authority, complaints and those that provide information.

Driving without Insurance

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those people convicted of driving without insurance in each of the past three years have been (a) under 20 years of age, (b) between 20 and 30 years of age and (c) over 30 years of age; [28335]

(2) how many people have been convicted of driving without insurance in each of the last three years. [28336]

Mr. Maclean: The following table gives the available information which relates to the number of convictions for "using a motor vehicle uninsured against third party risks" in England and Wales for the years 1991 to 1993. Figures for 1994 are not yet available.

Convictions for using a motor vehicle uninsured against third party risks

Year	Total convictions	Persons aged
		Under 21	21 and over
1991	225,910	65,093	160,817
1992	246,054	62,434	183,620
1993	281,136	65,813	215,323

Television Licences

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of imprisoning television licence defaulters in the years 1985 to 1995. [28227]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. David Hanson, dated 15 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the cost of imprisoning television licence defaulters in the years 1985 to 1995.

Information on the cost of prisoners, according to their type of offence, is not collected centrally. On the basis of the number normally in custody —under 10—we estimate the costs of imprisoning these defaulters to be up to £200,000 a year.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were imprisoned in each of the last 10 years for the non-payment of fines relating to a television licence offence. [28228]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from B. Landers to Mr. David Hanson, dated 15 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many people were imprisoned in each of the last 10 years for the non-payment of fines relating to a television licence offence.

The information requested is given in the table. No information is available for the period before 1991 because the offence was not separately identified in the prison statistics.

Receptions into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales for non-payment of fine imposed for using a television without a licence, 1991 to 1994

Offence	Year

Prison Assaults

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what ministerial approval was given to the Director General of the Prison Service to change the current indicator used for recording assaults by prisoners on prison officers and other inmates from one based on adjudications for disciplinary offences to one based on the seriousness of the assault; and what assessment he has made of the effect of the change on the assault figures. [28103]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The current key performance indicator for assaults in the Prison Service has not been changed. The Prison Service's business plan for 1995–96, which was approved by my right hon. and learned Friend, explains that the Prison Service is developing proposals for new indicators of its performance for introduction in 1996–97. These will include a new measure of serious assaults as a possible replacement for the current indicator which is based on proven adjudications for disciplinary offences relating to assault. Under the terms of the Prison Service's framework document, any such change in the service's key performance indicators will be subject to agreement by the Home Secretary, the director general, the Treasury and the Office of Public Service and Science. The Prison Service will, in any event, continue to collect information about all reported assaults on staff and prisoners and disciplinary proceedings relating to such assaults.

Prison Accommodation

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors underlie the absence of a key target for the number of prisoners held two to a cell in cells designed for one person. [28080]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Mike O'Brien, dated 15 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the absence of a key target for the number of prisoners held two to a cell designed for one person.

When the Prison Service became an Agency in April 1993, it was agreed that the most serious problem relating to overcrowding was the practice of 'trebling', which involved three prisoners sharing a cell designed for one person. As recently as 1987, over five thousand prisoners were 'trebling'.

The targets set in relation to overcrowding have therefore been to eliminate trebling—which was achieved in March 1994—and to continue to avoid trebling.

However, against the background of the rapid increase in the prison population—from a low of 40,600 in December 1992 to around 51,000 now—and the need to hold unconvicted and unsentenced prisoners close to the courts—which can result in sudden uncontrollable fluctuations in the prison population in local prisons—it is neither feasible nor realistic currently to set a target for reducing the number of prisoners held two to a cell designed for one person. It is, however, a continuing priority to keep overcrowding to a minimum and to eliminate it wherever practicable.

Prisoners (HIV and AIDS)

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of HIV and AIDS have been reported in prisons in England and Wales in each year since 1986. [28005]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Neil Gerrard, dated 15 June 1995:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of cases of HIV and AIDS that have been reported in prisons in England and Wales in each year since 1986.

The information is as follows:

Year	Cases of HIV (including AIDS)	Cases of AIDS
1986	[1]48	1
1987	75	3
1988	61	3
1989	54	5
1990	59	7
1991	26	1
1992–93[2]	51	7
1993–94	27	2
1994–95	23	—
1995–96[3]	3	—

[1] Figure understates position since 27 other cases were reported in the two years 1985 and 1986, but it is not possible to assign them to a single year.
[2] 15 month period January 1992—March 1993 (to bring table in line with financial year).
[3] Figures for 1995—1996 are as at 30 May 1995.

The table represents the number of new cases of HIV infection confirmed and reported by prison medical officers. The average number of cases in the prison system in England and Wales at any one time has varied between 30 and 70. There are currently 54 prisoners known to have HIV, confirmed and reported by medical officers in the system.

These figures do not represent the totality of HIV infection in the prison system. Testing for HIV infection, as in the community, is carried out only with the consent of the prisoner.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Students

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to make students living on student grants and loans eligible to receive a full council tax and rent rebate on the same basis as people on income support. [27939]

Mr. Roger Evans: In general it is the educational maintenance system which is designed to provide support for students, not the social security system, and we have no plans to change this. However, council tax benefit and housing benefit are available to students in specified vulnerable groups such as students with dependant children and those who are disabled.

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 5 April, Official Report, column 1224, in respect of evidence of estrangement in the payment of income support to 16 and 17-year-olds, what changes his Department has requested in the practices operated by Benefits Agency officers; and what liaison he has had with the Department of Health in this respect. [28328]

Mr. Roger Evans: Expanded guidance on dealing with claims under the severe hardship provision is expected to be issued to Benefits Agency offices shortly. The purpose of the guidance is to ensure consistency across the country in respect of the proper verification of claims. The guidance is being developed in consultation with the Department of Health.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to reintroduce a mortgage benefit to assist low-income owner occupiers who are not eligible for social security help with mortgage interest payments. [28302]

Mr. Roger Evans: There has never been a mortgage benefit for low-income owner occupiers and we have no plans to introduce one.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28651]

Mr. Hague: Crown Immunity applies to the Department of Social Security and all its next steps agencies in all instances where the Crown is not included in a particular piece of legislation. Examples of this occur in the Employment Protection Consolidation Act 1978 in respect of redundancy and the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 in respect of prosecution. Where the Crown is not so included it always endeavours to follow the legislation. The Crown is included in much legislation—for example the Data Protection Act 1984—and much employment legislation. The Department also has duties by virtue of social security legislation. Whenever a new piece of legislation is drafted, the question of whether the Crown should be included is always considered.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the implications of the proposed revisions to housing benefit entitlement to those with special needs; and if he will make a statement. [28895]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 12 June, Official Report, column 420.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's latest calculation of the proportion of GDP that will be spent on his Department in 1998, 2000 and 2005, assuming no change in DSS eligibility. [27041]

Mr. Hague: The proportion of GDP that will be spent by the Department of Social Security is forecast to be:

1997–98: 11.7 per cent.

2000–2001: 11.5 per cent.

The information is not available for 2005.

(i) These figures assume constant unemployment and Departmental administrative costs and are in 1994–95 prices.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what legal advice he has sought from solicitors or barristers in respect of draft conclusions reached by the Scott inquiry; what is the estimated cost of such legal expenses to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [28898]

Mr. Lilley: The Government do not consider it right to publish the nature or costs of any advice which may have been given to individual witnesses to the Scott inquiry. This is a matter of confidence between them and any legal advisers they may have retained.

Self-employment

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidelines, excluding case law, are used by the Contributions Agency to determine whether a person is employed or self-employed. [28339]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Liability to pay a particular class of national insurance contribution is determined by reference to the law on national insurance, which generally distinguishes between employees and self-employed persons by reference to contract of service. However, the law does not define contract of service. The Contributions Agency has no legal power to determine employment status, but will investigate, consider and advise individuals and business as necessary. When doing so the agency relies on tests which have emerged from the case law of the courts over many years and applies these to the facts of the individual case concerned. These are the only guidelines which the agency uses formally to advise whether someone is employed or self-employed.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Non-human Primates

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the maximum number of non-human primates which may be quarantined within a facility; and what is the ratio of trained staff to primates at any given location and time who are capable of dealing with a filovirus outbreak. [26670]

Mrs. Browning: The maximum number of non-human primates which may be quarantined within a facility depends on the size of the facility. Each facility has a superintending veterinary surgeon or doctor who is required to inspect the animals at least once a week and to report any deaths in quarantine to the Ministry. Guidance on how to handle non-human primates safely has been prepared by the Medical Research Council and has been issued to all quarantine facilities authorised to keep non-human primates. I have placed a copy of the guidance, which is entitled "The Management of Simians in Relation to Infectious Hazards to Staff", in the Library.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on catches in each International Council for the Exploration of the Seas sub-region by each EU member's fishing fleet for each of the last five years. [27218]

Mr. Jack: Information on the uptake of quota by each member state, by stock, is provided monthly by the Commission to member states. This information is broken down by total allowable catch for each stock, whether it be by ICES sub-area or group of sub-areas. Copies of recent end year figures, as compiled by the Commission, are being placed in the Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what catch records were decided when catch shares were allocated in the ICES sub-regions; if the United Kingdom submitted catch estimates for each EU nation; if each nation submitted its own estimates; and how differences in estimates were reconciled. [27217]

Mr. Jack: The allocation keys for member states were established by reference to the catch records for the years 1973 to 1978. Each member state was responsible for its own catch records. The keys were finally established in 1983 after six years of negotiation.

Food Safety

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what money is available to each local authority to cover the expense of implementing EC directive 93/99; and from which fund it is provided; [28374]

(2) what is the average cost of retraining an unqualified trading standards officer to the level required by EC directive 93/99; [28376]

(3) what is the estimated total of (a) retraining costs and (b) redundancy costs for environmental health officers and trading standards officers affected by EC directive 93/99; [28372]

(4) how much money was (a) available to and (b) used by each local authority from the revenue support grant specifically aimed at food safety in each of the last five years; [28375]

(5) what is the average cost of retraining an unqualified environmental health officer to the level required by EC directive 93/95; [28377]

(6) what is the estimated number of environmental health officers and trading standards who will be affected by EC directive 93/99. [28373]

Mrs. Browning: Following the passage of the Food Safety Act 1990, £30 million which was indexed-linked, was added to the revenue support grant on a continuing basis to cover the extra costs arising to local authorities in discharging their responsibilities under the Act. The duties arising from the implementation of EC directive 93/99 are part of those responsibilities. The sum is not ring-fenced and it is therefore for each local authority to decide upon the exact allocation of its share of the sum towards food law enforcement activities. Directive 93/99 does not impose any new training requirements for trading standards officers and environmental health officers engaged on food work. The level of training required for their assistants who are also authorised officers under the Food Safety Act, and the associated costs, will be determined by their individual employing local authority. It is not envisaged that there will be any redundancies in either profession. The exact numbers of officers in each profession involved in food control are not held centrally.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the research funded by his Department in developing alternatives to organophosphorus sheep dip in each of the last 10 years. [28300]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is as follows:

1985–86 to 1991–92

Nil

1992–93 to 1994–95

Immunological approach to the control of sheep scab. Pesticide reduction by developing tests to monitor resistance in sheep scab mites and other ectoparasites.

1995–96

Immunological approach to the control of sheep scab. Non-chemical methods for the control of ectoparasites.

Genetically Engineered Crops

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies are available to him of the environmental impact of genetically engineered crops designed to be resistant to herbicides; and what evidence there is of potential prejudice to the environment arising from their use. [28453]

Mrs. Browning: Under the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992, the release or marketing of genetically modified organisms, including GM crops resistant to herbicides, is subject to prior consent. Applications for consent are required to be accompanied by a risk assessment. Scientific advice is given on applications by an independent committee of experts "The Advisory Committee on Releases into the Environment".

Information is also available from research programmes on the release of GM crops carried out by a number of Departments.

Available scientific information, experience to date and independent expert advice have not raised concern in terms of adverse effects on the environment from the release of GM crop plants resistant to herbicides. We will continue to rely on such information and the advice of ACRE in the review of applications to release GM organisms, including herbicide resistant crops, in order to assess their environmental impact.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what legal advice he has sought from solicitors or barristers in respect of draft conclusions reached by the Scott inquiry; what is the estimated cost of such legal expenses to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [28899]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government do not consider it right to publish the nature or costs of any advice which may have been given to individual witnesses to the Scott inquiry. This is a matter of confidence between them and any legal advisers they may have retained.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what communications he received from Lord Justice Scott over the evidence he gave to the inquiry into arms for Iraq; and what were the dates and the dates of his replies. [28866]

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Members for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) and for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 12 June, Official Report, column 373.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Creation Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many people attended and left the enterprise allowance scheme in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27455]

(2) if he will list the numbers leaving the youth training programme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27516]

(3) if he will list the numbers leaving the community enterprise programme and community programme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of that operation, including those who left before completion of the schemes; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27524]

(4) how many people attended and left the training opportunity scheme, in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27445]

(5) how many people attended and left the job training programme, in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27447]

(6) how many people attended and left the training for work scheme, in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27449]

(7) how many people attended and left the youth training scheme, in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27451]

(8) how many people attended and left the business start-up scheme in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27457]

(9) if he will list the numbers leaving the youth opportunities programme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further reemployment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27514]

(10) if he will list the numbers leaving the business enterprise support scheme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27530]

(11) if he will list the numbers leaving the employment training scheme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27526]

(12) how many people attended and left the business enterprise support scheme in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27456]

(13) if he will list the numbers leaving the training for work scheme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27513]

(14) if he will list the numbers leaving the enterprise allowance scheme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27529]

(15) how many people attended and left the youth training scheme in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27452]

(16) if he will list the numbers leaving the job training programme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he willlist the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27525]

(17) how many people attended and left the community enterprise programme and community programme in each year of their operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27446]

(18) how many people attended and left the employment training scheme in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27448]

(19) how many people attended and left the youth opportunities programme, in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme; [27450]

(20) if he will list the numbers leaving the youth training scheme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27515]

(21) if he will list the numbers leaving the training opportunity scheme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went into work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27523]

(22) if he will list the numbers leaving the business start-up scheme, as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went to work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all. [27505]

Mr. Paice: As the information is contained in a large number of tables, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Employment Subsidy Schemes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the numbers leaving the temporary employment subsidy scheme as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went to work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27506]

(2) if he will list the numbers leaving the temporary short-time working compensation scheme, as an actual number and as a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went to work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27508]

(3) if he will list the numbers attending and leaving the temporary short-time working compensation scheme, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; [27518]

(4) how many people attended and left the temporary employment subsidy scheme in each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme. [27458]

Mr. Paice: The temporary employment subsidy scheme and the temporary short-time working compensation scheme provided subsidies to firms with the objective of preventing redundancies. It was not paid in respect of individual workers, so it is difficult to identify people directly supported by the programme. Given the objective of the scheme, there was no evaluation carried out of particular individuals who were subsidised, and there is no information available on what happened when the subsidy ended. I will write to the hon. Member to give further information on the programme.

Job Release Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list the numbers leaving the job release scheme, as an actual number and a s a percentage of total leavers, for each year of its operation, including those who left before completion of the scheme; if he will indicate those who went to work, those who went into further employment schemes and those who became unemployed; and, of these, if he will list the type and level of qualification each leaver obtained, including those who failed to obtain any qualification at all; [27507]

(2) if he will list the numbers attending and leaving the job release scheme, for each year of its operation, including those who left before the completion of the scheme. [27517]

Mr. Paice: The aim of the job release scheme was to reduce the labour supply by subsidising the early withdrawal from the labour force of people who were approaching state pension age. As the objective was early retirement, no consideration was given to what happened to people after their allowance ended. I will write to the hon. Member to give further information on the programme.

Sixteen and Seventeen-year-olds

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons aged 16 and 17 years were (a) not in full-time education training or employment in each quarter since January 1988, (b) in full-time employment in each quarter since January 1988 and (c) in full-time training in each quarter since January 1988. [28120]

Mr. Paice: The information is contained in the following table. Figures are not available on a quarterly basis before spring 1992. Annual figures are available from spring 1988 to spring 1991, but they are not on the same basis as those from spring 1992 onwards.

Source: The Labour Force Survey.

[1] All estimates relate to young people aged 16 and 17 at the time of the survey.

[2] The figures comprise all those aged 16 and 17 who were not in full-time employment, not on a government employment or training programme, mainly youth training and who were not full-time students.

[3] Includes unpaid family workers.

[4] The labour force survey is known to undercount those on Government employment and training programmes.

Training Expenditure

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure on (a) employment training and (b) youth training in the year 1994–95 within the Yorkshire and Humberside area; and how many (i) males and (ii) females were on such schemes. [28256]

Mr. Paice: The latest figures available show that the total expenditure in Yorkshire and Humberside for 1994–95 for (a) training for work was £40,262,235 and for (b) youth training youth credits was £70,599,174.

Employment training was replaced by training for work in April 1993.

The latest figures available for 1994–95 show that the number of (i) males who participated in training for work was 24,925 and in youth training youth credits was 16,649; the number of (ii) females who participated in training for work was 9,516 and in youth training youth credits was 13,096.

Labour Statistics

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish each month a set of employment figures analysed in the same way as the monthly unemployment figures. [28338]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have no plans to extend the range of information about employment which is currently published monthly.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the administration cost of the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC for the year 1994–95; and what the figures were in previous years. [28272]

Mr. Paice: The administration costs of the Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council in 1994–95 will be stated in the TEC's annual accounts, which will be published shortly. Its administration costs were £1,903,000 in 1993–94 and £1,820,000 in 1992–93.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects to award the Barnsley/Doncaster TEC a three-year licence; and if he will make a statement. [28257]

Mr. Paice: As I informed the House and the hon. Member by letter on 29 November 1994, Official Report, column 639, the Barnsley and Doncaster training and Enterprise Council was one of the first 12 TECs to complete the process of meeting the rigorous standards set for the award of a three-year licence. The TEC's licence is effective from April 1995.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many successful placements the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC achieved for the year 1994–95; if he will give the number by trade; and what the figures were for previous years. [28273]

Mr. Paice: Information is not available on the number of short-term work placements trainees undertake as part of training. However, the training and enterprise council's information on the number of job outcomes from both youth and adult training shows: 3,734 job outcomes in 1994–95; 2,855 in 1993–94 and 2,937 in 1992–93. This information is not collected by trade.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the percentage change in the proportion of women as (a) chairs, (b) chief executives and (c) board members since the inception of the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC; and if he will make a statement. [28259]

Mr. Paice: The Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council board has had one female director throughout its existence, apart from the period February to August 1992. TECs are private limited companies and are free to appoint directors, including chairmen, as long as they meet the criteria set out in the agreement between the TEC and the Employment Department.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the names he holds of potential (a) chairmen and (b) chief executives for Barnsley and Doncaster TEC. [28263]

Mr. Paice: The appointment of a chairman or chief executive for the Barnsley and Doncaster training and enterprise council would be a matter for the TEC board, and the Department does not hold names of potential candidates.

International Labour Organisation

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the United Kingdom's affiliation fee to the International Labour Organisation is normally paid; and when he expects it to be paid in the current year. [28580]

Miss Widdecombe: The United Kingdom's subscription to the International Labour Organisation is normally paid before the end of the calendar year to which it applies. The current year's subscription should normally therefore be paid by December 1995.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what will be the cost to public funds of the Confederation of British Industry delegation attendance at the International Labour Organisation annual meeting in the current year. [28581]

Miss Widdecombe: The cost to public funds is estimated to be £18,000.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what will be the cost to public funds of the Government delegation's attendance at the International Labour Organisation annual meeting in the current year. [28582]

Miss Widdecombe: The cost of sending the Government delegation to the International Labour conference this year is estimated to be £22,000.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the 16 hours per week that students on benefit are allowed to study while being supervised by a tutor under the jobseeker's allowance can be averaged out over a number of weeks. [28160]

Miss Widdecombe: People claiming jobseeker's allowance will be able to undertake part-time courses provided they remain available for, and actively seeking, employment. In the case of courses funded by the Further Education Funding Council, the threshold will be 16 guided learning hours per week. This is designed to allow the same number of people to study while claiming benefit as do so now.

A number of detailed issues are still being considered. One of these is the question of whether the number of guided learning hours will be averaged out over a period. Our proposals will be laid before the House in regulations.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list (a) the profits or losses incurred and (b) the reserves of each training and enterprise council in each of the last three years. [28859]

Mr. Paice: The following tables list (a) the profits or losses incurred and (b) the accumulated reserves of each English training and enterprise council at the end of the financial years 1991–92, 1992–93 and 1993–94.

The figures are those shown in the audited statutory accounts lodged at Companies House.

The turnover of individual TECs varies considerably therefore comparison between TECs is not possible.

WALES

Welsh Language

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the Welsh population speaks Welsh. [28442]

Mr. Richards: Some 21.5 per cent. spoke Welsh in 1992 according to the 1992 Welsh social survey. Further information is available in "1992 Welsh Social Survey: Report on the Welsh Language", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will lay before Parliament guidelines for the preparation of language schemes under the Welsh Language Act 1993, and if he will make a statement. [28475]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend has approved the draft guidelines prepared by the Welsh Language Board without amendment and they were laid before Parliament on Friday 9 June.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many written parliamentary questions were tabled for answer by his Department in each of the past five years; how many of these were not answered because the information (a) could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, (b) was not held centrally or (c) was not normally disclosed; how many of these could now be answered now due to computerisation, more effective and efficient operational systems or more open government; and if he will list each question along with the name and constituency of the right hon. or hon. Member who originally tabled it. [28505]

Mr. Redwood: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of parliamentary questions, which would have been answered directly by him or his Ministers prior to the establishment of executive agencies, are now referred to the chief executive of such an agency. [28485]

Mr. Redwood: Ministers are accountable to Parliament for the policy of their agencies and accounting officer for financial regularity. Written parliamentary questions concerning matters which have been delegated to the chief executive of an executive agency in its framework document, normally receive a reply from the Minister to the effect that he or she has asked the chief executive to reply direct to the Member by letter. The chief executive's letter is published in Hansard after the Minister's reply.

Special Areas of Conservation

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amount of public funds spent in promoting the designation and protection of special areas of consultation in coastal and intertidal areas for the last three years in constant prices; what is his estimate for such spending during the next three financial years; if funding for special areas of consultation within coastal and intertidal areas will permit the United Kingdom to adhere to the European habitats and species directive; and if he will make a statement. [28211]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Marine and intertidal special areas of conservation have not been separately funded. For the purpose of disseminating information relating to these areas, the Countryside Council for Wales had convened meetings of relevant authorities and interested parties and has issued a separate information booklet about marine areas during the recent consultation exercise.

The funding is sufficient to enable the UK to adhere to the European habitats directive.

Tir Cymen

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what public funds are spent on the Tir Cymen for each available year since its inception; and what is the planned spending for the next three available years, giving the figures in constant prices. [28212]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The spending on Tir Cymen since its inception in 1992 is as follows:

1992–93: £600,000
1993–94: £2,100,000
1994–95: £3,400,000
1995–96: £4,000,000 (estimated)

It is not possible at this stage to estiamte levels of expenditure on the scheme after the current financial year.

Mr. Cynog Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the results of the Tir Cymen scheme; if all farmers in Wales will be eligible to take part in the Tir Cymen scheme once responsibility is transferred from the Countryside Council for Wales to the Welsh Office; and if he will make a statement. [28213]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The pilot phase was launched in July 1992 and is planned to run for five years. A decision on the future of the scheme will follow a thorough evaluation exercise later in its term.

Conservation Sites

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate what person or body will be given the responsibility for identifying and overseeing the conservation of sites of international importance following implementation of reorganisation plans for the Countryside Council for Wales. [28214]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This function will continue to be the responsibility of the Countryside Council for Wales, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales recently made available an additional £100,000 for this purpose.

Wet Grassland

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the area of wet grasslands in Wales for the latest available five years; what estimates he has made of the area of wet grassland for the next five years; what plans he has to encourage farmers to (a) conserve existing wet grassland and (b) recreate former grasslands; and if he will make a statement. [28215]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Annual statistics are not available, but figures can be derived from the Welsh phase 1 habitat survey and from a vegetation survey of the Welsh uplands carried out in the 1980s. Marshy grassland is generally widely distributed throughout lowland and upland Wales where soil moisture levels permits the development of juncus and molina pastures. There are approximately 24,000 hectares of this habitat present in lowland Wales, with a further 40,000 hectares in the uplands. Farmers are encouraged to conserve and recreate wet grassland through entry into an environmentally sensitive area, Tir Cymen or habitat scheme.

First impression of the numbers of farmers applying to join the habitat scheme indicate that large areas of wet grassland habitat will be both maintained and enhanced in future.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made in (a) hectares and (b) acres of the amount of rural land lost to agriculture or conservation since 1965 at five-yearly intervals, indicating this as a percentage of (i) the area of land used for agriculture and (ii) the total land surface of Wales. [28216]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No estimates of the amount of rural land lost to agriculture or conservation are available centrally. Estimates of the change in the total amount of land used for agriculture are shown in the following table:

Net change in agricultural land

	Net change in		Net change as a percentage of
	(a) hectares	(b) acres	(i) land used for agriculture	(ii) the total area of Wales
1965–70	–35,425	–87,534	–2.1	–1.7
1970–75	–11,100	–27,430	–0.7	–0.5
1975–80	17,130	42,329	1.0	0.8
1980–85	1,323	3,269	0.1	0.1
1985–90	–658	–1,626	–0.0	–0.0
1990–94[1]	–4,206	–10,393	–0.2	–0.2

[1] Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations have been made to him by the board of the Countryside Council for Wales requesting additional moneys to ensure it meets its statutory obligations; and if he will make a statement. [28476]

Mr. Redwood: I am satisfied, as is the Countryside Council for Wales, that it has sufficient funds to fulfil its statutory duties. Written requests for additional funding were made on 27 February and 9 March. These requests were discussed fully in a meeting I held on 24 May with the chairman and chief executive of the Countryside Council for Wales. At the meeting, I asked the council to further reduce its overheads and to come forward with imaginative schemes using new technology to encourage home working. I have said that £325,000 of capital is available for a suitable scheme. In addition, I have also made available an extra £200,000 for new work to be undertaken on the EC habitats directive and on a study into the effects of overgrazing in Wales. The council has agreed to reduce its overheads by £1.96 million this year.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment his Department has made about the likely costs of a Welsh Assembly; on what assumptions such work has been based; and if he will place a copy of all studies in the Library. [28892]

Mr. Redwood: My Department did not work out the costs of the proposals for a Welsh Assembly—I did. The Welsh Office has told me what the costs of employing people at the Welsh Office are.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what work the Welsh Office has undertaken on a Welsh Assembly since 1979; and if he will place a copy of all studies in the Library. [28891]

Mr. Redwood: No studies or other substantive work on the possibility of a Welsh Assembly have been carried out by the Welsh Office since 1979.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place a copy of his calculation of the cost of a Welsh Assembly in the Library. [28893]

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the information I put out in my press notice last Friday, 9 June 1995.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what independent advice his Department has sought on the costs of a Welsh Assembly. [28890]

Mr. Redwood: My Department has taken no independent advice on the costs of the current proposals for a Welsh Assembly.

EstateCare Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the proposed feasibility study for the privatisation of the EstateCare Group of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority was submitted to him; and if he will make a statement. [28635]

Mr. Redwood: The report by Touche Ross was submitted to my Department on 1 June 1995.

NHS Performance Tables

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of (a) the publication and (b) the official launching of the NHS performance tables on 4 July. [28636]

Mr. Redwood: The estimated expenditure on publishing and launching the 1995 NHS performance tables is £23,000.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 8 June, Official Report, columns 289–90, what representations he has had from the Member of the European Commission responsible for regional development concerning the use of (a) grant-in-aid and (b) the regional development fund in resourcing the Welsh Development Agency; if he will place a copy of the correspondence between the Commission, the Welsh Development Agency and himself on this issue in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [28664]

Mr. Redwood: The chairman of the Welsh Development Agency has received a letter from an official of the European Commission asking a number of questions about the agency's participation in European development programmes. The Commission has been informed that my Department will be replying to these inquiries in due course. Subject to the agreement of the Commission, I shall arrange for a copy of its letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all areas within (a) his Department, (b) agencies under his Department's control and (c) organisations for which he has ministerial responsibility to which Crown immunity applies; what consideration he has given to removing this; and if he will make a statement. [28647]

Mr. Redwood: An Act of Parliament is presumed not to bind the Crown unless the contrary intention is clearly stated, or there is a necessary implication that the Crown is to be bound. Ministers and civil servants will not necessarily share the Crown's immunity from criminal prosecution.

The Government policy on Crown immunity, as set out in Cm 1599, "The Citizen's Charter—Raising the Standard", is that Crown immunity is being progressively reduced as legislative opportunities arise. In the meantime, Crown bodies are expected to behave as though they were bound by regulations.

Prescription Pricing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the corporate structure and legal basis proposed under the bid by the Prescription Pricing Authority (England) to supply the prescription pricing service in Wales via the current market testing exercise. [28856]

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Health Common Services Authority has invited the Prescription Pricing Authority and four other organisations to submit bids to supply prescription pricing and checking services in Wales. Bids are expected later this month. It is for the PPA to satisfy WHCSA that it has the legal basis to take on this work and I understand that WHCSA has asked the PPA to confirm this.

Psychiatric Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date each of the health authorities and trusts responsible for community services last supplied information to him pertaining to the regular medical audit of psychiatric services. [28659]

Mr. Redwood: My Department does not monitor audit activity to this level of detail. Medical audit is a professionally led activity, and is an issue for NHS trusts and local purchasers.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how frequently he requires the psychiatric services of each community health care trust and health authority in Wales to be submitted to medical audit; and how frequently he requires each trust and authority to apply comprehensive information to his Department for that purpose. [28660]

Mr. Redwood: Hospital doctors are required to regularly review and audit their activities. In addition, health authorities and NHS trusts can agree on programmes of audit and reflect that agreement in their contracts. NHS trusts are not required to submit information of this kind to the Department, although the Department does support projects that promote effective audit.

University Hospital of Wales—A48 Link Road

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made for meeting councillors and officers of South Glamorgan and Cardiff city council to discuss the funding arrangements for the Eastern avenue flyover access directly into the University hospital of Wales site, Heath, Cardiff. [28661]

Mr. Redwood: My officials are continuing discussions with the relevant parties.

EC Urban Initiative

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had concerning the number of applications he will be forwarding from Wales to the European Commission under the urban initiative; when he expects a further round of urban initiative applications; and if he will make a statement. [28638]

Mr. Redwood: None. At present, I have no plans to invite additional applications for the urban initiative. The European Commission requested one bid for Wales and I have selected Swansea city council's application for Townhill. Negotiations have commenced and approval is currently scheduled for July.

SCOTLAND

Antanas Gecas

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what factors led the Lord Advocate not to pursue the prosecution of Antanas Gecas. [25621]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is not the normal practice of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate to disclose the names of individuals who may have been under investigation. Allegations that persons living in Scotland were responsible for war crimes committed during the second world war were investigated by a specialised Crown Office unit formed in 1991. The results of those investigations were reported to Crown counsel, who decided in 1994 that there was not at that time sufficient available evidence for a criminal prosecution in any of the cases reported to it. That remains the position.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what external legal advice has been (a) sought and (b) received in respect of parliamentary approval for the payment of practice management expenses by GP fundholders. [27016]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 6 June 1995]: No such advice was sought or received.

A76

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the volume of traffic on each identifiable stretch of the A76 for comparable periods during the past five years. [27377]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the following table. It has been supplied from records extracted from various automatic traffic counters located on the route in question. Due to the nature of the counting "regimes" of Dumfries and Galloway regional council and of Strathclyde regional council, which manage the counters on behalf of the Scottish Office, there is little continuous counting. The table therefore does not contain data for all stretches for all years and reflects some seasonal variation. However, examination of some of the more permanent sites suggest that the variation is not significant. The Scottish Office published in October of last year a pamphlet on the on-going A76 route action plan.

Prisons

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of receptions of young people to prison for 1994 shown by (a) sex, (b) age, (c) offence, (d) institution and (e) whether remand or sentenced. [27673]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Michael Connarty dated 15 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of receptions of young people to prison for 1994 by sex, age, offence, institution and whether remand or sentenced.

Table 1 enclosed with this letter shows remand receptions by sex and by establishment. Information on the types of offences allegedly committed by—or the individual ages of—those received on remand is not collected centrally.

Information on sentenced receptions is shown in the age groups under 16, 16–17 and 18–20 (where appropriate). Tables 2A and 2I set out information in relation to direct receptions from court and Tables 3A to 3L in respect of receptions for final default. As regards Tables 2A and 3A on females, the only all female establishment is Cornton Vale. In addition to the female receptions shown in these tables there were five others: one direct and three fine defaulter receptions to Dumfries and one fine defaulter reception to Inverness. Sentenced receptions are defined as follows. Where a person has several custodial sentences imposed on him by one court in one day this is counted as a reception. However, where custodial sentences are imposed on a person by two or more courts in one day, two receptions are recorded. Also, if a person is reconvicted while serving a custodial sentence and a further custodial sentence is imposed, this is also regarded as a reception.

Remand and sentenced receptions cannot be added together to produce a total receptions figure due to some double-counting. For example, if an individual is first received untried or convicted awaiting sentence and is subsequently awarded a custodial sentence, there will be two receptions relating to this individual's time in prison—appearing both as a remand and sentenced reception.

As the information requested is rather lengthy I have arranged for a copy of the tables to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of prison receptions in each year from 1990 by sex and offence. [27670]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Michael Connarty, dated 15 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of prison receptions in each year from 1990 by sex and offence.

I attach two tables which provide the information in relation to sentenced receptions, showing direct receptions from court and receptions for fine default separately. Sentenced receptions are defined as follows. Where a person has several custodial sentences imposed on him by one court in one day this is counted as a reception. However, where custodial sentences are imposed on a person by two or more courts in one day, two receptions are recorded. Also, if a person is reconvicted while serving a custodial sentence and a further custodial sentence is imposed, this is also regarded as a reception.

Information on the types of offence allegedly committed by those received on remand is not collected centrally, but remand receptions were as follows:

Remand and sentenced receptions cannot be added together to produce a total receptions figure due to some double-counting. For example, if an individual is first received untried or convicted awaiting sentence and is subsequently awarded a custodial sentence, there will be two receptions relating to this individual's time in prison—appearing both as a remand and sentenced reception.

[1] Information for 1994 is provisional.

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the prison population in Scotland in each year since 1990 by sex and offence. [27674]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Michael Connarty dated 15 June 1995:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the prison population in Scotland in each year since 1990 by sex and offence.

Information by offence is not available in relation to the average daily prison population. Details of offence type are only collected on reception following sentence. The table below provides information on the average daily prison population by sex for the years 1990–1994.

Average daily population in Scottish penal establishments by sex

Year	Male	Female	Total
1990	4,587	137	4,724
1991	4,696	143	4,839
1992	5,099	158	5,257
1993	5,466	171	5,637
1994	5,408	177	5,585

Miscarriages of Justice

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of alleged miscarriages of justice his Department has considered in each of the last 10 years; and what action has been taken in each case. [27990]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of cases in respect of which representations were received by my right hon. Friend are as follows:

1984: 54
1985: 43
1986: 61
1987: 61
1988: 46
1989: 60
1990: 39
1991: 54
1992: 58
1993: 52
1994: 30

Eighteen cases are at present under consideration. Seven cases were referred by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the Court of Appeal under section 263(1) of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act 1975. Petitions were refused in all other cases.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of alleged miscarriages of justice he has referred to the Court of Appeal in each of the past 10 years; and with what result. [277991]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has referred seven cases, relating to eight persons, to the Court of Appeal during the past 10 years. The number of cases in each year and the outcome of the subsequent appeals are set out in the table:

Year of referral	Number of cases referred (persons)	Outcome of appeal
1984	—	—
1985	—	—
1986	1(1)	Conviction quashed
1987	—	—
1988	1(1)	Conviction quashed
1989	1(1)	Conviction quashed
1990	—	—
1991	1(2)	Appeals dismissed
1992	1(1)	Amended verdict of guilty substituted
1993	2(2)	Appeal dismissed/appeal abandoned
1994	—	—

Rape

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of rape were (a) reported to the police, (b) reached court and (c) resulted in a guilty verdict in (i) 1985 and (ii) 1993. [28245]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the number of cases of rape reported to the police is not collected centrally. The available information is given in the following table:

Number of offences of rape recorded by the police, persons called to court where the main charge was rape and those with a main charge of rape proved in Scotland[1]

Year	Number of offences recorded by the police	Persons called to court[2]	Persons with a charge proved[2]
1985	248	76	39
1993	339	78	40

[1] Cases of attempted rape are included in the above table but cases of assault with intent to rape or ravish are not included.
[2] For persons called to court and with a charge proved only those cases where the main charge was rape are included in the table; all recorded cases of rape are counted even where rape is not the main offence.

Sheriff Courts

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current position in relation to the review committee chaired by Sheriff Principal Gordon Nicholson into how the programming of business in the sheriff courts could be improved. [28574]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Following an initial report on the programming of business in the sheriff courts, a number of pilot schemes have been introduced and the results of these, with the implications for court programming of new legislative provisions, are shortly to be reviewed by the group under the chairmanship of Sheriff Principal Gordon Nicholson QC.

Hire Vehicles

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what legislation and regulations govern the operation of public hire vehicles at Scotland's airports; what measures are in place to ensure that operators and/or drivers cannot, by whatever means, refuse to transport passengers on the grounds that the journey is too short or too local; and if he will make a statement. [28527]

Mr. Kynoch: Taxis and private hire vehicles operating at airports may require a licence from the appropriate district or islands council under sections 10 to 23 of the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982 and a permit under airport byelaws drawn up by the airport operator. The terms and conditions of the licences and permits may vary accordingly to area. If the hon. Member has a particular area in mind he may wish to pursue the matter with the relevant authorities. In the case of Glasgow airport, the authorities would be Renfrew district council and the British Airports Authority.

Local Government Finance

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the amount of (a) revenue support grant and (b) aggregate external finance allocated to each district council on a per capita basis in the current financial year; if he will explain the formulae which resulted in this calculation; and if he will make a statement. [28537]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is set out in the following table. An explanation of how the amounts payable to each authority in 1995–96 were determined is set out in the report to the Local Government Finance (Scotland) Order 1995, copies of which are in the Library.

Scottish Homes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last discussed Her Majesty's Government's policy on the concepts of democracy and accountability with the chairman and chief executive of Scottish Homes; what was the result of these discussions; and if he will make a statement. [28569]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I meet the board of Scottish Homes from time to time to discuss a range of issues. I shall next be meeting the board on 4 September. Scottish Homes is accountable to my right hon. Friend and, through him, to the House.

Johnstone Bypass

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many road accidents have occurred on the Johnstone bypass since it was opened; how many of these accidents have been fatal; how many have involved serious or critical injury; what assessment he has made of the reasons for the incidence of accidents on this stretch of road; what plans he has to take measures to reduce the potential accident risk; what discussions he has had with Strathclyde regional council on this subject; and if he will make a statement. [28528]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There have been 10 accidents, involving 15 casualties, on the Johnstone bypass since it opened to traffic in May 1993. Four accidents resulted in six fatalities and five accidents resulted in nine serious or slight injuries. Responsibility for the Johnstone bypass, including all road safety matters, rests with the local roads authority, in this case Strathclyde regional council. I understand that the regional council is actively monitoring the route and has already made a number of modifications to reduce the risk of accidents on the road.

Health Trusts and Boards

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what age restrictions exist on membership of health trusts and boards. [27596]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no formal age restrictions on membership of health boards and NHS trusts.

Public Offices

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to set uniform age limits for the holding of all public offices appointed by him. [27597]

Mr. Lang: I have no such plans. Appointments are made on merit and suitability, regardless of age.

Gateside School for the Deaf

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the importance of the role performed by the Gateside school for the deaf in Renfrewshire and its future. [28556]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Gateside school makes a valuable contribution to provision for the special educational needs of hearing-impaired children in Strathclyde region. The management of all its schools, including Gateside school, is in the first instance a matter for Strathclyde regional council. After local government reorganisation, it will be for the new Renfrewshire council, and for the other two councils whose schools are currently served by the staff based at Gateside school, to determine how to discharge their statutory duties towards children with special educational needs resulting from hearing impairment in their areas. I am sure that the new councils will recognise the advantages offered by existing and new opportunities for effective and efficient co-operation.

Raymond Gilmour

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of the application on behalf of Raymond Gilmour for the exercise of the prerogative of mercy; and when he expects to reach his conclusion. [28557]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to my replies of 6 March, Official Report, columns 86–87 and of 21 April, Official Report, column 215. Inquiries into the matters raised on Mr. Gilmour's behalf are continuing.

Ferguslie Park Partnership

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) names, (b) civil service posts, (c) designations and (d) specific duties of each member of staff who (1) is or (2) has been seconded by the Scottish Office on a whole-time or part-time basis to the Ferguslie park partnership or any of its offshoots or associated companies, trusts, bodies or organisations since its establishment; and if he will make a statement. [28560]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Two members of Scottish office staff are presently on secondment to the Ferguslie park partnership and a further two have completed period of secondment at the partnership. Their details are as follows:

Scottish Hospices

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact of the national lottery on fund raising by Scottish hospices; and if he will make a statement. [28558]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish partnership agency for palliative and cancer care is keeping this under review. A representative of the Scottish Office attends meetings of the agency.

Security Companies

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received (a) supporting and (b) opposing the registration of security companies; and if he will make a statement. [28559]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has received no specific representations on this issue. As the hon. Gentleman will know, the Home Affairs Select Committee has recently published a report on the private security industry. Although the report applies only to the security industry in England and Wales, we will give careful consideration to its conclusions and recommendations.

Unitary Authorities (Chief Executives)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (i) name, (ii) salary and (iii) previous occupation of each chief executive so far appointed by unitary authorities in Scotland; if he will list those unitary authorities which have still to appoint; and if he will make a statement. [28561]

Mr. Kynoch: Chief executives—strictly speaking, heads of paid service—have now been appointed to all of the new Scottish councils. The information requested, including that for the three islands areas, is listed in the following table:

Illicit Drugs

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what immediate action he proposes to take to deal with the introduction of new forms of illicit drugs; what resources he will make available to the relevant authorities to stop the use of such drugs at an early stage; what action will be taken against these convicted of dealing in this trade; and if he will make a statement. [28562]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 provides a framework for controlling new or existing drugs liable to be misused. Substantial resources are being committed to action against drug misuse across a range of services, thus facilitating the concerted and vigorous response recommended in the report of the Scottish drugs task force, led by my noble and learned friend the Minister of State. Those convicted of trafficking in drugs will be sentenced by the courts according to the nature of the offence and the class of drug involved.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about progress on construction of trunk road schemes during 1994–95 and those schemes the Government propose to start in Scotland in the next three years. [29410]

Mr. Lang: We continue to make good progress towards the achievement of a safe, high quality trunk road network providing benefits to the whole of Scotland. The programme I am announcing today continues our strategy of upgrading the key routes of major economic importance to Scotland's future and the emphasis we have directed to upgrading the A74 to motorway, the completion of the central Scotland motorway and near-motorway network, and the upgrading of the A1.

The schemes with an estimated cost of more than £3 million each which, subject to schemes satisfying the usual value-for-money criteria, with satisfactory completion of statutory procedures and the necessary preparatory work, are expected to start between April 1995 and March 1998 are:

M6: Paddy's Rickle to Cleuchbrae
M8: Newhouse to Shotts
M8: Bailiston to Newhouse phase 1
A9: Logie Easter to Garrick Bridge
A830: Loch Nan Uamh to Polnish Bridge
A96: Kintore bypass
M8: Newbridge interchange
A1: Haddington to Dunbar
A830: Arisaig to Kinsadel
A68: Dalkeith bypass
M77: Fenwick to B764 (Floak)
M90: Halbeath interchange

This is an ambitious programme requiring substantial levels of investment. The schemes have a total cost of more than £330 million. The Government see an increasing role for private sector finance and management skills in the trunk road business and, accordingly, I have decided that the M6 Paddy's Rickle to Cleuchbrae project will be subject to a tender competition to identify a private consortium to design, build, finance and operate this scheme, which will include taking over the maintenance responsibility for the entire length of upgraded road between Millbank and the Scottish border. That tender competition will start in the summer and it will be a major opportunity for the private sector to increase its involvement in the trunk road business. It shall ensure that the full upgrade of the motorway will be complete by 2000. I am exploring with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport how this strategy might also address the completion of the remaining section of the M6 south of the Scottish border.

My decision to invite the private sector to design, build, finance and operate the scheme is a significant example of how the attraction of private finance can complement public provision. We shall continue actively to explore the potential for further opportunities.

We shall also seek tenders for the first phase of the Baillieston-Newhouse project on the M8 to upgrade and widen the sole remaining non-motorway section of the Edinburgh to Glasgow route in line with long-standing commitments. The three successive phases of the scheme will be complete by 2002. The M8 is the principal link between Scotland's two major cities, and several areas of significant industrial and commercial importance are situated along it. The overall condition of this vital artery must be considered most carefully to ensure that it continues to be able to cater for the ever increasing demands made of it. We shall in the course of this year initiate a detailed study to examine a robust strategy for its refurbishment and upgrading. As a first step in this process, we shall shortly seek tenders for a major contract to reconstruct and upgrade the section between Shotts and Newhouse.

Our programme now includes the commitments I made in relation to the network around the firth of Forth in my announcement earlier this year on the "Setting Forth" proposals—the improvements to the junctions at M8 Newbridge and M90 Halbeath.

Our major construction activity is directed by our primary objective to upgrade Scotland's internal and external motorway links, which are vital to the continuing success of our economy. This is complemented by our continuing commitment to the improvement of the trunk road network elsewhere. During the next three years, I shall devote resources totalling well over £200 million to a range of improvements and continuing maintenance, which will improve the service offered to travellers and increase road safety. The interests of local communities near trunk roads are also being directly addressed in this programme. During the coming year, the work will see important local improvement schemes on the A1 south of Dunbar, the A90 between Perth and Dundee and the A7 south of Hawick, all as part of route action plans carefully designed to put resources where they will secure the greatest benefit. The A76 Kilmarnock to Dumfries route and the A77 will also benefit from such improvements, including traffic calming measures and village gateways. We continue to develop schemes and measures to address urgent needs throughout the network including the A75 and the A96.

I wish also to report on the substantial progress we have made during 1994–95. Fifteen schemes—each with a cost of more than £3 million—were either completed or under way, representing a total investment in excess of £380 million. They include nine separate schemes contributing to the upgrade of the A74. More than two thirds of the upgraded M74 will be open to traffic by the end of this year. Construction of the M8 extension between Newbridge and the Edinburgh city bypass scheme is also well advanced and should be open this year. Construction also continues on the privately financed Skye bridge, scheduled to open in the autumn, the M77 and the A1 Tranent to Haddington.

The schemes completed in 1994–95, and their costs, were as follows:

M74—Maryville to Fullarton road: £44 million

A830—Morar bypass: £9 million

M6—Cleuchbrae to Dinwoodie Green: £24 million

M6—Dinwoodie Green to Muirhouse: £19 million

M6—Muirhouse to Water of Milk: £39 million

M6—Water of Milk to Ecclefechan: £27 million

M6—Ecclefechan to Eaglesfield phase 1: £15 million

As I announced recently, we are also proceeding with the proposals set out in "Competing For Better Roads", which aim to improve the delivery of maintenance across the trunk road network, through the introduction of private sector management expertise, financial skills and innovative contractual methods.

Taken altogether, this package is very good news indeed for Scotland's road industry and for the users of Scotland's trunk roads.

Sewerage Charges

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any assistance will be given to domestic consumers when separate charges for domestic sewerage are introduced in 1996–97. [29411]

Mr. Kynoch: At present, local authority expenditure on domestic sewerage is one of the items which make up a householder's council tax bill. It is not easy for householders to work out how much they pay towards the service. That is why we are publishing a leaflet about water and sewerage costs in 1995–96, following the leaflet sent out last year. The leaflet will be distributed to all householders during the next few weeks.

The cost to households for domestic sewerage will be clearer from 1 April 1996, when there will be a separate charge set by the new water and sewerage authority that delivers the service. Only those connected to the public sewerage system will be liable to pay.

As stated during the passage of the Local Government Etc. (Scotland) Act 1994, we intend to see that the change in the financing of domestic sewerage will not of itself produce any increase in the aggregate of council tax and water services bill between 1995–96 and 1996–97. Accordingly, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will make regulations under section 81 of the 1994 Act to reduce charges for domestic sewerage set by the three new public water and sewerage authorities in 1996–97. This transitional relief scheme will be financed by an adjustment to the level of aggregate external finance funding of local authority expenditure. The amount of help we will give will be shown on individual consumers' bills. The full charge will be phased in over a period of time.

Medical Negligence

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all current alleged medical negligence cases against the NHS by (a) type of allegation and (b) length of time waiting for settlement. [23303]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 16 May 1995]: The number of medical negligence cases against the NHS currently totals 1,195. Information on the type of allegation is not collected centrally.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 261

SESSION 1994–95

6th June—15th June 1995

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
